Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $110

Centering in Action / Bob Kriegel

The purpose of this workshop is to show that there is nothing mysterious, mystical, or devotional about centering—the process of tuning into that place of inner strength and wisdom from which we experience more of our possibilities and potential.

To experience centering we will play active games of all types, invent new ones, and practice exercises from yoga, aikido, t'ai chi, and sensory awareness.

We will use gestalt awareness, visualization, and psychosynthesis techniques to bring the insights gained in these activities to a more conscious level and to transfer them into our daily lives. $120

Hypnosis & Parapsychology / Lee Pulos

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lecturettes explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $120

Week of July 9-14

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

This workshop will include massage and dancing, exploring the rituals of Black disco dancing in contemporary American society. High-low energy, sensual and sexual, rhythm and syncopation, hand clapping, foot stomping, using African drums, we will use our voices and prerecorded popular Black music. $290

Gestalt Practice
Richard & Christine Price & the Esalen Staff

For workshop description see April 23–28. $290

Adventures in Self-Exploration
Stanislav Grof & Christina Grof

Focused self-exploration in this workshop will be based on the model of the unconscious that emerged from psychedelic research. It includes not only biographically determined areas but also the dynamics of the death-rebirth process and transpersonal experiences. We will use a combination of music and guided affective imagery, mandala drawing, yoga, massage and individual work when indicated. $290

July 9–16
Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be
David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $410

Weekend of July 14-16

Gestalt, Psychosynthesis & Encounter: An Experiential Training Workshop / Beverly Silverman

We will work with basic simple concepts and techniques. The emphasis is on the integral relationship between individual process and group process. My concern is with developing a way of being in which one's senses are open and one's style of contacting others is flexible. $120

Inner Love / Simone Surpin

In each of us exists a place where we can merge in and with a certain kind of love: a love that is the source of our inner being; a love that is not dependent on something outside of itself for sustenance; a love that renews and clears our vision of ourselves and of others.

As purely and as simply as possible, we will attempt to explore and experience this state; to touch these experiences with our minds and share them outside ourselves.

We will meditate, chant, do gentle body work practices, and learn about energy flows. Each session will be a blend of both didactic and experiential work. Some time will also be taken for silent walks together in the country. $120

Fear, Panic & Vulnerability to Crisis / Donald Lindsay, MD

This workshop is about handling fear in ourselves and in others in emergency and crisis situations. It is for nurses, physicians and other health professionals. There will be a session at the Esalen baths. Participation earns 10 hours continuing education credit. Enrollment is limited. $120

Esalen Institute—An Approved Provider

The Board of Registered Nursing in the State of California has approved Esalen Institute as a provider of Continuing Education for Registered Nurses. Provider Number 01152

In accordance with Section 2811.5 of the California Nurse Practice Act, previously referred to as AB 3017, Registered Nurses must submit proof of attendance of continuing education to obtain license renewal. Thirty hours of continuing education are required every two years. For instance, if a nursing license expires April, 1978, the nurse must attend 30 hours of continuing education before March 30, 1980. Esalen is offering nurses the opportunity to meet this requirement in an evolving and attuned environment.

A certificate will be given to each nurse completing the approved workshops. The following workshops will be offered for Continuing Education Units:

April 7—9
Fear, Panic & Vulnerability to Crisis / Janet Lederman & Donald Lindsay, MD
For workshop description see page 13. 10 units

June 18—23
Live Better Longer / Donald Lindsay, MD
For workshop description see page 27. 30 units

July 14—16
Fear, Panic & Vulnerability to Crisis
Donald Lindsay, MD
For workshop description see page 30. 10 units

Esalen has also filed application with the California Medical Association to provide programs offering continuing education credit for physicians. If you have any questions about Esalen's medical or nursing program, contact Donald Lindsay, MD, Coordinator of Continuing Medical Education, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

Lomi Work: An Exploration of the Body/Mind/Spirit Through Awareness David Kessler

For workshop description see April 16—21. $120

Week of July 23-28

A Workshop for Couples of All Kinds / Betty Fuller

This is a workshop for couples to enhance the quality of their relationships: to experience alienation, estrangement, distrust, domination and suspicion; to explore verbal and non-verbal ways to nurture, support, assist and grant space for each other to be as natural results of love and trust. We deal specifically with emotion, sex, communication, money, power, children, other partners, and mom and dad. This workshop is so designed that participants may do the weekend and the five day or either one. The longer workshop allows time for massage at the baths. $290 per person

A Week with Will Schutz

Self & Beyond / John Zeigler

A body/mind/spirit integration can emerge when you experience the polarities of your personality and question all beliefs and attachments. Self-discovery, self-awareness and self-responsibility are the workshop themes since, if you know your self, you will know the universe. Intensive individual gestalt and body work for deep emotional/energy release, massage, and "No-Fault Communication," a positive and supportive encounter technique, will heighten contact with the self, the group, and the natural wonders of the Esalen environment. $290

Sexism & Sexuality: For Men & Women Jacqueline Larcombe Doyle

Esalen has long been experienced as a permission-giving environment, sought by many as context in the quest or re-discovery of their sexuality. This training group provides an opportunity for a renewing personal experience coupled with professional enrichment for those interested in increasing basic sex counseling skills. The group will provide safety and support for an exploration toward resolution of these issues in our own lives, paying particular attention to the impact of sexist attitudes on sexuality. We will focus on the establishment of power relationships; on the roles of competition, jealously, time and space. Through experience and action, we will explore the social and cultural influences on choices in the expression of this creative life force. $290

The Celebration of Nature / Michael Tierra (Ananta)

The emphasis will be on using the methods of herbs, massage, chanting, movement, meditation, and balanced diet for physical cleansing and balancing. We will demonstrate the use of herbs as generators of health and creativity. We will learn how to make special teas, soups, baths, and fomentations using herbs which we will gather. In addition we will use clay and herbal oils to anoint ourselves, helping to free old blocks and tensions. As a rhythmic and melodic complement we will utilize the sounds and chants of nature from the African, East Indian and American Indian traditions with appropriate dance-like movements to give fuller expression to our being. We will take walks together to discover the wild herbs and trees which we can use, if we so desire, as both medicine and food. $290

Weekend of July 28-30

Awareness Through Movement & Functional Integration: The Feldenkrais Method / Mia Segal

Through a series of simple, gentle exercises devised by Moshe Feldenkrais we will learn more about how our bodies work and explore new possibilities of movement. $120

Couples Group / Will Schutz

This workshop is for couples who wish to clarify their relationship—that is, either make it more joyful or terminate it. Each member of each couple should be prepared to be completely truthful or else there is not much point to attending. Humor is allowed. $120 per person

For workshop description see page 15. $110

Your Characters in Search of an Author / John Argue

Each of us is many people. Some of these people are authentic—that is, true expressions of our essence. Some are phony, merely roles we play. We will attempt to learn the difference, to dis-identify with our phony roles (or to keep them and frankly play them with more gusto), and to treasure the true characters, giving each and all room to live and grow.

Future Workshop Announcements

We are currently making plans for sponsoring a series of workshops at Westerbeke Ranch in Sonoma county during the month of August. Below is a listing of tentative workshop leaders and dates. More details will follow in the next catalog.

Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.
Phone: (408) 667-2335, 10 to 3:30 every day;
10 to 8 Sunday & Friday.

Unless otherwise indicated, all programs listed in this brochure are residential programs in Big Sur. Send reservations for all programs to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute—By Reservation Only.

Fee Information: We require a reservation fee of $20 for weekend groups, $70 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs. Please mail all reservations to Esalen/Big Sur. Balance of payment is due on arrival. Esalen accepts Mastercharge, Bankamericard, and American Express. U S currency only, please.

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for a long term Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation (allow at least 3 weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—August 31 programs or for weekend programs.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has no short term child care facilities. Please do not plan to bring children. We also ask workshop participants not to have guests. Alas, no pets.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5—5:30 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying, or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Who's Responsible at Esalen?

We have long regarded Esalen Institute as an educational laboratory. Our evolving philosophical and operational positions reflect this regard. Underlying it all is a baseline ethic of "self-awareness and self-responsibility." However re-presented and operationalized in the past, by us or by others, this ethic continues to be the basis for our world view, and following from this, our educational approach. The self-awareness/self-responsibility ethic has grown and stabilized out of at least two generations of weighty dis-illusioning social and political events—all connected by a common reminder:

> Give away your personal faculties of discernment, of evaluation, of self-reference, and you lose your integrity (your wholeness). "Take responsibility for your every thought, your every feeling, your every action," said our beloved friend and teacher, Fritz Perls.

We view the implications of this position as being social as well as personal. They concern the ways we relate to ourselves and others.

In our position as educators, we invite people to take responsibility for their whole life situation while at Esalen. This includes taking responsibility for who they select as their teachers, their leaders, their gurus, their authority figures . . . and so on—and to be aware, whenever possible, what effect this has on them. We, of necessity, are setting up a situation for our seminarians to learn the practice of self-responsibility from the time they consider selecting a workshop, not just during the workshop. In effect, we are asking that this self-responsibility attitude be present in the initial contact with Esalen. Ideally, the same attitude will pervade after a workshop when our seminarians go back to the community and seek out others—physicians, teachers, counselors, mental health professionals, etc.

As we have become more thoughtful and self-critical about the overall direction of Esalen we have begun to concentrate on enhancing our basic offering—the Esalen environment and life style. Our primary emphasis is not on teaching particular truths or personal and interpersonal techniques for daily life; rather our primary concern is with a particular consciousness and developing an environment to support the evolution of that consciousness—the consciousness of self-awareness/self-responsibility.

Food for Thought

The Dissolution of the Order of the Star

J Krishnamurti

I maintain that truth is a pathless land, and you cannot approach it by any path whatsoever, by any religion, by any sect. That is my point of view, and I adhere to that absolutely and unconditionally. Truth, being limitless, unconditioned and unapproachable by any path whatsoever, cannot be organized; nor should any organization be formed to lead or coerce people along any particular path. If you first understand that, then you will see how impossible it is to organize a belief. A belief is purely an individual matter, and you cannot and must not organize it. If you do, it becomes dead, crystallized, it becomes a creed, a sect, a religion, to be imposed on others. This is what everyone throughout the world is attempting to do. Truth is narrowed down and made a plaything for those who are weak, for those who are only momentarily discontented. Truth cannot be brought down, rather the individual must make the effort to ascend to it. You cannot bring the mountain-top to the valley. If you attain to the mountain-top you must pass through the valley, climb the steeps, unafraid of the dangerous precipices. You must climb towards the truth, it cannot be "stepped down" or organized for you. Interest in ideas is mainly sustained by organizations, but organizations only awaken interest from without. Interest, which is not born out of love of truth for its own sake, but aroused by an organization, is of no value. The organization becomes a framework into which its members can conveniently fit. They no longer strive after truth or the mountain-top, but rather carve for themselves a convenient niche into which they put themselves, or let the organization place them, and consider that the organization will thereby lead them to truth.

If an organization be created for this purpose, it becomes a crutch, a weakness, a bondage, and must cripple the individual, and prevent him from growing, from establishing his uniqueness, which lies in the discovery for himself of that absolute, unconditioned truth.

The moment you follow someone you cease to follow truth. I am not concerned whether you pay attention to what I say or not. I want to do a certain thing in the world and I am going to do it with unwavering concentration. I am concerning myself with only one essential thing: to set man free. I desire to free him from all cages, all fears, and not to found religions, new sects, nor to establish new theories and new philosophies. Then you will naturally ask me why I go the world over, continually speaking. I will tell you for what reason I do this: not because I desire a following, not because I desire a special group of disciples. (How men love to be different from their fellow men, however ridiculous, absurd or trivial their distinctions may be! I do not want to encourage that absurdity.) I have no disciples, no apostles, either on earth or in the realm of spirituality.

If there are only five people who will listen, who will live, who have their faces turned toward eternity, it will be sufficient. Of what use is it to have thousands who do not understand, who are fully embalmed in prejudice, who do not want the new, but would rather translate the new to suit their own sterile, stagnant selves?

I desire those who seek to understand me, to be free; not to follow me, not to make out of me a cage which will become a religion, a sect. Rather should they be free from all fears—from the fear of religion, from the fear of salvation, from the fear of spirituality, from the fear of love, from the fear of death. From the fear of life itself.

You are accustomed to authority, or to the atmosphere of authority, which you think will lead you to spirituality. You think and hope that another can, by his extraordinary powers—a miracle—transport you to this realm of eternal freedom which is happiness. Your whole outlook on life is based on that authority.

You have listened to me for three years now, without any change taking place except in the few. Now analyze what I am saying, be critical, so that you may understand thoroughly, fundamentally. When you look for an authority to lead you to spirituality, you are held in a cage. You are bound automatically to build an organization around that authority. By the very creation of that organization, which, you think, will help this authority to lead you to spirituality, you are held in a cage.

Organizations cannot make you free. No man from outside can make you free; nor can organized worship, nor the immolation of yourselves for a cause, make you free. You use a typewriter to write letters, but you do not put it on an altar and worship it. But that is what you are doing when organizations become your chief concern. "How many members are there in it?" This is the first question I am asked by newspaper reporters. "How many followers have you? By their number we shall judge whether what you say is true or false." I do not know how many others there are. I am not concerned with that. As I said, if there were even one man who had been set free, that would be enough.

Again, you have the idea that only certain people hold the key to the Kingdom of Happiness. No one holds it. No one has the authority to hold that key. That key is your own self, and in the development and the purification and in the incorruptibility of that self alone is the Kingdom of Eternity.

You are accustomed to being told how far you have advanced, what is your spiritual status. How childish! Who but yourself can tell you if you are ugly or beautiful within? Who but yourself can tell you if you are incorruptible?

At the time this statement was made, Krishnamurti was 34 years old. He had been chosen at the age of ten as the New World Teacher by Dr Annie Besant, and the Order of the Star in the East was founded in 1911 by those who shared her belief and hope. At the time it was dissolved, its membership was around 70,000. The speech was given at Omneii Star Camp, Holland, August, 1929.

Buddhist Studies

The American Institute of Buddhist Studies, with the cooperation of the Esalen Institute and the hospitality of the University of California at Santa Cruz, announces the offering of a four week intensive program of Buddhist and Asian Studies, running from August 7 to September 1 on the campus of the University of California at Santa Cruz. Course offerings will range from the Buddhist meditational disciplines through the Sanskrit, Chinese, Tibetan, and Japanese languages all the way to cross-cultural studies of Buddhist and Western medicines and healing systems, psychologies and contemplative techniques, and the poetry of enlightenment.

The faculty will include Japanese meditation masters, Tibetan Lama scholars, and Asian and American University-trained scholars of Indian, Chinese, Tibetan, and Japanese Dharmas, cultures, histories and civilizations.

Distinguished speakers such as Lama Govinda, Gary Snyder, and others, will visit during the session for week-end seminars bringing together a number of central themes, such as the study-practice relation, Zen and Tantra, the Flower Garland multi-universe, the evolution of an American Buddhism, and so forth. For further information and catalog, write to AIBS, 300 Page Street, San Francisco, CA 94102.

The Gazebo

The Gazebo represents a quality, taste, touch as well as a form, shape, structure.

It is a learning environment growing from and interacting with the nature of its "home" ground. As Gazebos spring up across the nation some will take the form of, "The Ark" floating down our rivers, some will take the form of "The Igloo" in states of deep snow. The Gazebo is where education is "exploration," learning is exciting, and the teacher is a guide. History, science, and geography is "felt" so that living/learning is integrated into a joyful bond.

Four generations moving into uncharted space. The Gazebo is a healthful place—full with trees, earth (gravel and mud), sun and rain. The Gazebo is a place where children relate to the energies of large animals and small. Where the word "respect" translates to awareness, to being present for an experience in "relationship." The Gazebo is a place where teacher/student are fluid and neither has a fixed form. The Gazebo is a place where "grown-ups" come to learn about and with children.

In the spirit of the Universe, the Gazebo is ever changing. The goals and purposes of the Gazebo: A world environment that is healthy for all children.

The following article is excerpted from a proposal for a PhD dissertation by a graduate student at the School of Education, University of California, Santa Barbara. The proposal is addressed to Janet Lederman.

I propose to investigate the functioning of your unusually designed and creatively formed school, the Gazebo. The general focus of my research will be to find out under what conditions the Gazebo or Gazebo-type school does and can exist. I'll also be trying to find out what, apparently, is the critical resource, or maybe several critical resources—that special quality, person, or combination that gives the Gazebo its particular style and character—that part of the school without which the school couldn't exist, or couldn't exist in the same way.

After I gather all this information and look at it, I hope to find what can be abstracted and synthesized into theory. I'll be looking to see if there are any new theories established in education by what you're doing at the Gazebo; I expect to find questions raised by the Gazebo idea that we can ask about education as it is now being practiced and I expect to begin to construct, some new hypotheses regarding educational institutions.

Some particularly interesting research areas are, to begin with, (1) the context—I would like to collect and analyze information on the impact of the environment on the school and the interrelationship between the Gazebo and its environment. (2) role innovation—The second component that I intend to analyze carefully is 'roles.' I suspect and expect that there is a lot of role innovation going on, encouraged, or required at the Gazebo—I may learn of roles that I hadn't even thought of or that are not typical at all. (3) the process of innovation—Not only is the Gazebo an innovation (noun), but also the process of innovation (verb) is seemingly protected or built into the Gazebo idea. I would like to find what implications this has for education in general and other innovators and innovative situations in particular. I expect to find ideas, questions and contributions for educational theory as well as for organizational and sociological theory. For example, a sociological question might be "what is the apparent interaction between an innovation/deviation like this and 'the norm?' " How does an organization with open-ended goals exist? These are only tentative questions, but studying the Gazebo, you, Arthur, Vivian, and maybe the pony, will, I imagine, be rich in information and possibilities to be shared with professionals, parents, and others interested in and with children,

I propose to be a participant observer and keep a journal in the traditional methods described in the literature on the field of educational/anthropological observation. I would like to use the media of film as another method. I propose to make these films a significant part of my data collection to be analyzed at the end by me and also to be available to anybody else who would like to see with their own eyes some of what I will be seeing—in other words, the film will not only be a data collection method, but also a descriptive method. I also plan to use tape, or the tape-recorded interview.

What I will be doing here is to have three viewpoints. I'll have my own viewpoint as an observer; then there will be the film which anyone can look at and see (that's my second viewpoint); and then the third viewpoint will, hopefully, come over the tapes as the people participating in the Gazebo project will tell what and how they see it and what they hope for. I think that that will turn out to be an interesting combination of data-collection.

When we come this weekend, we'll be hoping to do the first of the filming—an introduction and a general description of the Gazebo. Hopefully, it will give a first picture of what the Gazebo is like.

Summer Programs At Westerbeke Ranch

This series of programs sponsored by Esalen will be held at the Westerbeke Ranch in Sonoma County, which is about an hour's drive north of San Francisco. These residential workshops will be held in an intimate setting which includes rustic cabins, home cooked meals, a sauna and Japanese tub, a large swimming pool, and beautiful scenery. Weekend workshops begin on Friday evening and end Sunday at noon. Five day workshops begin on Sunday evening and end Friday at noon.

A reservation fee of $70 is required for five day programs, $50 for the September 1–4 program, and $20 for all other weekend programs. Reservation fees are not refundable, but with five days notice they can be transferred to other Esalen seminars. Full payment for all Westerbeke workshops is due five days in advance of the beginning of the program. Send all reservations and payments to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

August 4–6

The Architecture of Awareness / F Lanier Graham

An intensive workshop on the transpersonal psychology of sacred symbol systems and their functional role in the structure of bicameral consciousness designed as an intellectual/intuitive "journey" through the three great ages of human history.

Friday: The Stone Age of the Sacred Tribe
The "journey" starts at "the beginning of time" when humanity first became aware of itself, within the space and time of earth, and began to tell sacred stories about the nature of creation.

We will explore the fundamental assumptions of this planetary culture from a psychological and cosmological point of view.

Saturday: The Bronze Age of the Sacred City-State
After the Neolithic revolution, animal hunting was replaced by herding and farming, and a sphere-of consciousness that has a very different structure. As society became more complex, the simple paleolithic and neolithic concepts of earth mother and sky father were replaced by more complex cosmologies in which a vast multitude of "spirits" took on the personal names of gods and goddesses. We will use authentic artifacts and sacred words to give us a glimpse of what it was like to emerge from the labyrinth of individuated awareness.

Sunday: The Iron Age of the Secular Individual
This third planetary metaculture began to take shape between 3000 and 2500 years ago. We will examine the symbol-systems of Taoism, Hinduism, Buddhism, Zoroastrianism, Judaism, Christianity and Islam.

August 6–11

A Very Moving Week / Jasmine Nash & the San Francisco Dancers' Workshop Associates

During this workshop we will use our own natural movements:
- to explore ourselves and others
- to tune our bodies as well as our lives
- to create rituals for and about ourselves and our environment
- to give ourselves permission to have fun, be silly, and take risks
- to experience reality and change

This workshop will include Movement Ritual I developed by Anna Halprin, artistic director of Dancers' Workshop, visualization, meditation, massage, and high and low energy Black dance with live conga drums. Bring clothes to play dress up for fantasy and instruments to make music. $290

August 11–13
Evolutionary Relationships Between Mind & Body
Michael Murphy & Jim Hickman

Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman are gathering examples of extraordinary bodily transformations from various fields—from the yogic and contemplative literature, psychiatric records, hypnosis and drug research, sport, the arts, and everyday life—in an attempt to learn more about the range of such changes and the ways in which they happen. Through discussions, multi-media presentations and exercises they will present their work to date and speculate with the participants about its relevance to daily life. Two questions for discussion are: 1) Do these bodily changes reveal an evolutionary possibility? 2) How can we develop a practice to support them?

Suggested reading: Jacob Atabet by Michael Murphy published by Celestial Arts. $120

August 13–18
Sports & Consciousness: New Ideas & Training Routines
Michael Murphy & Mike Spino

Focusing on running and meditation, this workshop will introduce methods of mind/body development being explored by Mike Spino and Michael Murphy. These methods will include various running gaits and tempos, muscle/skeletal exercises, breathing techniques, visualization and meditation exercises and some of the lore of mystical experience in sport. Ways in which these elements can be integrated into various training routines will be presented. There will also be discussions of altered states that occur in sport and conceptual frameworks with which to interpret them (including a scenario of bodily transformations suggested by a study of the traditional Indian siddhis or yogic powers). $290

August 18–20
A Psychic Training Program / Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only to learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $120

Emotion, Experience & Expression in the Body, Mind & Spirit / Betty Fuller

We will work holistically with the body, mind and spirit in the following ways:

Body: Alignment, relaxation, tension and stress reduction exercises including massage, Trager, feldenkrais, gestalt awareness and laughter.

Mind: Reprogram for high energy affirmative living. Clear emotional log jams and harness the juices of emotional experience by giving free rein to choice and response-ability.

Spirit: Fine tune the instrument of the bodymind to the power of "the Force" through guided imagery, meditation, music, movement, laughter and dance.

Bring musical instruments and shoes for running and dancing. $290

Experiencing Esalen at the Westerbeke Ranch

A restful weekend in a beautiful setting: The Westerbeke Ranch is built on the site of an old Miwok Indian village. Come and enjoy the fresh spring water, oak trees, rolling hills, peacocks, gardens, and pools in the Valley of the Moon. The Westerbeke Ranch family offers a daily ritual of running, yoga, meditation, dream-work, and art, as well as massage and good home-cooked meals. Come join us! $110

Wendy Westerbeke, Art
Lane Tietgen, Meditation & Music
Patricia Westerbeke, Massage & Yoga
Susan Westerbeke, Massage & Running

August 25–27
Easy Does It / Gail Stewart Worth

A weekend of movement, body meditations, relaxation and massage. The first invitation is to make yourself at home—in your own body. The second is to touch, rock and rub each other, with ease. This is not body work only because it's not work. The trick we will practice is to be easy. $120

August 27–September 1
Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be / David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $290

September 1–4
A Weekend Conversation with Werner Erhard, George Leonard & Stewart Emery

Werner Erhard has asked George Leonard and Stewart Emery to join him for an intensive discussion of personal and social transformation. The net proceeds of the weekend will be donated to the Hunger Project. (In past years Werner Erhard has donated the proceeds from his seminars at Esalen to us.) $225

ESALEN PROGRAMS

Week of July 2-7

Taoism / John Blofeld

In his first North American tour, John Blofeld will come to Esalen to lecture and discuss his more than forty years of studying and living in Asia and writing about Far Eastern religions. Topics will include Taoism, Chinese Buddhism, Tibetan Buddhism, and the application of Eastern beliefs, feelings, and ways of doing things to modern life in the West. $290

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body / Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact, and nurturing, sensitive giving and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, Feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $290

Holiday Fireworks: A Reichian/Gestalt Intensive Joan Fiore

Bring your own explosives—your resentments, your hungers, your passions, your frustrations, your tensions, your hopes, your fears, your open wounds, your hidden scars, your confusions, your restlessness, your best suit of armor, your assorted somatic ailments, along with any of your other potentially combustible material, and, together, we shall create from these a glorious Fourth of July week opportunity to ignite your own fuse, to release imprisoned energy, to integrate unrealized power, to discover and appreciate independence. First priority is on intensive intrapersonal work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. Humor (explosive or inert) is admitted at no extra fee. $290

Running Home: Recent Developments in the Mind/Body Approach to Running / Mike Spino

In this workshop we will draw on recent developments in sport physiology, preventive medicine, the mental training of athletes in East Germany and the Soviet Union, Eastern philosophy, yoga, and the martial arts as well as research on bodily transformations at the Esalen Sport Center. We will work with gaits and tempos for running, muscle/skeletal exercises, flexibility exercises, training routines, visualization exercises and meditation techniques. $290

Centering in Action / Bob Kriegel

The purpose of this workshop is to show that there is nothing mysterious, mystical, or devotional about centering—the process of tuning into that place of inner strength and wisdom from which we experience more of our possibilities and potential.

To experience centering we will play active games of all types, invent new ones, and practice exercises from yoga, aikido, t'ai chi, and sensory awareness.

We will use gestalt awareness, visualization, and psychosynthesis techniques to bring the insights gained in these activities to a more conscious level and to transfer them into our daily lives. $120

Hypnosis & Parapsychology / Lee Pulos

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lecturettes explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $120

July 9–16

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be
David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $410

Adventures in Self-Exploration
Stanislav Grof & Christina Grof

Focused self-exploration in this workshop will be based on the model of the unconscious that emerged from psychedelic research. It includes not only biographically determined areas but also the dynamics of the death-rebirth process and transpersonal experiences. We will use a combination of music and guided affective imagery, mandala drawing, yoga, massage and individual work when indicated. $290

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

This workshop will include massage and dancing, exploring the rituals of Black disco dancing in contemporary American society. High-low energy, sensual and sexual, rhythm and syncopation, hand clapping, foot stomping, using African drums, we will use our voices and prerecorded popular Black music. $290

Gestalt Practice
Richard & Christine Price & the Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c. 2500 BC

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "Leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); Cutting Through Spiritual Materialism (Chogyam Trungpa); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Education in Feeling and Purpose (Kelley); Meditation: The Art of Ecstasy (Bhagwan Rajneesh). $290

Gestalt, Psychosynthesis & Encounter: An Experiential Training Workshop / Beverly Silverman

We will work with basic simple concepts and techniques. The emphasis is on the integral relationship between individual process and group process. My concern is with developing a way of being in which one's senses are open and one's style of contacting others is flexible. $120

Inner Love / Simone Surpin

In each of us exists a place where we can merge in and with a certain kind of love: a love that is the source of our inner being; a love that is not dependent on something outside of itself for sustenance; a love that renews and clears our vision of ourselves and of others.

As purely and as simply as possible, we will attempt to explore and experience this state; to touch these experiences with our minds and share them outside ourselves.

We will meditate, chant, do gentle body work practices, and learn about energy flows. Each session will be a blend of both didactic and experiential work. Some time will also be taken for silent walks together in the country. $120

This workshop is about handling fear in ourselves and in others in emergency and crisis situations. It is for nurses, physicians and other health professionals. There will be a session at the Esalen baths. Nurses will earn 10 hours continuing education credit. Enrollment is limited. $120

Dance of Shiva / Gabrielle Roth

Each gesture is from our own nature
born
spontaneous
beyond form
beyond purpose being moved by
we are divinity dancing.

This weekend is being created for you to experience that part of yourself that wants to live deeply and fully. Be prepared for vigorous, intensive sessions of movement alternating with periods of deep meditation. $120

Week of July 16-21

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

"When sex comes from the physical center, it is a necessity. When it comes from the mental center, it is a fantasy. When sex comes from the heart center, it is a deep, total, and profound experience of our own divinity. Sex is meaningless without the heart."

The purpose of this workshop is to heal the separation between our divinity and our sexuality as it exists in our consciousness, attitudes, and actions. This weekend will include breathing, movement, music, sound, and massage meditation. We will come together to dance, to sing, to worship, to cry—to celebrate our vulnerability and our strength, our heights and our depths. Gabrielle will support us in going within ourselves to rediscover the magnitude of our own heart energy, thus infusing our sexuality, and our entire life experience, with depth and purpose. $290

For workshop description see page 15. $260

Loving / Stella Resnick

A little bit of loving goes a long way. Loving is a five-day workshop designed to focus on cultivating and sustaining, and fulfilling relationships. We will deal with such issues as intimacy, jealousy, communication, sensuality, sexuality, pleasure, and play. Loving includes gestalt communication processes, meditation on the body, guided fantasy, massage, movement, and breathing exercises. Come with a partner or alone and be prepared to have a good time. $290 per person

Lomi Work: An Exploration of the Body/Mind/Spirit Through Awareness David Kessler

Using the Lomi approach to gestalt, conscious movement, breath awareness, aikido energy techniques, hatha yoga, body work, polarity massage, and meditation, we will explore and enhance our body/mind/spirit process. The focus of this work is cultivation of awareness at all levels of existence. We will explore Lomi body work, an integrative form of deep body manipulations whereby tensions in the body are brought to awareness and released. Basically this work speaks of a trust for the human organism and the higher forces that guide it. $290

A Workshop for Couples of All Kinds / Betty Fuller

This is a workshop for couples to enhance the quality of their relationships: to experience alienation, estrangement, distrust, domination and suspicion; to explore verbal and non-verbal ways to nurture, support, assist and grant space for each other to be as natural results of love and trust. We deal specifically with emotion, sex, communication, money, power, children, other partners, and mom and dad. $120 per person

Opening / Michael Butler

Everybody's beautiful in their own way.
—song by Ray Stevens

This workshop is to teach ways of opening up to the loving "center" of yourself. In that center is a reservoir of self-awareness, joy, and connectedness to other people. We will study how to nurture that place in ourself and stay in touch with it amidst the hustle and bustle of everyday living.

We will use ways of opening which are gentle, yet go deep—music and chanting to open the heart, encounter, gestalt, theoretical sessions on unity consciousness—and other techniques for unfolding. Participants will be taught a simple form of meditation to continue the process at home.

The workshop is appropriate both for beginners and for those with group experience. $120

Massage Intensive / The Esalen Massage Crew

The members of the massage crew, each with their own unique style, will give instruction and help the group to practice basic techniques of massage upon one another: sensory awareness, deep muscular massage, joint articulation, polarity. As we learn to feel with our hands how the body and the life-force within it works, we learn to release tensions in others and to be more fully aware of ourselves.

The group meets daily in the mineral baths. $120

For workshop description see July 16–21. $120

Week of July 23-28

Motion & E Motion / Betty Fuller

We will explore movement—emotional, physical and spiritual—using methods drawn from Moshe Feldenkrais, Trager, Rolf-Nolte alignment work, massage, meditation, music and dancing. We will explore ways to experience our barriers to full self expression, release chronic holding and tension and reduce stress and get the juices flowing again. $290

Self & Beyond / John Zeigler

A body/mind/spirit integration can emerge when you experience the polarities of your personality and question all beliefs and attachments. Self-discovery, self-awareness and self-responsibility are the workshop themes since, if you know your self, you will know the universe. Intensive individual gestalt and body work for deep emotional/energy release, massage, and "No-Fault Communication," a positive and supportive encounter technique, will heighten contact with the self, the group, and the natural wonders of the Esalen environment. $290

Week of July 23-28 Continued

A Week with Will Schutz

$320

Sexism & Sexuality: For Men & Women Jacqueline Larcombe Doyle

Esalen has long been experienced as a permission-giving environment, sought by many as context in the quest or re-discovery of their sexuality. This training group provides an opportunity for a renewing personal experience coupled with professional enrichment for those interested in increasing basic sex counseling skills. The group will provide safety and support for an exploration toward resolution of these issues in our own lives, paying particular attention to the impact of sexist attitudes on sexuality. We will focus on the establishment of power relationships; on the roles of competition, jealousy, time and space. Through experience and action, we will explore the social and cultural influences on choices in the expression of this creative life force. $290

The Celebration of Nature / Michael Tierra (Ananta)

The emphasis will be on using the methods of herbs, massage, chanting, movement, meditation, and balanced diet for physical cleansing and balancing. We will demonstrate the use of herbs as generators of health and creativity. We will learn how to make special teas, soups, baths, and fomentations using herbs which we will gather. In addition we will use clay and herbal oils to anoint ourselves, helping to free old blocks and tensions. As a rhythmic and melodic complement we will utilize the sounds and chants of nature from the African, East Indian and American Indian traditions with appropriate dance-like movements to give fuller expression to our being. We will take walks together to discover the wild herbs and trees which we can use as food. $290

Weekend of July 28-30

Awareness Through Movement & Functional Integration: The Feldenkrais Method / Mia Segal

Through a series of simple, gentle exercises devised by Moshe Feldenkrais we will learn more about how our bodies work and explore new possibilities of movement. $120

Couples Group / Will Schutz

This workshop is for couples who wish to clarify their relationship—that is, either make it more joyful or terminate it. Each member of each couple should be prepared to be completely truthful or else there is not much point to attending. Humor is allowed. $120 per person

For workshop description see page 15. $110

Your Characters in Search of an Author / John Argue

Each of us is many people. Some of these people are authentic—that is, true expressions of our essence. Some are phony, merely roles we play. We will attempt to learn the difference, to dis-identify with our phony roles (or to keep them and frankly play them with more gusto), and to treasure the true characters, giving each and all room to live and grow. $120

Experiencing Esalen

Experiencing Esalen Staff

Coordinated by Janet Sachson Zuckerman

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificance of the Big Sur coast.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls) and Anger and the Rocking Chair (Lederman).

Five Days with Jack Downing

Advanced Massage / The Esalen Massage Crew

The soothing release of everyday tensions is really only the beginning of the sensations and revelations possible through massage. The release of chronic energy blocks can produce dramatic results in our physical and emotional well-being; awareness and memories may be triggered which begin a process that goes far beyond the massage itself. The crew would like to demonstrate and practice together some of our own explorations in massage and manipulation of the energy bodies and to share our experiences of the sometimes surprising results of these techniques. $290

Living Your Own Tao / Al Chung-liang Huang

This is the age of popular Taoism. Tao books and techniques are mushrooming everywhere. What is TAO? How do we transform this ineffable philosophical concept into our day to day living? This seminar is to be shared as the essence of the Tao in practice. Come to participate in the living Tao. Play t'ai chi, enjoy being simple and clear with others. Share laughter, music and movement flow. Discover the dancer in you, and the dance of everyday living. $290

Letting Go & Getting Everything / Judyth Weaver

This workshop will utilize Reichian breathing and movement techniques, sensing, meditation, movement, and an ancient form of balance and relaxation, t'ai chi chuan, to help bring us to more understanding of what and how we hold on and to enable us to let go and allow a more relaxed, naturally balanced, energetic and enjoyable living. $290

Tune Your Body—A Movement Adventure
Nitza Broide Miller

The process of growing up provides us with many experiences—sensations, impulses, desires which express themselves spontaneously. Our body generates energy. We enjoy the pleasures of body movements, the touch, the magic of exploration and the joy of discovery.

At times, this growth process is cut off by rules and taboos or by other obstacles that are hard to conquer. We begin to listen more to the surroundings than to ourselves!

In this workshop we will listen to the excitement of our own rhythms; we'll tune into the internal voice of our body, and to the sensual flow and pleasure in recreating and reconnecting with ourselves. We will learn to let go of unnecessary tension in our body through dynamic relaxation, using imagery and visualization, and through the magic of dance. $120

Week of August 6-11

An Integrative Approach to Self Actualization
Ilana Rubenfeld

The sea always has waves . . . waves are the sea . . . sea and waves are one. To speak of waves apart from the sea is a delusion—so mind and body are one!

The focus in this workshop will be on experiencing one's own body and emotions as a total organism. Emotions and memories are often stored in our bodies, resulting in tension and imbalance. A unique blend of gestalt, Alexander technique and feldenkrais exercises will be used as a gateway to contacting, expressing, and working through deep feelings. Massage staff will be on hand to assist the workshop.

We have the choice to contact ourselves and each other with joy, sadness, compassion, humor, ideas, and with the body—the whole person. $290

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity / Robert Nadeau

Who are we really?

On a "bad day" we approach life feeling anxious, incompetent, unloved, unloving—basically negative and small. At other times we're like a different person—calm, squared away, loving, open. And then there are those extraordinary moments of opening to larger, finer, dimensions where we experience the oneness, the totality of our philosophies.

These are shifts of identity, and the shifting process is a natural one. But most of us stumble from identity to identity, getting "stuck" in smaller states and only rarely touching finer ones.

In this workshop we'll experience the shifting process and learn to apply it to our jobs, our relationships, the ordinary and extraordinary times in our lives. We'll use meditation, imagery, centering, and body movement. $290

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

This seven day Experiencing Esalen program is designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. See page 15 for more information. $370

Esalen Wilderness Trips

August 5—12
Encountering in the High Sierra
Maurica Anderson & Roger Smith

During this seven-day workshop we will hike into a campsite by a clear mountain lake off the main trails in the High Sierra. Mules will carry in all of the food, camping equipment, and personal gear. We will camp by the lake for six days, eating outrageously good food (fresh or frozen rather than freeze dried) and working with body awareness, meditation, psychodrama, gestalt, and encounter, laughing a lot and getting to know the high country, one another, and ourselves.

Mountaineering experience is not necessary, but applicants should be capable of hiking. A detailed information sheet will be supplied upon request. Participants will meet in the Sierra on August 5. $240

August 19—28
Rites of Passage: A Ten Day Mountain/River Adventure / Dick Galland & Annie Callaway

At various times in our lives, we come to a point of stasis: a moment between the passing of the old and the birth of the new. In these moments, we may take time to consider new ways of defining ourselves and our relationship to our world and the people in it.

As in rock climbing, when we move from balance through imbalance into balance again, this program will be an opportunity to pause and take stock, to reflect on where we have been and where we wish to go. It will be a time for relaxation, for stretching limits, for extending ourselves, for seeking a new and revitalized sense of who we are.

For seven days we will explore the remote and spectacular Marble Mountains wilderness in northern California. Carrying everything we need in our packs, we will hike through broad green forests, lush meadows, and camp by crystal mountain lakes. From a base camp in a small alpine basin, we will experience rock climbing and rappelling, ascend a nearby peak, and each spend 24 hours completely alone in reflection and contemplation.

At the end of these seven days we will move to the nearby Klamath River and embark on two days of whitewater rafting. Guiding our twelve foot rubber rafts with paddles, we will each have a chance to captain our boat through the rapids and delight in the exhilaration and timeless grandeur of the river experience. Woven throughout the program will be a focus on individual awareness and group process using techniques from psychosynthesis, gestalt, yoga, and meditation.

This workshop is grounded in the notion that a person's responses to the challenges of the mountain and river reflect their responses to the challenges of daily life. From the very real and immediate lessons of the wilderness, we can come to see ourselves more clearly and thus act with a greater sense of purpose.

No previous experience is required. You should be in reasonably good physical condition. Complete information on clothing, equipment, and travel will be sent to you upon registration. $325

Weekend of August 11-13

From Sex to Superconsciousness / Bernard Gunther

Bhagwan Rajneesh is an enlightened Taoist/Tantric master who utilizes love, sex, humor, creativity, chaos, and every form-level of energy. He has created a number of profound, playful processes for letting go, centering and directly experiencing your ecstatic unconditioned self.

In this workshop we will listen to some of Bhagwan's recent lectures on tape and use many new, different forms of quiet, active meditation. The sessions will be enhanced by various joyous, spontaneous, zen-like happenings which will emerge out of our being together. Through contacting our irrational chaos, releasing automatic behavior, and balancing our energy centers we will learn to flow in a new, whole, mind-body-soul, a total, orgasmic dimension. $120

For workshop description see July 2–7. $120

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

In this workshop we will explore the relationship between who we are and who we would like to be. We will use gestalt and guided fantasy to contact our inner selves. In a non-judgmental, supportive atmosphere we will experiment with music, drawing and theater games to open up and to express our natural creativity. No special talent or previous group experience is required to begin "getting your act together." $120

This workshop is intended as a first short introduction to some of the approaches of holistic health, which are currently gaining favor as natural alternatives to the more orthodox medical practices dominating the health field in this country. Included will be such diverse topics as herbs, flowers, acupuncture, iridology, homeopathy, rolfing, diet, etc. Early morning sessions will be devoted to chanting and meditation followed by yoga or tai chi. We will also schedule an afternoon massage session with herbal bath for which we pick our own herbs. Meals will be largely organic and natural, much of the produce coming from our own garden. $120

In the process of becoming educated, we are taught that it is more important to be involved with the outside world than with our Selves. We are taught to become Ego-involved—involved with manipulating things and people. We are taught to experience our selves primarily in relation to others; we lose touch with our essence.

From this perspective, we offer an opportunity to return to our Selves within the working context of the Esalen community. Our faculty for this program is our environment—staff—community.

Learning/dis-covering the use of your own energy in work . . .
For your SELF.
Living together (close to others) operatively and co-operatively in a unique, high intensity environment.
Contact/communication with the people of Esalen via group work and in day-to-day Esalen happenings.
An opportunity for:
SELF-regulation
SELF-examination
SELF-contemplation
and if you choose
SELF-reevaluation
Facilitated by removal from your ordinary living context.

The Esalen Work-Study Program

Photos: Benj Langdon

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week at such jobs as gardening, maintenance, office, kitchen duties, etc. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs and work assignments are made according to these requirements. (Flexibility is one of the watchwords of life at Esalen). The Work-Study program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program (emotionally and physically) and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share—contact—play/alone-together.

Accommodations are shared with up to 3 persons in a room. The program lasts 28 days; four weeks and four weekends at a basic cost of $350. Depending on your work schedule, weekend workshops may be available for an additional fee. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates. Arrangements are made through the office.

It is possible to be in the work-study program up to three months, by invitation, after the first month.

Available dates:

Scholarship Information

If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program of five days or longer, write for a scholarship form before making a reservation. Allow at least three weeks for processing. If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving the notification. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15–August 31 programs or for weekend workshops.

Ongoing Residence Program

Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $960 per 26-day period.

Week of August 13-18

From Sex to Superconsciousness / Bernard Gunther

For workshop description see August 11–13. $290

Be Your Own Author-ity / Beverly Silverman

Be the author of your own life. You don't have to live someone else's plot. Life is a continuous process and we can make our path smoother. The style of contact we use will be gestalt and psychosynthesis and anything else that works. $290

A Gestalt Workshop / Pat & Neil Lamper

Experience your own relating: how to better care for yourself in relationships with those you love. Using gestalt, fantasy, breathing and awareness of body stress, we will work with memories and dreams to re-experience past choices and to bring more energy into the present. We will work on contacting our inner self, our central vigor. $290

August 13–25

Gestalt, Rolfing & Feldenkrais Method
Dub Leigh & Richard Price

This workshop is structured around the teachings of Fritz Perls, Ida Rolf and Moshe Feldenkrais. Days will be devoted to bodywork with Dub Leigh and in the evenings there will be gestalt sessions with Richard Price. Each participant will receive three rolfings as part of the workshop fee. $735

August 13–20

Personal Integrity / Exploring Self Esteem
David Schiffman

In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical and mental potentials and how they effect out sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others.

To this end we will employ a variety of focuses including music, movement, meditation, guided fantasies, as well as intensive individual work using bio-energetic, gestalt, and psychosynthetic techniques.

Our emphasis will be on discovering and affirming the qualities each person values most inside him or her self and in sensing whether it is worth taking the risk to share these qualities with others. $410

Weekend of August 18-20

The Body & the Energy Body / George Leonard

Many ancient and modern disciplines of personal health, growth and change depend upon concepts of energy flows in and around the bodies of living things. Using techniques derived from the art of aikido, George Leonard will present his approach to the human biofield or "energy body." Through simple mental and physical exercises, participants will experience their energy bodies in interaction with nature and other people, and will practice centering and heightened awareness with special attention to stress reduction and good health. They will be introduced to alternative ways of dealing with everyday life situations—especially those involving tension and expectation—and will explore ways of getting in touch with their own hidden powers. There will also be discussion of these experiences as they relate to education, sports, and social transformation. $120

For workshop description see page 15. $110

Celebrative Awareness
Jinendra Jain & Katherine Da Silva Jain

We can either be saddened by, or just endure, or let be, or we can celebrate the way we manifest ourselves in our lives. In this workshop we shall explore a festive paradigm, examine our barriers, and experience processes to celebrate our emotions, thoughts, sounds, bodies —ourselves, and the Self encompassing our selves.

The methods we will use include meditation, chanting, and meditative processes for experiencing sensation and emotion. $120

Week of August 20-25

Gestalt Bodywork / Frank Rubenfeld & Mari Krieger

Frank and Mari combine Richard Olney's self-acceptance training with more traditional gestalt techniques. Visualizations, pressure massage, and energy charging and discharging exercises will all be utilized as means of enabling participants to experience and accept their feelings and energy. Gestalt art, Esalen massage, and improvisational theater will also be integrated into the workshop experience. $290

Alchemy of Body/Mind / Patricia Caldwell & Bill Liles

Beginning with the elemental crucible of the alchemist's pot (the dense body), we will teach several body methods (polarity, shiatsu massage, deep tissue and manipulative work) to demonstrate how gross energy may be raised to new levels of vibration and consciousness.

Centering, sound vibration, exercise, and inner awareness techniques, as well as information on purification and nutrition will be combined with body work. $290

August 20—27

Self Re-parenting / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to re-turn to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and re-infanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-Reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $410

August 20—27

An Extended Experience in the Energetic Dimension to Gestalt Process / Alan Schwartz

Energy is synonymous with movement and process. Gestalt has taught us to be acutely aware of what and who we are and to allow this continuum of awareness to fuel our decision-making process. This process is incomplete without an understanding of how energy is restricted in a person's physical structure and how such restriction helps to keep us frustrated and out of touch with our process.

This extended workshop will be held in the synthesized gestalt/bioenergy environment. We will explore didactically the composition of human energy systems and the integration of the contributions of Reich, Fritz and Laura Perls, Lowen, Pierrakos, and those who are expanding their work today.

We will mobilize individual and group energy and use the experience to explore awareness and self-image on deeper, more organic levels. An important focus will be the achieving of stability (body, emotion, mental) and the application of this stability to life situations. $410

Opening-Experiencing the Joy of Your Inner Self Michael Butler

Everybody's beautiful in their own way.
—song by Ray Stevens

This workshop is to teach a way of opening up to the loving center of yourself. In that center is a reservoir of joy, understanding, and connectedness to other people. Everybody has moments in touch with it —those are times of feeling whole and complete. We will study how to systematically nurture that center and hold on to it in everyday life.

We will use ways of opening which are gentle, yet go deep. There will be music and chanting to open the heart, gentle physical exercises, talks, and sharing with each other. We will learn ways to grow through regular meditation, and participants will be taught a simple, natural way of meditating to continue the process of opening at home.

This workshop is appropriate for beginners as well as for those with experience in groups. Esalen's natural beauty will support us in our process of opening. $120

For workshop description see July 28–30. $120

Week of August 27 - September 1

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

For workshop description see July 16–21. $290

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $260

Gestalt Practice
Richard & Christine Price & the Esalen Staff

For workshop description see July 9–14. $290

Healthy Survival: Health Works / Donald Lindsay, MD

This will be a workshop in holistic medicine emphasizing prevention, health maintenance and experiential learning about body-psyche interrelations. The workshop includes body work at the Esalen baths. Bring sport clothes. Nurses will earn 30 units of Continuing Education credit for this workshop. $290

Opening the Feelings

RADIX NEO-REICHIAN WORKSHOPS
(formerly Interscience Workshops)

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this series of workshops which employ neo-Reichian techniques of emotional release. The Radix Intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, is practiced by Charles and Erica Kelley and their staff at the Radix Work Shop. The Intensive, like other neo-Reichian techniques used in these workshops, grew from the discovery by Charles Kelley's teacher, Wilhelm Reich, of the way in which feeling is rooted in the flow of energy in the body, and is blocked by chronic muscular contractions which Reich called the muscular armor. Freeing the armor enables the student to open feeling that is buried and to soften and free feeling that is too strong and has been held in for fear of explosion.

In these workshops armor is softened by simultaneous work on the character and body, using techniques not only from Reich, but also from bioenergetics, sensory awareness, and other body-oriented approaches. The participant/teacher ratio is kept small, never more than 10/1. Each weekend participant who wishes will receive an Intensive, while 5-day workshop participants receive two. By meeting sometimes in small groups and sometimes together in large groups, Radix combines the intimacy and individual attention of the small group with the energy and dynamism of the large. Grief or pain, fear, and rage that have been held in since childhood emerge in these workshops. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he/she discovers a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience changes profoundly as tender and sexual feelings for the mate intensify and merge.

SCHEDULE:

July 7–9	Mark Dunlap, Clair Killen, Sandy Thomas
August 4–6	Clair Killen, Fay Marie, Marsha Graham
September 3–8	Charles Kelley, Clair Killen, David Grill, Merri (Deverani) Goldenson, Laura DeNuccio
October 8–13	Dale Cummings, Siri Mishler, Ellen Jacobs

Weekend of September 1-3

✓ Awareness Through Movement
The Feldenkrais Method / Ruth Alon

This workshop is for people who are willing to introduce awareness through expanded patterns of movement for improving their functioning in life.

Exploring processes of movement, we gradually experience a wide variety of unused potential, while guided to meditate on the subtle qualities of our inner dynamics. Our vocabulary of possibilities widens together with our self image.

We relearn natural coordination and fluency, reviewing the primal evolution of the developing baby.

The style of pleasant effortless movement in the game of observed experiments, opens us to a nurturing attitude towards ourselves and our growth.

The new kinesthetic freedom creates space for transformed states of mind. $120

Tuning In / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

Many of us are operating as tape recorders. We switch on in the morning at "high" or "low" speed and play our tapes in response to the buttons being pushed by people or events. We are vaguely aware that life seems repetitive, or dull, that time is often something to be gotten through instead of savored, but this awareness is lost in the "noise" and business of day to day living.

This weekend will be devoted to bringing our attention to what we are doing—how we are really acting and feeling. Once we are aware of our feelings, we can go off automatic and begin to enjoy our interactions with one another. We will be using gestalt process, encounter, sensory awareness, and other techniques to tune in to ourselves and each other. $120

For workshop description see July 21–23. $120

Awakening the Magician Within / Emmett Miller

Whether or not we have as yet learned it, there is a magician within each of us. His magic wand is belief. If we believe we are sick, we are sick; if we believe we are afraid, we are afraid; if we believe we are stuck, we are stuck. But all coins, even magic ones, have two sides. If we believe we are growing stronger everyday, we are; if we believe we are free, we discover freedom all around us, if we believe in our creativity, our problems can joyfully solve themselves. In this seminar we will investigate and discover what truth there is in each of these statements for us, individually. Our explorations will be experiential, using techniques of deep relaxation, visualization, movement and selective awareness. As we learn to tap the wellsprings of our belief systems we will begin to write our own movie—and to deprogram negative future expectations. $120

Week of September 3-8

The Radix Experience: A Neo-Reichian Workshop
Charles Kelley, Clair Killen, David Grill, Merri (Deverani) Goldenson & Laura DeNuccio

The Radix experience is a direct body approach to deep emotional release, rooted in the work of Wilhelm Reich and his students. By concentrating on breaking patterns of breathing and muscular tension, feeling which has been blocked by chronic unconscious patterns of muscular tension called "muscular armor" is freed. As the armor softens and the student allows emotions—fear, anger, pain—to emerge, he realizes a new capacity for trust, love, and joy.

Half of the workshop sessions will be in a large group with Chuck Kelley who will present Radix group techniques. Chuck will also describe the concepts which underlie Radix and give an in-depth description of his training program. The other half of the sessions will be in small groups, and will include two individual Radix intensive sessions for each participant. $300

Creative Journaling: A Workshop for Honoring Personal Integrity & Consciousness / Dee Mundschenk

"Your treasure house is within
It contains all you will ever need.
Use it fully instead of seeking vainly outside yourself."
—Hui Hai

Creative journaling is designed for on-going self discovery. The vital self to be discovered is a personally unique center of clarity and creativity. Often as we go along creating our lives, that inner source of clarity is obscured by habits, assumptions, acquired appetites, past lessons, and the clamor of activities and expectations that vie for attention.

Through creative journaling, tai chi, meditations, body awareness, gestalt and psychosynthetic techniques, participants will use their own experiences to develop that stream of awareness and expression which reflects their individual integrity and potential. Whether participants are devoted seekers or casual explorers in the realm of personal integrity, the journal workshop will provide extensive opportunities for individual realization in the vast creative and receptive dimensions of personal evolution. Please bring a large loose leaf notebook. $270

✓ Deep Tissue Workshop / Al Drucker, Ryan Kopperud & Barbara Braunstein

This is an introduction to a deep form of body manipulation based on rolfing and acupuncture principles. It is part of an integrative approach to health and well-being. In addition to deep-tissue and acupuncture theory and practice sessions, there will also be sessions on nutrition, herbs, iridology, and homeopathy, depending on class interest. A spiritual practice of chanting and meditation will start the morning classes. An early morning tai chi, yoga, or feldenkrais class will also be available. Several evenings will be devoted to group process. Previous training in massage is advisable.

This is the last such workshop offered before Al's year-long sabbatical to India; a two month training program with Al in the natural healing arts, is tentatively scheduled for the late fall of 1979. $270

Weekend of September 8-10

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity / Robert Nadeau

For workshop description see August 6–11. $110

Kinetic Awareness / Judith Binetter

Moving teaches us to be alive to every moment. In this workshop we will explore how the living power of the circle appears in our movements and shapes our actions. The circle may appear as a curve, arc, or spiral labyrinth. In playing with the circular form, we will find out how we can surrender ourself to forces which shape our moving. $110

Presence: The Art of Being / Simone Surpin

Being can be seen as that inner source, still and full, from which all action springs. Like the silence that follows on the footsteps of a sound, our being continually is. It is the backdrop for all activity, complete knowledge and love rise from it and rest within it.

We will attend to this state of inner presence this weekend with meditation. We will bridge the inner space to the outer through our hearts with chanting. We will reflect, share experiences, practice gentle bodywork, take walks together and bask in that inner glow that comes from touching the Self. $110

For workshop description see July 2–7. $110

The Many Faces of the Self / Bette Dingman

Using guided fantasy, psychosynthesis exercises, and gestalt practice, we will explore the different "selves" within us in a safe environment. $110

Week of September 10-15

Awareness Through Movement: The Feldenkrais Method / Ruth Alon

For workshop description see September 1–3. $270

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

For workshop description see August 11–13. $270

Self-Centering / Leland Johnson & Mary Ann Merksamer

Self-centering is an intrapsychic life process much like a stone cast into a pond whose waters ripple outward in ever-widening circles. New concepts of learning/ways of being include body-mind integration methods, gestalt, intuitive problem solving, guided fantasy, yoga, meditation, breathing and music. We will use gestalt as the stone to integrate these experiences into our life process. The circle widens. Join us! $270

September 10–24

Health Practices & Medical Self Care
Donald Lindsay, MD

This workshop is about medical self care taught through lectures, discussion, demonstrations, and experiential sessions designed to evoke new patterns of healthful behavior.

I. Lectures, Discussion & Demonstrations

Participants will be taught to evaluate medical information and literature. Topics will include common causes of death, diagnostic decisions, medical judgment, holistic medicine, health and prevention as well as recognition and, where possible, self-treatment of the common illnesses of man. There will be training in physical self examination procedures, the use by the medical profession of laboratory tests, X-rays, and pathology slides will be demonstrated. Emergencies, hospitalization, surgery, medical insurance and medical costs will be topics for discussion.

II. Health Practices

Participants will be offered preventive health practices, yoga, meditation, daily jogging, massage, weight reduction, body work, diet, and exercises for strengthening the will and for increasing the capacity for self responsibility. There will be group process work and gestalt sessions with Richard Price and gestalt practice staff.

This program is the first phase of an ongoing program which will take place at Esalen. Recent discoveries in the prevention and treatment of our biggest killer arteriosclerosis point toward prevention and treatment methods that any person can do himself/herself. This discovery comes at a time when many people are demanding a voice in their own medical care and provides a sound foundation for the teaching of medical self care.

The workshop will take place at the Big House which provides a unique situation for diet, food preparation and close group interaction, plus an exquisite setting. Many of the participants will be housed there.

Enrollment is limited. Participants will be accepted and housed on a first come basis. To register, send a $200 deposit, your name, address, phone number, a recent photo and a note telling of your interests and any health problems to Dr Don Lindsay, MD, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920. All applications will be answered promptly. Early enrollment is advised. In case of non-acceptance, the deposit will be returned in full. The total fee of $575.00 covers tuition, shared accommodations and meals. Some partial scholarships will be available and awarded on the basis of need, for which a weekly work commitment is required. Scholarship applications will be sent on request. RN's and nurse practitioners will receive 60 contact hours of continuing education credit on completion. A complete tentative lesson plan will be sent on request. Nurses may take a single five day segment (September 10–15 or 17–22) of this workshop for 30 hours of continuing education credit at a cost of $270.

Let Go / Let Be / Betty Fuller

This workshop will include physical and mental stress reduction exercises, guided imagery, simple meditations and body methods such as feldenkrais, Trager and massage. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual follow up will be presented. The workshop schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths. $110

For workshop description see page 15. $100

Core Dynamics / Hector Prestera

Core Dynamics is a process for opening the inner self using high energy techniques involving physical release, body awareness, body energetics; all opening to intra-being. We will also use color reading and body reading to explore emotional-physical holdings.

Recommended reading: The Body Reveals, Prestera & Kurtz (Harper & Row and Bantam). $110

The Lawyer—A New Perspective
A Weekend for Lawyers presented by the Humanistic Law Institute

"like mounds in a sandy desert, intellectual knowledge is mounting up without provision for the expression of the heart."

—Meher Baba

As lawyers we were trained to use our heads and not our hearts—to make choices and decisions based upon "reason," "principles," and "issues" and not to trust feelings, intuition or compassion—often with less than satisfying results in our "professional" and/or "private" lives.

During this weekend we will explore and share with other lawyers, in the peaceful, reflective, nourishing, and evocative setting of Esalen, ways of using and integrating all aspects of ourselves—our bodies, our minds, our feelings, our "hearts" to see if we can make our work and our "private" lives more effective and more integrated, flowing, meaningful, and enjoyable.

The program will be conducted by a lawyer member of the HLI staff and another experienced group leader and will be largely experiential, using approaches and methods of gestalt awareness, psychosynthesis, massage, meditation, and bioenergetics. $110

Esalen Institute—An Approved Provider

The Board of Registered Nursing in the State of California has approved Esalen Institute as a provider of Continuing Education for Registered Nurses. Provider Number 01152

In accordance with Section 2811.5 of the California Nurse Practice Act, previously referred to as AB 3017, Registered Nurses must submit proof of attendance of continuing education to obtain license renewal. Thirty hours of continuing education are required every two years. For instance, if a nursing license expires April, 1978, the nurse must attend 30 hours of continuing education before March 30, 1980. Esalen is offering nurses the opportunity to meet this requirement in an evolving and attuned environment.

A certificate will be given to each nurse completing the approved workshops. The following workshops will be offered for Continuing Education Units:

July 14—16
Fear, Panic & Vulnerability to Crisis
Donald Lindsay, MD
For workshop description see page 13. 10 units

August 27—September 1
Healthy Survival: Health Works
Donald Lindsay, MD
For workshop description see page 23. 30 units

September 10—24
Health Practices & Medical Self Care
Donald Lindsay, MD
For workshop description see page 25. 60 units

October 6—8
Recent Developments in Nurse Healing Practices
Donald Lindsay, MD & Polly Kirby, RN
For workshop description see page 29. 10 units

Esalen has also filed application with the California Medical Association to provide programs offering continuing education credit for physicians. If you have any questions about Esalen's medical or nursing program, contact Donald Lindsay, MD, Coordinator of Continuing Medical Education, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

Emotion, Experience & Expression in the Body, Mind & Spirit / Betty Fuller

We will work holistically with the body, mind and spirit in the following ways:

Body: Alignment, relaxation, tension and stress reduction exercises including massage, Trager, feldenkrais, gestalt awareness and laughter.

Mind: Reprogram for high energy affirmative living. Clear emotional log jams and harness the juices of emotional experience by giving free rein to choice and response-ability.

Spirit: Fine tune the instrument of the bodymind to the power of "the Force" through guided imagery, meditation, music, movement, laughter and dance. Bring musical instruments. $270

Being PATIENT with Schizophrenia: A Different Way of Treatment
Julian Silverman & Bette Dingman

This workshop is concerned with a different way to "treat" acute-dis-ease in consciousness. It involves an approach of not interfering with a person's struggle. It involves being patient until the right moment—the moment when the struggle ceases and there is momentary ease. It involves the "therapist's" use of him/her SELF rather than therapeutic techniques. It involves an advance in the training of therapists. It involves a different way of understanding so-called schizophrenia dis-ease. $110

Lomi Work: An Exploration of the Body/Mind/Spirit Through Awareness

For workshop description see July 16–21. $110

Week of September 24-29

Everything You Ever Wanted To Have, But Were Afraid To Let Go Enough To Get / Judyth Weaver

This workshop will deal with ways in which we can learn how we are holding on and throwing ourselves off center and how we can let go and return closer to our natural balance. We will utilize Reichian breathing and movement techniques, sensing, meditation, movement, and an ancient form of balance and relaxation: tai chi chuan, to help us arrive closer to getting everything we've ever wanted but were holding on too tightly to let go to get! $270

Experiencing the Joy of Your Inner Self / Michael Butler

Within each of us is an untapped seed of emotional and spiritual energy which can be the source of great joy and love in our life—our own "inner self." All of us have moments in touch with it, and those are times when we are especially aware of our own beauty and strength. This workshop will teach ways to discover and nurture this loving center of yourself.

The methods of opening used are gentle, yet go deep—music and chanting to open the heart, gentle physical exercises, sharing our experiences with each other, meditation. We will study ways to grow through regular meditation, and participants will be taught a simple, natural way of meditating to continue the process of opening at home.

The workshop is appropriate both for those with group experience as well as for beginners. $270

Contact & Communication / A Gestalt Workshop
Beverly Silverman

How we contact and communicate with ourselves and with others determines the kind of world we live in. Working with simple concepts we can actually change our world. Focus will be on self-reference and opening our senses. $270

Massage & Deep Tissue Work—A Synthesis
Ryan Kopperud & Deborah Medow

This workshop will combine massage with principles of deep tissue work: a deep tissue massage. As we work together, participants will experience body restructuring and increased body awareness. To enhance our understanding and experience of body/mind/spirit in this work, daily morning yogic practices and late afternoon tai chi sessions will be offered.

Mind & Body: Techniques of Exploration and Transformation / Stanislav Grof, Christina Grof & Rick Tarnas

A four-week interdisciplinary program for professionals and students in the areas of psychiatry, psychology, general medicine, and philosophy. This workshop will focus on various ancient and modern approaches to body mind exploration with the aim of developing holistic understanding. We will explore the following areas:

Ancient Systems Suggesting Unity of Mind & Body
We will review the historical material on transpersonal physical feats, body transformation, and "mind-over-body" phenomena and compare these with some striking contemporary observations. Shamanic techniques of altering consciousness will be explored theoretically and experientially. We will also examine the system of Chinese philosophy and medicine, acupuncture, tai chi, shiatsu and aikido.

Modern Experiential Techniques of Psychosomatic Exploration
The approaches that will be examined in this context involve rolfing, feldenkrais, the Alexander method, neo-Reichian techniques, polarity and Esalen massage, gestalt, encounter and psychosynthesis. In a series of slide-illustrated discussions we will focus on LSD psychotherapy and the applications of psychedelic research for the understanding of body-mind relations.

Holistic Trends in Contemporary Medicine
We will focus on biofeedback techniques and voluntary control of internal states, Kundalini research, comprehensive work with cancer, and new approaches to birth and death. A special session will be dedicated to a discussion of modern physics as a basis for holistic medicine.

Self-Exploration and Group Process
Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators for an on-going process of intra-psychic and interpersonal exploration throughout the workshop.

The program is limited to 30 participants selected from applicants. The fee is $1150 including room and board. Some working scholarships are available for students on the basis of need. Scholarship forms can be obtained from Esalen Institute. Awareness & Freedom Through Movement & Dance: Feldenkrais Method & Dance
Ruth Alon & Nitza Broide Miller

This workshop is for people who are willing to expand their patterns of movement and dance for improving their feeling of well being in body and spirit.

The group will experience many feldenkrais processes that are like the grammar of spontaneity. In meditative exploration through various options, you will have an opportunity to restore organic motions, coordination and grace.

A natural flow of motion will facilitate relaxation and images. Through effortless movement and dance we'll let our images be restored and create a dance, allowing our body to free itself gently from old patterns. We'll learn to release tensions through movement and change postures that were created as a result of inhibited expressions within our environment.

We'll relearn the natural fluency, reviewing the primal evolution of the developing baby—enjoying its body sensations and pleasures, and its relationships to others through dance. $270

Take a Second Look at Yourself / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

We will focus on taking a good look at what is going on behind the masks we wear and what is underneath the expressions we put on our faces to confront the world. "Who are you?" and "Who do you pretend to be?" are the polarities we will be working with. Every one of us has a great deal of unused potential and I see the group experience as a safe place to begin to tap into this energy. This week will be entirely experiential using mirrors, gestalt, soft-encounter, and sensory awareness. $270

For workshop description see July 21–23. $270

Weekend of September 29 - October 1

Dance Rituals / Anna & Daria Halprin
San Francisco Dancers' Workshop

We will explore ways to create our own personal and group rituals out of dance and our own life themes. The body will be our focus and we will use the creative process to bring into harmony and balance the thinking, feeling and moving body. The outdoor setting of Esalen will provide settings for some of our sessions. We will include visualizations in relation to movement, group interplay and sharing. $110

A Weekend with Will Schutz

Introduction to Shiatsu Massage / Patricia Caldwell

Shiatsu is the oriental art in which the hands are used to apply pressure to points on the body. Emphasis will be on self-awareness for both the receiver and the giver, providing the experience of expanding shiatsu practice into one's life as the experience of moving in the world without effort, and with the flow. A working knowledge of shiatsu in both theory and practice will be given. $110 per person

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

For workshop description see August 11–13. $110

Weekend of October 6 - 8

Awakening the Magician Within / Emmett Miller

For workshop description see September 1–3. $110

Recent Developments in Nurse Healing Practices
Donald Lindsay, MD & Polly Kirby, RN

This workshop gives an overview of recent developments in non-traditional methods of holistic healing, presenting alternative methods to the practicing nurse. Using experiential methods the nurse explores herself as healer, discovering her preferences and potential for healing. Various healing models will be discussed including the present scientific medical model. Concepts of health and disease will be developed within their historical and conceptual contexts demonstrating differences, similarities and limitations. Nurses earn 10 continuing education units. $110

Introduction to Gestalt Practice / Joan Fiore

After introducing the "language" of gestalt and various gestalt experiments in breath, body, and feeling awareness, this workshop concentrates on providing the opportunity for intensive individual gestalt work in a supportive group setting. Suitable for novices as well as veterans. $110

Week of October 8-13

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop
Dale Cummings, Siri Mishler & Ellen Jacobs

For workshop description see page 23. $300

Symbols in Personal Growth
Ralph Metzner & Angie Arrien

This seminar is an intensive experiential study of symbols as tools of personal growth. Symbols can expand one's perception of self and others, increase insight and stimulate new areas of self-expression and creativity. We will consider a variety of symbols: psychologically, as archetypes of individuation, and cross-culturally, as universal constants. The symbols to be studied and experienced include: sun and moon, trees, flowers, circles/wheels/mandalas, totem animals, light and fire, the elements, sacred mountains, the body and its parts, the journey/path, and others. Some of the sources of symbolism that we will draw on are astrology, alchemy, the tarot, mythology and folklore of all cultures. Special attention will be given to the uses and significance of symbols in dreams, art and the helping professions. Special symbolic creative projects will be part of the seminar. $270

Gestalt Intensive / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop provides the time, the space, the license, the opportunity to move forward at your own pace along your own path—from dis-ease to ease, from fragmented to whole, from self-discounting to self-validating, from role-playing to authentic self-expression, from helpless victim of, to active participant in, your personal destiny—or from wherever you happen to be coming to wherever you're growing. You might explore your dreams, your tensions, your madness or your options; take room to breathe or to explode, soak in nurture or exorcise demons, finish past unfinished business or examine present concerns. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to experiment with the quality of interpersonal contact through group interactions. $270

Dance of Shiva / Gabrielle Roth

For workshop description see July 14–16. $110

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $100

Inner Love / Simone Surpin

In each of us exists a place where we can merge in and with a certain kind of love: a love that is the source of our inner being; a love that is not dependent on something outside of itself for sustenance; a love that renews itself and clears our vision of ourselves and of others.

As purely and as simply as possible, we will attempt to explore and experience this state; to touch these experiences with our minds and share them outside ourselves.

We will meditate, chant, do gentle body work practices, and learn about energy flows. Each session will be a blend of both didactic and experiential work. Some time will also be taken for silent walks together in the country. $110

Week of October 15-20

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

For workshop description see July 16–21. $270

Five Days with Jack Rosenberg

My current focus is on enjoying life to the fullest and bringing the clearest expression of my self to each moment. Many people describe what I do as gestalt body work with a transpersonal bend.

During the workshop we will cover many aspects of my energetic approach to sexuality as well as working with the body energy field and the belief system which keeps us locked in obsolete behavior patterns. Where you are is where we will start. $270

Gestalt Practice
Richard & Christine Price & the Esalen Staff

For workshop description see July 9–14. $270

Weekend of October 20-22

Astrology: A Map of the Psyche / Robert Hand

Carl Jung once stated that astrology contained within its teachings the sum total of the psychological knowledge of the ancients. The point of this workshop will be to show the validity of this statement expressed in modern terms.

Many people have tried to make astrology fit into various systems of modern psychology. Here we will explore the extent to which astrology is, in itself, a complete system of psychology, which makes its own statements about human nature, and which suggests rather surprising consequences for ideas of human life and behavior.

Little or no previous knowledge of astrology will be required in this workshop. We will be concerned largely with the symbolism and its psychological import, not especially with the techniques of horoscope analysis. Any material of a technical nature that is needed in the workshop will be introduced as we go along. $110

For workshop description see September 24–29. $110

Exploring Self-Acceptance / David Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter techniques, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $110

Week of October 22 - 27

Be Your Own Author-ity / Beverly Silverman
For workshop description see August 13–18. $270

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff
For workshop description see page 15. $240

Personal Integrity / Exploring Self Esteem
David Schiffman
For workshop description see August 13-20. $270

Weekend of October 27 - 29

Sport & the Human Potential / Michael Murphy, Bob Kriegel & Al Lewis

Sport often evokes levels of consciousness and performance that go far beyond our ordinary everyday experience. These extraordinary athletic experiences have given many people glimpses of a larger aspect of mind or self. The three leaders of this seminar have been exploring this aspect of sport. Bob Kriegel is the author of the bestselling Inner Skiing (with Tim Galway). Al Lewis has translated and studied Russian work with psychic self-regulation. Michael Murphy has been exploring the psychological and spiritual sides of sport and has just finished a book on the subject. They will discuss their own research and introduce the seminar participants to methods of visualization, meditation and self-hypnosis, and to various Russian techniques of self-control that can be applied to sports in general. Bob Kriegel will also lead "inner game" sessions that he and Tim Galway have developed which have direct application to everyday life. $110

Family Circles / Paul Rebillot

Family Circles is a process that provides a ritual setting to help counter and destroy negative programs subconsciously operating in our lives and replace them with positive, supportive experiences.

During the workshop you will be able to protest and feel your full power against all the "you can'ts" and "no's" you were taught as a child. With the support of the group you will have an opportunity to "beat down" the negative images that hold you back and plant in their place new affirmations of yourself that will support your expansion. $110

Workshops of more than one week require special planning for participants. Whenever possible we will announce such workshops well in advance. More detailed descriptions—and any changes—will appear in the catalog covering the period in which the workshop is scheduled.

November 5 - December 1

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth / David Schiffman with the Esalen Staff

This month-long community workshop will provide the opportunity for participants to clarify and develop their own ability, style, and artfulness as facilitators, as well as to do in-depth personal work and training in gestalt, body work, psychosynthesis techniques, journal processing, and meditative practices.

The workshop will be structured to include: intensive individual work, supervised observations, practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills, video feedback, journal keeping and didactic-theoretical sessions. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective on the nature and process of evolution.

December 3–15

Gestalt Practice / Richard & Christina Price with the Esalen Gestalt Staff

DEFINITIONS

PSYCHOSYNTHESIS

Psychosynthesis is a psychological and educational approach for recognizing and harmonizing the many, often conflicting, elements of our inner lives. It is a developmental process based on a positive conception of man/woman within an evolving universe. Starting with each person's existential situation as he or she perceives it, personal growth is organized into a process aiming at the integration of personality and the emergence of an effective unifying center of being and awareness, the Self. The practical work of psychosynthesis chooses in each situation the appropriate progressive activities among many techniques and methods available. Some of these are: guided imagery, movement, self-identification, creativity, gestalt, meditation, training of the will, symbolic art work, journal keeping, ideal models, and development of intuition. The emphasis is on fostering an ongoing process of growth that can gain momentum and bring about a more joyful, balanced actualization of one's life.

MASSAGE

Massage is a healing art. It is practiced to help the body relax, to release tensions, to balance the energy flow, and to soothe the being with gentle caring. Massages are given individually; workshops, classes, and private lessons are available.

T'AI CHI CHUAN

T'ai Chi Chuan is an ancient Chinese exercise discipline practiced for health, meditation, energy flow, and self-defense. The slow, flowing movements of this "shadow boxing" comprise the oldest and "softest" of the Asian martial arts. Developed from the Chinese practice of nei kung, or inner exercise, it is part of the system of Taoist yoga. The term t'ai chi can be translated as "grand ultimate" and is expressed by the familiar symbol of yang and yin. It is thus rooted in the Chinese philosophy of change as expressed in the I Ching.

SHIATSU MASSAGE

Shiatsu massage is the oriental healing art in which the hands are used to apply pressure to acupuncture points over the entire body, allowing the springs of life to flow.

BIOENERGETIC ANALYSIS

Bioenergetic analysis attempts to understand the life of the body through its expression of vitality, gesture, emotion, feeling, and relationship. The body is viewed as an energetic process that participates as the world in the world of instinctual, social, imaginative, and creative realms. Bioenergetics seeks to develop an individual's range of expression by working through this process.

ENCOUNTER

The ground rules of encounter are that participants be open and honest in a group setting, that they avoid mere theorizing and instead talk about their feelings and perceptions. There is often an emphasis on eliciting emotions which lead to positive or negative confrontations rather than away from them. The focus of encounter is to explore interpersonal relations. Over the past years encounter, as practiced at Esalen, has evolved into a broad approach incorporating several related disciplines to achieve its aims. Techniques and insights gained from gestalt, sensory awareness, bioenergetics, massage, movement, and structural integration are all part of Esalen's encounter groups today.

GESTALT

Gestalt Awareness Training is a theory and approach to personality integration first developed by Fritz and Laura Perls, though new styles and methods are being developed by other leaders. The goal of the training is to assist the participants to utilize excitement and awareness and to develop responsibility. Excitement—to have life energy freely available and flowing, not blocked. Awareness—to be conscious of my energy as and where it flows; to have action accessible to consciousness, not happening mechanically. Responsibility—to know and act on the principle that I am the one who acts, thinks, and feels whatever it may be that I act, think, or feel. No one else or no event influences me except with my consent. At times, everyone in the workshop may work simultaneously with some awareness exercise, or in interaction with each other. More traditionally, a fair amount of time will be spent with participants working individually with the leader. The starting point for such individual work is whatever is here and now of most involving concern for the organism: a fantasy or dream, an interaction with another person, a memory, or a physical posture. "Problems" are welcome as starting points, if they are truly present and not merely verbally presented. In keeping with the gestalt emphasis on personal responsibility, the leader usually leaves the initiative for such work with the participants. The assumption is made that participants are not "patients" but are persons responsible for their own life decisions.

STRUCTURAL INTEGRATION (ROLFING)

Structural Integration or Rolfing is a method of deep manipulation of the muscuio-skeletal system that aims at balancing the major segments of the body. We have learned that connective tissue (fascia, tendons, ligaments) can be lengthened by palpation and direct manipulation; this makes it possible to reorganize the basic body lines. A properly organized body will be subject to less stress and will move in a more economical way. Structural Integration has a second principle: posture is behavior. Humans are psychophysical organisms; one cannot divorce their physical from their psychological functions. When you change the structure, you change the function.

FRIENDS OF ESALEN provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available to a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to the knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

THE ESALEN CATALOG is published quarterly. Subscription cost for one year is $2 for the United States, $4 for Canada and Mexico, $8 for Europe and South America and $10 for all other countries. Please make all payments in U S currency. Those attending Esalen workshops and conferences are automatically added to the mailing list for one year. A single inspection copy of the current issue is available free upon request from Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

CONTRIBUTIONS to Esalen Institute are tax deductible.

ACCREDITATION: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs

RECORDINGS OF ESALEN PROGRAMS: For a catalog of recordings of Esalen / San Francisco programs contact Big Sur Recordings, 2015 Bridgeway, Sausalito, California 94965. They also have Big Sur programs prior to 1973.

Commercial use of Esalen program tapes is prohibited; all rights are reserved.

FILMS of the work of Fritz Perls, Carl Rogers, Abraham Maslow, Rollo May, Virginia Satir, Alexander Lowen, and others are available from Psychological Films, 205 West 20th Street, Santa Ana, California 92706. The rubber stamp and stencil prints in this issue are based on California Indian myths and totem animals. The sequence on pages 8, 11, 13, 15 and the cover illustrate the following myth: Long ago, Old-Man-Above could not see through the dark to the new earth. Nor could he step down to it, it was so far below. He bored a hole in the sky with a large stone. Then he shoved ice and snow through the hole till it piled up in a great cone on the flat earth (Mt. Shasta). Then stepping down from cloud to cloud, he reached the earth. The sun shone through the hole in the sky and began to melt the snow. Old-Man poked holes in the snow with his fingers and then shook himself hard. The feathers that fell out of his cape landed in the finger holes and became trees, and the melting snows became rivers and nourished the trees. Then Old-Man blew on the leaves and they became the birds. He took a stick and broke it into pieces. From the small end, the pieces became fish. From the middle the pieces became all the other animals except Grizzly, who was made from the big end of the stick. He was the strongest of all and walked on two feet and carried a club. Old-Man became afraid of what he had created, so he hollowed out the inside of the big cone of ice and snow and made himself a house. There he stayed for many snows — the Indians know this because of the smoke that used to come out of the smokehole of the house. But there has been no smoke for a long time. Old-Man has gone back to the sky.

On page 20 we see Coyote in a story telling of how the Indians were so hot in the daytime they persuaded Coyote to take his bow and arrow and wait for the sun to rise and then to shoot it. He did this nine times. Then the Indians were so cold at night they got Coyote to shoot the cold moon. He did this nine times. Then the Indians were satisfied.

Registration Information

For reservations and information, write or call:
Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.
Phone: (408) 667-2335, 10 to 3:30 every day;
10 to 8 Sunday & Friday.

Unless otherwise indicated, all programs listed in this brochure are residential programs in Big Sur. Send reservations for all programs to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute—By Reservation Only.

Fee Information: We require a reservation fee of $20 for weekend groups, $70 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs. Please mail all reservations to Esalen/Big Sur. Balance of payment is due on arrival. Esalen accepts Mastercharge, Bankamericard, and American Express. U S currency only, please.

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for a long term Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation (allow at least 3 weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—August 31 programs or for weekend programs.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has no short term child care facilities. Please do not plan to bring children. We also ask workshop participants not to have guests. Alas, no pets.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5—5:30 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying, or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

The theme of this issue is the process of maturing and the ways we can reestablish vital connections between our generations. We would especially like to draw your attention to the illustrations on pages 4 through 8. They are taken from Balinese Character, the pioneering cultural study by Gregory Bateson and Margaret Mead, done in 1928 and 1929.

Who's Responsible at Esalen?

We have long regarded Esalen Institute as an educational laboratory. Our evolving philosophical and operational positions reflect this regard. Underlying it all is a baseline ethic of "self-awareness and self-responsibility." However re-presented and operationalized in the past, by us or by others, this ethic continues to be the basis for our world view, and following from this, our educational approach. The self-awareness/self-responsibility ethic has grown and stabilized out of at least two generations of weighty dis-illusioning social and political events—all connected by a common reminder:

> Give away your personal faculties of discernment, of evaluation, of self-reference, and you lose your integrity (your wholeness). "Take responsibility for your every thought, your every feeling, your every action," said our beloved friend and teacher, Fritz Perls.

We view the implications of this position as being social as well as personal. They concern the ways we relate to ourselves and others.

In our position as educators, we invite people to take responsibility for their whole life situation while at Esalen. This includes taking responsibility for who they select as their teachers, their leaders, their gurus, their authority figures . . . and so on—and to be aware, whenever possible, what effect this has on them. We, of necessity, are setting up a situation for our seminarians to learn the practice of self-responsibility from the time they consider selecting a workshop, not just during the workshop. In effect, we are asking that this self-responsibility attitude be present in the initial contact with Esalen. Ideally, the same attitude will pervade after a workshop when our seminarians go back to the community and seek out others—physicians, teachers, counselors, mental health professionals, etc.

As we have become more thoughtful and self-critical about the overall direction of Esalen we have begun to concentrate on enhancing our basic offering—the Esalen environment and life style. Our primary emphasis is not on teaching particular truths or personal and interpersonal techniques for daily life; rather our primary concern is with a particular consciousness and developing an environment to support the evolution of that consciousness—the consciousness of self-awareness/self-responsibility.

Food for Thought

SYMPTOMS, SYNDROMES AND SYSTEMS

Gregory Bateson

There is a proverb that those who live in glass houses—and especially those who share glass houses—should hesitate to throw stones at each other; and I think it is appropriate to remind every occidental reader of this essay that he lives in the same glass house with the medical profession, along with the Christian religion, the Industrial Revolution and the educational system of which the others are products.

In other words, we all share in a tangle of presuppositions many of which have ancient origins. As I see it our troubles have their roots in this tangle of presuppositions many of which are nonsense. Rather than point the finger of blame at one or another of the parts of our whole system—the wicked doctors, the wicked industrialists, the wicked professors—we should take a look at the foundations and nature of the system itself.

It makes but little sense to accuse the doctors of not using holistic spectacles when they look at their patients, if we shirk the holistic vision at the very moment of our accusation.

Under the holistic lens, our criticism of the doctors becomes clearly an ignoring of the total system within which we and the doctors have our existence, and that system includes the whole of our contemporary civilization. It would not be "holistic" to concentrate all our attention upon the symptoms of something wrong and, at the same time, to accuse the doctors of seeing only symptoms.

I ask then what is it—what sort of habit of mind is it—that leads to paying too much attention to symptoms and too little to system? And I ask this question knowing surely that I have two places in which to look for an answer. One of these is in the natural history of medical institutions, doctors and patients, and the other is in the remainder of the civilization. Can we recognize "symptomatophobia" in our universities, our churches, our economic institutions and our family relations?

Let me examine first a social symptom where we can see what's happening. After that we can look at a physiological symptom where what is happening is hidden inside the body. Think of traffic. There are too many cars on the roads and too many restless people; and too much pollution of the atmosphere by the cars. Altogether that makes up what the doctors call a "syndrome," a sort of symptoms.

Of course this syndrome really has its roots in over-population and unwisely applied engineering skill, and in medical victories over epidemics. Public health, just like individual medicine is symptom-activated. We all share in the pathology which we would blame on the doctors.

At the social level, what happens is simple: somebody gets paid to make the pathological trend more comfortable. We treat the symptoms—we make more roads for the more cars, and we make more and faster cars for the restless people; and when people (very properly) die of over-eating or pollution, we try to strengthen their stomachs or their lungs (insurance companies hate death). For over-population, we build more houses. And so on.

That is the paradigm: treat the symptom to make the world safe for the pathology. But, it's a little worse than that: we even look into the future and try to see the symptoms and discomforts coming. We predict the jamming of traffic on the highways and invite bids for government contracts to enlarge the roads for cars that do not yet exist. In this way, millions of dollars get committed to the hypotheses of future increase in pathology.

So, the doctor who concentrates upon the symptoms runs the risk of protecting or fostering the pathology of which the symptoms are parts.

So—what about pain? There are several answers to the problem of pain, several strategies for dealing with it: (1) Get a local anaesthetic and get rid of it; or, more radically cut the sensory nerve serving the painful part. But these methods of symptomatic treatment make sense—if at all—only if the message of the pain is being heard and attended to. (2) Grin and bear it. Again, this could only make sense after the message has been assimilated. (3) Attend to—and perhaps treat—this systematic context in which the pain was generated, i.e. act upon the message of the pain.

I have often wondered why pain is so persistent—why does it go on after its existence has been noted? I think the answer is that the message of pain changes as the pain persists. A new pain simply calls attention to the part which hurts, and if this were the only message of pain, the owner of the pain would simply be influenced by the pain in the direction of curing only the symptom. But pain can go on and on—and then the message changes. The owner is forced (or should be forced) to examine and perhaps treat larger areas of relevance. He should be driven from symptom consciousness to attend to the larger system.

But the problem is still how to jump from thinking about the part to thinking about the whole.

In biology there are no values which have this characteristic that if something is good, then more of that something will be better. Economists seem to think that this is true of money but, if they are right, money is thereby shown to be certainly unbiological and perhaps antibiological. For the rest, good things come in optima, not maxima. For every desirable substance or experience there is an optimum amount such that more than optimum is toxic. This is obviously true of such good things as oxygen, calcium, food, entertainment, clothes, psychotherapy, rage and perhaps even love. All become toxic when consumed in excessive quantities.

Any part of any biological whole must stay in proportinate size; if it becomes bigger, the part must always be a threat or a danger to the whole. So it begins to look as if the difficulty may be related to the almost unimaginable change of sign.

It is easy to see that if there are too many automobiles, a lot more roads will make matters worse. It is not so easy to see that more automobiles might make people see the larger gestalt more clearly.

During World War II, I was able to do one interesting thing—I was able to establish in Chittagong a small radio station aimed at the enemy-occupied areas of Burma, Thailand and Malaya. The station was planned to neutralize enemy propaganda. So the propagandic policy was simple: we listened to the enemy's nonsense and we professed to be a Japanese official station. Every day we simply exaggerated what the enemy was telling people. We argued that the enemy would probably tell lies as big as he dared and therefore that it would be a good idea (from our point of view) to have him appear to tell still bigger lies. Exaggerating the symptom . . .

Food for Thought

I always suspect that patients in psychotherapy exaggerate their traumatic histories and their symptoms by a factor of about three; and that this is good for them.

And then there is the very interesting theory which lies behind homeopathic medicine. If you suffer from a syndrome of symptoms, x, y, and z; you should find a poison which would in normal doses cause the same set of symptoms. This drug you should take in microscopic doses to get a reversed effect.

I am suggesting, you see, that we and the doctors are not merely hooked on the habit of over-attention to symptoms, we are also hooked on the habit of thinking in material terms. We all think that pharmacology and the science of traffic limitation are quantitative sciences; that if much is bad than a little more will be worse. But, in truth, this is often not so. We live, rather, in a world of pattern and communication, a world of ideas, and in that world all theories of dosage are partly upside-down. In the purely material world there could be no irony and a monstrous lack of humor of all kinds. But in the world of patterns and ideas, irony is everywhere; and by irony you may (perhaps) reach that small enlightenment which is a moment of seeing the larger gestalt. ■

CONSCIOUSNESS:

An Interview with Julian Jaynes by Sam Keen

This interview is excerpted from the November, 1977 issue of Psychology Today. It is reprinted by permission of Sam Keen.

Sam Keen: Your theory about the origin of consciousness is at least audacious and perhaps preposterous. It is hard to believe that human consciousness is a mere 3,000 years old, that the ancient Greeks did not introspect, had no volition, and did not make self-conscious decisions. And it strains common sense to think that whole civilizations were directed by auditory hallucinations, by what appeared to be the voices of the gods. How did you come to such conclusions?

Julian Jaynes: By weaving different strands of evidence together to form a picture. There are three basic ideas that can be separated from each other, and can be independently true or false. The first is the idea of consciousness as an analogy of the world built up on the basis of metaphor, which is a means of understanding an unknown thing by comparing it to something else with which we are more familiar. The second is the idea of the bicameral mind, namely, that the minds of ancient peoples were in two parts, an executive part called a god and a follower part called man. And the third is the idea that the neurology of the two parts of the bicameral mind is rooted in differences between the right and left hemispheres of the brain.

Keen: Let's begin with consciousness. Where did it come from? What is it? And where did your ideas come from?

Jaynes: For as long as I can remember, I have been on a quest for the origin of consciousness, as one might seek the source of the Nile, and I made a lot of false starts. I first went into philosophy with the hope that I could understand this interior space we call consciousness. But after going through Kant's Critique of Pure Reason and various epistemologies, I felt that we had to be out in the world gathering data to get anywhere. And that was, and is, psychology. Looking at the physiological and biological basis of mind quickly led me to ideas of its evolution. So I began the study of the evolution of consciousness by studying the evolution of learning. In my graduate training at Yale, where I went for that purpose, the faculty didn't know quite what to do with me. The mood of academic psychology at that time was behavioristic, not really biological, and I was determined to study the whole evolution of mind. I began running paramecia and protozoa through little T mazes, all in the blissfully absurd notion that I was researching consciousness.

It was only much later that I realized what a false trail that was, and that the problem of consciousness required a great deal more thinking out than simply having fun in a laboratory with the first experiment that came to mind. Studying history showed me that every age had a different metaphor for consciousness, and that the metaphors for what goes on within the mind come from the "external" world. Consciousness has been seen as a microcosm of the macrocosm, as a blank slate on which experience writes, as a camera that copies reality, as a computer. And it has been widely assumed that consciousness was necessary for learning, reasoning, forming concepts, making judgments, and that it was somehow located somewhere in the head.

I began to suspect that consciousness is a much smaller part of our mental life than we have assumed.

Keen: What is consciousness not?

Jaynes: It is not the mere response to a stimulus, nor is it the "sum total of mental processes occurring now," as E B Titchener was wont to say. It is not necessarily involved in learning, in forming concepts, nor even in creative reasoning. Often consciousness is a hindrance to learning and performing skills. We are conscious much less of the time than we think we are. It is difficult to realize this because we cannot be conscious of times when we are not conscious. Consciousness knits itself over the gaps and gives us the illusion of continuity. Discovering how much we are unconscious is like asking a flashlight in a dark room to discover something that has no light shining on it. Nor does consciousness photograph experience and store pictures which memory later retrieves. And it does not have a location.

Keen: What remains after the strip-tease? Is consciousness merely reflecting on ourselves? Is it reduced to self-consciousness? Cogito ergo sum?

Jaynes: Consciousness is a space in the mathematical sense. As one can have operator functions in mathematics, so one can have operator functions in this space we call consciousness. When we talk about what goes on in this mind-space, we use metaphors taken from physical behavior in actual space. We speak of "seeing clearly," of "deep" or "shallow" minds, of "pursuing" a problem or "grasping" a solution. Just as the words we use to describe what goes on in consciousness are metaphors, so the mind-space in which these functions take place is likewise metaphorical. The subjective, conscious mind is an analog of the real world that is generated by metaphors.

When I am asked to define consciousness, I get quite academic. In defining anything, there are logically two parts: a denotative definition, in which you point at something like this chair, and a constitutive definition, in which you describe the function of the chair and how it is made. The denotative definition of consciousness is introspection. The constitutive definition is the theory I present about the features and functions of consciousness.

Keen: One minute, please! I just felt my "self" disappear down the cosmic drain. The thinking self suddenly has been swallowed by its functions. Consciousness is a metaphorical mind-space in which things happen in a metaphorical way that reflect the world we understand only by metaphor. It is a mirror we hold up in which we simultaneously see ourselves and the world through the medium of metaphor. Now my question: Who is Julian Jaynes? Who is the "I" doing the thinking? What's in back of your mirror?

Jaynes: The "I" doing my conscious thinking is a point in a relationship, like a mathematical point. It is not the self, which is a quite different construction. This is what I call an "Analog I" that can move around in imagination and do things my body is not actually doing. Coming to a fork in a road, this Analog I can imagine itself traveling in either direction; I can vicariously observe my imagined self drinking from a stream or struggling along the high road, and can make a decision about which road to take. This Analog I is the agent my mind has created by metaphor who does the internal spectating.

Keen: You made the point earlier that every age has its favorite metaphors for understanding consciousness. When you want to understand consciousness, you go immediately to language. In the beginning is the word. We are the stuff of which poetry is made.

Jaynes: I have tried to show how consciousness is constructed out of language and metaphor. Take, for instance, the abstract concepts of science. Originally, the word "inertia" referred to an indolent person and "acceleration" to increasing one's steps. And now we even have concepts like charm and black holes. Even the verb "to be" was generated from a metaphor. It comes from the Sanskrit bhu—"to grow

You Are Your Own Feedback

Julian Silverman

Some of the best contemporary thought on human consciousness has arrived on the intellectual scene with a revolutionary message. Never in our history have the implications been so clear. In essence the message says:

The way you experience the world depends
Upon the way you "make sense" out of it,
Upon your point of view,
Upon the way you organize the in-formation,
Upon the way you pay attention to what you do.

Whether you turn to the holographic theory of the neurologist Karl Pribram, the "cartography of inner space" formulations of the cyberneticist Roland Fischer, or the spiritual teachings of the highly intelligent mystic Krishnamurti, the message is the same. And what a ponderous, difficult message it is—at least for now!

At the intellectual, theoretical level, it is presently an exciting and relatively new form. The scientific research is fascinating, the ideas formidable in their implications, the framework open and all encompassing. A new image of being is taking shape, one that may at last co-ordinate, in a coherent pattern, the scientific and the mystical.

At the non-intellectual, experiential, "nitty-gritty" level, the approach is less acceptable, more difficult to grasp. This is because there are fundamental implications here that most of us are not yet ready to acknowledge: to take in as our own.

The notion that "you are your own feedback"/"you are the world" implies that you are responsible for the whole of your life:

There is no one else to blame for everything, good or bad, that happens to you.
Good or bad depends upon your interpretation,
Your point of view,
On what you do to make "it" good or bad.
If I "want things to be better," it is "my" wanting.
The ways I express my wanting, what I do about my wanting, with ease or dis-ease, are my choices.
My experiences are the feedback from my choices, my doings, my perceptions.
My experience is, to a large extent, my creation.

Even if this realization leads to peace, freedom, wholeness—at present, this is too much to accept for all but the most advanced.

—From Notes from an Esalen Director's Handbook by Julian Silverman with Wendy Ovaitt (in press)

CHILDHOOD AND OLD AGE

Cynthia Scott

The following represents a fantasy for program evolution at Esalen. It focuses on the integration of the "whole family" approach, including children and elders in the ongoing program design.

Historically the human potential movement has focused on people in their mid years, twenties to fifties. On either side spreads the psychic abyss of the non-people—the children, teens and elders who comprise a healthy proportion of our society.

There is need for serious re-thinking of our approach as a society to the needs of these groupings. We, as a culture, have paid little attention to the two major events that herald the inaguration and cessation of these developmental times: birth and death. Traditionally we have approached these states with trepidation and fear. The societal mechanism that we have evolved to contain these events, the hospital, has proven lacking in the provision of compassionate care for these times of transition. The family unit has, in many instances, lost its control of these times, surrounded by medical mystic and malpractice necessity.

The next step in our evolution seems to be a refocusing of energy on the two ends of our human continuum and creating some new models and rituals for these times.

This is occurring simultaneously at both ends of the spectrum as can be seen in the increasing interest in Leboyer style non-violent birthing and Hospice approach to terminal illness. Both of these approaches contain a similar focus on increased sensitivity to the person, with their interpersonal and spiritual needs highlighted. We are beginning to see that the process of birthing and dying are intimately intertwined and require structures of similar sensitivity to facilitate the important transitions these events demarcate.

ESALEN PROGRAMS

October 1–27

Mind & Body: Techniques of Exploration and Transformation / Stanislav Grof, Christina Grof & Rick Tarnas

A four-week interdisciplinary program for professionals and students in the areas of psychiatry, psychology, general medicine, and philosophy. This workshop will focus on various ancient and modern approaches to body-mind exploration with the aim of developing holistic understanding. We will explore the following areas:

Ancient Systems Suggesting Unity of Mind & Body

We will review the historical material on supernormal physical feats, body transformation, and "mind-over-body" phenomena and compare these with some striking contemporary observations. Shamanic techniques of altering consciousness will be explored theoretically and experientially. We will also examine astrology, the system of Chinese philosophy and medicine, acupuncture, tai chi, shiatsu and aikido.

Modern Experiential Techniques of Psychosomatic Exploration

The approaches that will be examined in this context involve rolfing, feldenkrais, the Alexander method, neo-Reichian techniques, polarity and Esalen massage, gestalt, encounter, psychosynthesis, and Dora Kalff's sandplay. In a series of slide-illustrated discussions we will focus on LSD psychotherapy and the applications of psychedelic research for the understanding of body-mind relations.

Holistic Trends in Contemporary Medicine

We will focus on biofeedback techniques and voluntary control of internal states, Kundalini research, comprehensive work with cancer, and new approaches to birth and death. A special session will be dedicated to a discussion of modern physics as a basis for holistic medicine.

Self-Exploration and Group Process

Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators for an on-going process of intra-psychic and interpersonal exploration throughout the workshop.

The program is limited to 30 participants selected from applicants. The fee is $1150 including room and board. Some working scholarships are available for students on the basis of need. Scholarship forms can be obtained from Esalen Institute. If you wish to enroll in the workshop, send a letter of biographical information to: Mind and Body, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

Week of October 1-6

Awareness & Freedom Through Movement & Dance
Feldenkrais Method & Dance
Ruth Alon & Nitza Broide Miller

This workshop is for people who are willing to expand their patterns of movement and dance for improving their feeling of well being in body and spirit.

The group will experience many feldenkrais processes that are like the grammar of spontaneity. In meditative exploration through various options, you will have an opportunity to restore organic motions, coordination and grace.

A natural flow of motion will facilitate relaxation and images. Through effortless movement and dance we'll let our images be restored and create a dance, allowing our body to free itself gently from old patterns. We'll learn to release tensions through movement and change postures that were created as a result of inhibited expressions within our environment.

We'll relearn the natural fluency, reviewing the primal evolution of the developing baby — enjoying its body sensations and pleasures, and its relationships to others through dance. $270

Take a Second Look at Yourself / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

We will focus on taking a good look at what is going on behind the masks we wear and what is underneath the expressions we put on our faces to confront the world. "Who are you?" and "Who do you pretend to be?" are the polarities we will be working with. Every one of us has a great deal of unused potential and I see the group experience as a safe place to begin to tap into this energy. This week will be entirely experiential using mirrors, gestalt, soft-encounter, and sensory awareness. $270

Massage Intensive / The Esalen Massage Crew

The members of the massage crew, each with their own unique style, will give instruction and help the group to practice basic techniques of massage upon one another: sensory awareness, deep muscular massage, joint articulation, polarity. As we learn to feel with our hands how the body and the life-force within it works, we learn to release tensions in others and to be more fully aware of ourselves.

The group meets daily in the mineral baths. $270

Weekend of October 6-8

Awakening the Magician Within / Emmett Miller

Whether or not we have as yet learned it, there is a magician within each of us. His magic wand is belief. If we believe we are sick, we are sick; if we believe we are afraid, we are afraid; if we believe we are stuck, we are stuck. But all coins, even magic ones, have two sides. If we believe we are growing stronger every day, we are; if we believe we are free, we discover freedom all around us, if we believe in our creativity, our problems can joyfully solve themselves. In this seminar we will investigate and discover what truth there is in each of these statements for us, individually. Our explorations will be experiential, using techniques of deep relaxation, visualization, movement and selective awareness. As we learn to tap the wellsprings of our belief systems we will begin to write our own movie — and to deprogram negative future expectations. $110

Recent Developments in Nurse Healing Practices
Donald Lindsay, MD & Polly Kirby, RN

This workshop gives an overview of recent developments in non-traditional methods of holistic healing, presenting alternative methods to the practicing nurse. Using experiential methods the nurse explores herself as healer, discovering her preferences and potential for healing. Various healing models will be discussed including the present scientific medical model. Concepts of health and disease will be developed within their historical and conceptual contexts demonstrating differences, similarities and limitations. Nurses earn 10 continuing education units. $110

Introduction to Gestalt Practice / Joan Fiore

After introducing the "language" of gestalt and various gestalt experiments in breath, body, and feeling awareness, this workshop concentrates on providing the opportunity for intensive individual gestalt work in a supportive group setting. Suitable for novices as well as veterans. $110

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop
Dale Cummings, Siri Mishler & Ellen Jacobs

For workshop description see page 23. $300

Symbols in Personal Growth
Ralph Metzner & Angie Arrien

This seminar is an intensive experiential study of symbols as tools of personal growth. Symbols can expand one's perception of self and others, increase insight and stimulate new areas of self-expression and creativity. We will consider a variety of symbols: psychologically, as archetypes of individuation, and cross-culturally, as universal constants. The symbols to be studied and experienced include: sun and moon, trees, flowers, circles/wheels/mandalas, totem animals, light and fire, the elements, sacred mountains, the body and its parts, the journey/path, and others. Some of the sources of symbolism that we will draw on are astrology, alchemy, the tarot, mythology and folklore of all cultures. Special attention will be given to the uses and significance of symbols in dreams, art and the helping professions. Special symbolic creative projects will be part of the seminar. $270

Gestalt Intensive / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop provides the time, the space, the license, the opportunity to move forward at your own pace along your own path—from dis-ease to ease, from fragmented to whole, from self-discounting to self-validating, from role-playing to authentic self-expression, from helpless victim of, to active participant in, your personal destiny—or from wherever you happen to be coming to wherever you're growing. You might explore your dreams, your tensions, your madness or your options; take room to breathe or to explode, soak in nurture or exorcise demons, finish past unfinished business or examine present concerns. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to experiment with the quality of interpersonal contact through group interactions. $270

Dance of Shiva / Gabrielle Roth

Each gesture is from our own nature
spontaneous
beyond form
beyond purpose being moved by
we are divinity dancing.

This weekend is being created for you to experience that part of yourself that wants to live deeply and fully. Be prepared for vigorous, intensive sessions of movement alternating with periods of deep meditation. $110

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $100

Inner Love / Simone Surpin

In each of us exists a place where we can merge in and with a certain kind of love: a love that is the source of our inner being; a love that is not dependent on something outside of itself for sustenance; a love that renews itself and clears our vision of ourselves and of others.

As purely and as simply as possible, we will attempt to explore and experience this state; to touch these experiences with our minds and share them outside ourselves.

We will meditate, chant, do gentle body work practices, and learn about energy flows. Each session will be a blend of both didactic and experiential work. Some time will also be taken for silent walks together in the country. $110

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

"When sex comes from the physical center, it is a necessity. When it comes from the mental center, it is a fantasy. When sex comes from the heart center, it is a deep, total, and profound experience of our own divinity. Sex is meaningless without the heart."

The purpose of this workshop is to heal the separation between our divinity and our sexuality as it exists in our consciousness, attitudes, and actions. This week will include breathing, movement, music, sound, and massage meditation. We will come together to dance, to sing, to worship, to cry—to celebrate our vulnerability and our strength, our heights and our depths. Gabrielle will support us in going within ourselves to rediscover the magnitude of our own heart energy, thus infusing our sexuality, and our entire life experience, with depth and purpose. $270

My current focus is on enjoying life to the fullest and bringing the clearest expression of my self to each moment. Many people describe what I do as gestalt body work with a transpersonal bend.

During the workshop we will cover many aspects of my energetic approach to sexuality as well as working with the body energy field and the belief system which keeps us locked in obsolete behavior patterns. Where you are is where we will start. $270

Gestalt Practice: Dream Work
Richard & Christine Price & the Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c. 2500 BC

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "Leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); Cutting Through Spiritual Materialism (Chogyam Trungpa); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Education in Feeling and Purpose (Kelley); Meditation: The Art of Ecstasy (Bhagwan Rajneesh). $270

Astrology: A Map of the Psyche / Robert Hand

Carl Jung once stated that astrology contained within its teachings the sum total of the psychological knowledge of the ancients. The point of this workshop will be to show the validity of this statement expressed in modern terms.

Many people have tried to make astrology fit into various systems of modern psychology. Here we will explore the extent to which astrology is, in itself, a complete system of psychology, which makes its own statements about human nature, and which suggests rather surprising consequences for ideas of human life and behavior.

Little or no previous knowledge of astrology will be required in this workshop. We will be concerned largely with the symbolism and its psychological import, not especially with the techniques of horoscope analysis. Any material of a technical nature that is needed in the workshop will be introduced as we go along. $110

Within each of us is an untapped seed of emotional and spiritual energy which can be the source of great joy and love in our life—our own "inner self". All of us have moments in touch with it, and those are times when we are especially aware of our own beauty and strength. This workshop will teach ways to discover and nurture this loving center of yourself.

The methods of opening used are gentle, yet go deep—music and chanting to open the heart, gentle physical exercises, sharing our experiences with each other, meditation. We will study ways to grow through regular meditation, and participants will be taught a simple, natural way of meditating to continue the process of opening at home.

The workshop is appropriate both for those with group experience as well as for beginners. $110

Exploring Self-Acceptance / David Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter techniques, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $110

A Mayan "laughing" dancer evokes both youth and age.

Week of October 22 - 27

Be Your Own Author-ity / Beverly Silverman

Be the author of your own life. You don't have to live someone else's plot. Life is a continuous process and we can make our path smoother. The style of contact we use will be gestalt and psychosynthesis and anything else that works. $270

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $240

Personal Integrity / Exploring Self Esteem
David Schiffman

In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical and mental potentials and how they effect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others.

To this end we will employ a variety of focuses including music, movement, meditation, guided fantasy, as well as intensive individual work using bio-energetic, gestalt, and psychosynthetic techniques.

Our emphasis will be on discovering and affirming the qualities each person values most inside him or her self and in sensing whether it is worth taking the risk to share these qualities with others. $270

Traditional respect for the ageing in the East leads to perceptive drawings such as this one by Hokusai

Weekend of October 27 - 29

Sport & the Human Potential / Michael Murphy, Bob Kriegel & Al Lewis

Sport often evokes levels of consciousness and performance that go far beyond our ordinary everyday experience. These extraordinary athletic experiences have given many people glimpses of a larger aspect of mind or self. The three leaders of this seminar have been exploring this aspect of sport. Bob Kriegel is the author of the bestselling Inner Skiing (with Tim Galway). Al Lewis has translated and studied Russian work with psychic self-regulation. Michael Murphy has been exploring the psychological and spiritual sides of sport and has just finished a book on the subject. They will discuss their own research and introduce the seminar participants to methods of visualization, meditation and self-hypnosis, and to various Russian techniques of self-control that can be applied to sports in general. Bob Kriegel will also lead "inner game" sessions that he and Tim Galway have developed which have direct application to everyday life. $110

Family Circles / Paul Rebillot

Family Circles is a process that provides a ritual setting to help counter and destroy negative programs subconsciously operating in our lives and replace them with positive, supportive experiences.

During the workshop you will be able to protest and feel your full power against all the "you can'ts" and "no's" you were taught as a child. With the support of the group you will have an opportunity to "beat down" the negative images that hold you back and plant in their place new affirmations of yourself that will support your expansion. $110

Week of October 29 - November 3

Thinking Body / Moving Mind
Betty Fuller & Milton Trager

A workshop to rehabilitate the safety valves of bodymind to reduce stress, dissolve barriers to full self-expression, reprogram for high energy affirmative living and get the juices flowing again. This age-reversing process includes Trager psychophysical integration and mentastics (dance like "exercises") and feldenkrais and gestalt awareness training, rolf-nolte alignment patterns, massage, meditation, music, and dancing, dancing, dancing! $270

A Psychic Training Program / Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only to learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $270

The Hero's Journey / Paul Rebillot

The Hero's Journey is a dynamic form designed to facilitate people through life changes. Your world is viewed through the lens of fantasy, dramatized and experienced in a rite of passage based on a universal ritual used to celebrate this metamorphisis: the myth of the hero.

Your hero is structured from the absolute "yes", your demon from the absolute "no" of your personality, externalizing your inner conflict. The two confront each other on The Hero's Journey, a dramatic struggle ensues until a synthesis of the opposing forces is reached. $270

Weekend of November 3-5

Let Go / Let Be / Betty Fuller

This workshop will include physical and mental stress reduction exercises, guided imagery, simple meditations and body methods such as feldenkrais, Trager and massage. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual follow up will be presented. The workshop schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths. $110

Tantra Art: A Talk Illustrated by Slides / Adjit Mookerjee

Tantra developed a system of thought and practice to help us see the universe as if it were within ourselves and ourselves within the universe. This belief in cosmic order led the tantric artist to make himself a part of the mystery, to live in it as well as with it. In this spiritual process, a new sign language symbolizing the man/universe relation was discovered and used. Thus the method of yoga assumed a great importance in art; tantric art itself can be considered as one of the essential forms of yoga.

Seeing, knowing, discovering, enjoying—if these faculties, according to tantra, are to be realized, certain external practices are imperative. The tantric artist realized that these practices are necessary because they open up a new understanding of the forces at work in the universe in which we live. Tantra-yoga art attempted to interpret through art not a world of proximate visual appearance, but the world beyond. That is why tantra-yoga art seems to have such relevance for contemporary art. $110

Group Counseling: The Existential Model / Galvin Jackson

The existential model is based on a philosophical rather than a psychological view of man. Each person is seen as existing with no "givens" and his/her task is to define himself/herself through his/her creations (actions).

Each group member makes statements about himself or herself through interfacing with others as authentically as possible. The leader will return consistently to the existent moment, will reflect both feelings and ideas, will link, clarify, make risk-taking statements which center risk in himself and constantly share himself with group members.

The group leader will make frequent use of confrontation, but will not attack. He attempts to help members clarify alternatives which pave the way for action choices outside the group. He uses interaction methods to generate immediate, productive experiences for group members.

The group members' goals are to clarify self-definitions to expand potentials and to extend abilities to sustain intimacy. $110

Experiencing Esalen

Experiencing Esalen Staff

Coordinated by Janet Sachson Zuckerman

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificance of the Big Sur coast.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls) and Anger and the Rocking Chair (Lederman).

Moving Together Naturally
Jasmine Nash & Phyllis Shankman

We are two unique women that come from opposite sides of the track. Our intention is to merge our energies with yours by moving together to create a pleasurable, intensely nourishing, and very possibly downright outrageous experience. This workshop will also include gestalt, visualizations and meditation. Bring clothes and accessories to play dress-up and musical things to make music. $270

Loving / Stella Resnick

A little bit of loving goes a long way. Loving is a five-day workshop designed to focus on self-love, pleasuring, and cultivating fulfilling relationships. We will deal with such issues as intimacy, jealousy, communication, sensuality, sexuality, pleasure, and play. Loving includes gestalt, communication processes, meditation on the body, guided fantasy, massage, movement, and breathing exercises. Come with a partner or alone and be prepared to have a good time. $270 per person

Weekend of November 10-12

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity / Robert Nadeau

Who are we really?

On a "bad day" we approach life feeling anxious, incompetent, unloved, unloving—basically negative and small. At other times we're like a different person—calm, squared away, loving, open. And then there are those extraordinary moments of opening to larger, finer dimensions where we experience the oneness, the totality of our philosophies.

These are shifts of identity, and the shifting process is a natural one. But most of us stumble from identity to identity, getting "stuck" in smaller states and only rarely touching finer ones.

In this workshop we'll experience the shifting process and learn to apply it to our jobs, our relationships, the ordinary and extraordinary times in our lives. We'll use meditation, imagery, centering, and body movement. $110

I'm Entitled! / George & Judith Brown

This workshop teaches the process of owning what each of us has available in both our inner world and in our outer world, and appreciating the ways we interrupt our own natural growth and personal and interpersonal development. Then we can recognize what is and what isn't and what could (not "should") be and relish the choices, challenges, adventures, and peace to which we are all entitled. Suitable for couples or individuals. Limited to 20.
$110 per person

Humanistic Medicine / Leo Matos

Humanistic medicine is an approach to the art and science of medicine where body and mind are seen in the holistic context of collaboration between doctor and patient. Here the participants will learn methods from humanistic and transpersonal psychology to enable the patient to experience the full potential of health—not just with the symptoms of disease, but with the body as a whole, and with the feelings and the mind. The participants of this workshop will have the opportunity to integrate new skills in their own practices and to enhance their own lives.

This workshop is especially recommended for physicians, nurses, medical students and all in the health care professions. $110

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

In this workshop we will explore the relationship between who we are and who we would like to be. We will use gestalt and guided fantasy to contact our inner selves. In a non-judgmental, supportive atmosphere we will experiment with music, drawing and theater games to open up and to express our natural creativity. No special talent or previous group experience is required to begin "getting your act together."
$110

Week of November 12-17

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop
Merri (Deverani) Goldenson, Clair Killen, David Silverstein

For workshop description see page 23. $300

The Language of Dreams / Leo Matos

This is an experiential seminar on different approaches to dreaming and psychological work with dreams. The emphasis in the seminar will be on cross-cultural comparison of the use of dreams; typical Occidental approaches such as Sigmund Freud's psychoanalysis, C G Jung's analytical psychology, and Fritz Perl's gestalt practice will be complemented by the techniques used by the Senoi in Malaysia, North American Indians and by Tantric tradition in Tibetan Buddhism. Participants will have the opportunity to learn how they can use dream work for enhancing their lives. $270

Gestalt, Psychosynthesis & Encounter: An Experiential Workshop / Beverly Silverman & Lona Gorges-Siebel

We will work with basic, simple concepts and techniques. The emphasis is on the integral relationship between individual process and group process. My concern is with developing a way of being in which one's senses are open and one's style of contacting others is flexible. $270

Fear, Panic & Vulnerability to Crisis / Donald Lindsay, MD

This course is a study of action in panic or fearful situations. It demonstrates the student's vulnerability to crisis. The workshop explores the effectiveness of the student's personal fear reaction patterns and the student's ability to recognize the innate patterns of patients and others involved in a crisis. Nurses will earn 30 hours continuing education credit. $270

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth (A four week internship in energetic studies for personal & professional growth) / David Schiffman, Gabrielle Roth, Alan Schwartz & the Esalen Staff

Over the years Esalen has functioned as a major clearing house for a wide variety of approaches and means for facilitating personal evolution and expression. One's journey could begin with any realm—mental, physical, emotional, or transpersonal—each path serving to create a wealth of information and energetic access.

What are the common experiential and conceptual threads that underlie each of these paths? How can these threads of experience be best woven together to create a fabric whose qualities are simultaneously exquisite in their delicacy while still remaining strong enough to sustain the wear and tear of worldly existence? And how best might this very personal process of self-discovery and integration be taught and shared with others?

The exploration and resolution of these and other basic questions pertaining to the process of change and growth will serve as the basis of our work together during this month long institute program.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own ability, style, and artfulness both as individual guide and group facilitator, as well as to do in-depth personal work and training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthetic techniques, and the meditative arts.

The program will be structured to include: intensive individual work, supervised observations, practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills, video feedback, illustrated lectures and didactic theoretical sessions. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective linking human potential practices with traditional psychological and counseling modalities.

Curriculum

The curriculum will be divided into seminars, individual observation-supervision sessions, and group sessions. Seminars will consist of conceptual presentations, guided exercises and discussions done by core as well as visiting faculty.

Observation and supervision sessions will involve individual counseling among group members with supervision by core faculty. Included in these will be video replays and discussions pertinent to the work being done.

Group sessions will provide the participants with the opportunity to do in-depth work on their own process with core faculty as well as to explore practical applications of material presented in seminars. In addition a major portion of the last week will be used for polishing leadership skills with each person in the group being given the opportunity to lead. Video feedback will again be employed. Some of the major areas and practices to be explored during this program include:

A The Energetic Foreground Concept

Beginning from the assumption that the human body is a metaphor which holds and reflects how we have been shaped by past experience and habits, we will explore these patterns and their possible transcendence.

Working with the energetic foreground concept, a process which synthesizes the philosophies of gestalt and bioenergetics, we will investigate the organismic use of the energy flow that creates the potential for the whole person. Particular emphasis will be placed on the removal of blocks which restrict the expression of the body.

B Gestalt Practice

The emphasis in this phase of our work together will be in creating a stance to facilitation which is non-analytic, non-coercive, and non-judgmental. We'll focus on the use of the awareness continuum, the nature of the impasse, contact and boundaries, ways of visualization and meditation and the development of leadership skills which reflect clarity and flow from whatever emerges in process.

C Psychosynthetic Methods

Using the over-arching perspective created by psychosynthesis we'll examine reference points and specific experiences which include discerning different levels of the unconscious, basic personality organization, choice and the development of will, resolving inner conflicts, reflective and receptive meditation, dis-identification and self-identification, the use of ideal models, the nature of purpose, developing desired qualities, aligning with the transpersonal, guided imagery, and music.

D The Moving Center Approach

The moving center work focuses on the human body—how to discover it, tune it, move it and celebrate it. All moving center tools, whether music, movement, or meditation, are designed to harmonize the mental, emotional, and physical energies into a grounded foundation for experiencing and communicating our uniqueness and creativity. The work will focus on the nature of inspiration, safety and intimacy.

E The Psycho-dynamics of Group Structure

Drawing on techniques based primarily in encounter we'll look into the formation of the group, ascertaining its energy field, the stages of group evolution, inclusion, power and affection, grounding cathartic experience in the group context, as well as examining the differences and effects of counseling, teaching and encounter modalities.

The program is designed both for professionals and students and those interested in the fields of psychiatry, psychology, religion, education, and philosophy. A few partial scholarships are available for this program. For scholarship applications write Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. The program will have an enrollment limited to eighteen people. $1150 Deposit: $400

In the process of becoming educated, we are taught that it is more important to be involved with the outside world than with our Selves. We are taught to become Ego-involved—involved with manipulating things and people. We are taught to experience our selves primarily in relation to others; we lose touch with our essence.

From this perspective, we offer an opportunity to return to our Selves within the working context of the Esalen community. Our faculty for this program is our environment—staff—community.

Learning/dis-covering the use of your own energy in work . . .
For your SELF.
Living together (close to others) operatively and co-operatively in a unique, high intensity environment.
Contact/communication with the people of Esalen via group work and in day-to-day Esalen happenings.
An opportunity for:
SELF-regulation
SELF-examination
SELF-contemplation
and if you choose
SELF-reevaluation
Facilitated by removal from your ordinary living context.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week at such jobs as gardening, maintenance, office, kitchen duries, etc. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs and work assignments are made according to these requirements. (Flexibility is one of the watchwords of life at Esalen). The Work-Study program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program (emotionally and physically) and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share—contact—play/alone-together.

Accommodations are shared. The program lasts 28 days; four weeks and four weekends at a basic cost of $350. Depending on your work schedule, weekend workshops may be available for an additional fee. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates. Arrangements are made through the office.

It is possible to be in the work-study program up to three months, by invitation, after the first month.

Available dates:

September 10—October 8; October 8—November 5; November 5—December 3; December 3—31; December 31—January 28; January 28—February 25; February 25—March 25; March 25—April 22.

If interested, please apply as early as possible to Work-Study program, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. Only a limited number of applicants are accepted. Scholarships are not available for the Work-Study program.

or make grow"—and the English forms, "is" and "am," have evolved from the same root as the Sanskrit asmi—"to breathe." Of course, we are no longer conscious that the concept of being is generated from a metaphor about growing and breathing. We simply can't get away from metaphors.

Keen: When did consciousness begin?

Jaynes: If we accept the proposition that consciousness is based on linguistic analogy, then the problem of when it first occurred is brought down to size. It had to be some time after the evolution of language. In my view, language evolved very late, approximately from 100,000 BC up to 10,000 BC, and that means that consciousness began sometime from 10,000 BC up to the present. We can gather evidence about the origins of consciousness by examining the earliest writings—which began around 3000 BC. Before 1000 BC they do not show any trace of an interior mind-space in which a person could imagine himself doing things or having dialogues with the self the way you and I do.

Keen: Let's get back to language and consciousness.

Jaynes: The earliest written languages we know of are in hieroglyphics or cuneiform, and these are difficult to translate unless they are very concrete. But when we come to ancient Greek and the Iliad, we have early writing we can translate with some accuracy.

The remarkable thing about the Iliad is that in general people are not conscious. They don't sit down and decide to have a Trojan war. They don't plan strategy. It is quite obvious that there are two kinds of beings that figure in the Iliad: there are people like Achilles, and there are a group of beings called gods. Who and what are they? The gods come into the story whenever there is a new decision to be reached. As soon as there is a novel situation to be dealt with, someone hears a voice or sees a god who tells him what to do.

For instance, when Agamemnon takes away Achilles's girl friend, Achilles takes out his sword and starts to go at Agamemnon. Suddenly the goddess Athena twists him around and tells him no. And then, in grief, Achilles goes down to the beach and hallucinates another goddess, Thetis, who consoles him and tells him something else to do.

These auditory and visual hallucinations, occurring whenever a novel situation arose, show us the structure of the bicameral mind. Achilles, like all bicameral people, had a split mind. One part, the executive or god part, stored up all admonitory experience and fitted things into a pattern and told the follower or person part what to do through an auditory hallucination.

Keen: Are you suggesting that all ancient peoples were schizophrenic?

Jaynes: In a way, yes. You could say that before the second millennium BC, everybody was schizophrenic. Look what happens in schizophrenia. We hear voices impelling us to do something, or criticizing us. We lose our boundaries. We become automatons. Time crumbles and our mental space vanishes. These are all characteristics of the bicameral mind.

The problem of schizophrenia is complex. There is the question of diagnosis and the degree to which it is genetically determined by the lack of an enzyme which prevents the biochemical products of stress from being excreted. But let's leave these problems aside for the moment. The modern schizophrenic relapses into the bicameral mind but struggles to get back into consciousness. He is between worlds and has lost the capacity to be comfortable either in consciousness or in schizophrenia. The bicameral person fitted perfectly into a bicameral kingdom. He never learned anything different. The bicameral person was an absolutely social individual, whereas the modern schizophrenic, having learned consciousness and being habituated to using introspection to find "himself," is cut off from both the self and society.

Keen: Nobody would deny that there were some bicameral or schizophrenic persons in ancient civilizations. Or even that shamans and priests encouraged hallucinated voices as a means of exercising social control. Why shouldn't we assume that the Marxist critique is correct: a mystical, or perhaps purely Machiavellian, elite controlled the theocratic structure and used the "fiction" of the voices of gods as means of maintaining power and control?

Jaynes: That is a very modern way of viewing things. Just because the voices function as a social control doesn't mean they can be reduced to that. Let's take a specific example: the Oracle at Delphi. There is no evidence that the priestess was used by an elite to keep everybody in line. To the contrary. In Plutarch's day, she was the daughter of a poor farmer, and even kings went to the oracles for advice. Even Plato had tremendous reverence for the Oracle, and he was a cynical man. If there was trickery, he would have smelled it out.

You have to realize that there wasn't much trickery in the bicameral world. Duplicity requires consciousness, and planning. When you hear of a trick, in ancient literature, like the Trojan horse, it is almost laughably naive. Who would ever be deceived by a big wooden horse being given by one's enemies? But that is about the level of trickery that anybody could use before 1000 BC. The data just doesn't support the Marxist critique.

You ask how I know that everybody was hallucinating? In most of these civilizations, everybody had his own personal god. In the Neolithic site uncovered at Catalhuyuk, in Turkey, dating from at least 6000 BC, almost every house had four or five rooms nestled around a god's room, which contained idols and statues of stone. To me, by definition, these little statues or idols were the gods that cued hallucinations that told people what to do.

Keen: Why did consciousness develop? What were the events leading to the breakdown of the bicameral mind?

Jaynes: Many factors. Catastrophes, too much chaos and novelty. Sometime around 1470 BC the volcano on the island of Thera, or Santorini, erupted. A major part of Crete was suddenly under 1,000 feet of water. The air shock waves have been estimated as 350 times more powerful than a hydrogen bomb. A tidal wave 700 feet high, traveling at 350 miles per hour, smashed into the coasts of the bicameral kingdoms along the Aegean. In a single day, whole populations were destroyed or became refugees. This started a series of migrations and a huge game of musical chairs, with peoples all around the Near East intermeshing.

This, plus the fact that writing and trading had already weakened the authority of the auditory hallucinations, led to the breakdown of the bicameral mind. People couldn't get the right directives from their voices. Ripped out of the context in the larger hierarchical group where neither habit nor the bicameral voice could support him, the refugee was forced into consciousness. Refugees and conquered people had to learn deceit to survive. They had to learn to be one thing on the inside and another on the outside, and that requires the development of imagination and the Analog I. These primitive operations of consciousness probably began in Assyria and were developed very speedily in a more intellectual way in Greece from 900 BC to 600 BC. This was about the same time the Hebrews were also beginning to move out of a bicameral period and were lamenting the lost voice of Yahweh.

Keen: Were the brains of bicameral people different from those of modern people with subjective consciousness? Or was consciousness merely a trick we learned, a product of a different kind of social conditioning?

Jaynes: Consciousness is learned on the basis of language and taught to others. It is a cultural invention rather than a biological necessity. However, it does have survival value, since it allows people to deal with stressful and novel situations. So there is a modicum of natural selection at work in the emergence of consciousness. ■

If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program of five days or longer, write for a scholarship form before making a reservation. Allow at least three weeks for processing. If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving the notification. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15–August 31 programs or for weekend workshops.

Ongoing Residence Program

Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $960 per 26-day period.

Weekend of November 17-19

Tune Your Body—A Movement Adventure
Nitza Broide Miller

The process of growing up provides us with many experiences—sensations, impulses, desires which express themselves spontaneously. Our body generates energy. We enjoy the pleasures of body movements, the touch, the magic of exploration and the joy of discovery.

At times, this growth process is cut off by rules and taboos or by other obstacles that are hard to conquer. We begin to listen more to the surroundings than to ourselves!

In this workshop we will listen to the excitement of our own rhythms; we'll tune into the internal voice of our body, and to the sensual flow and pleasure in recreating and reconnecting with ourselves. We will learn to let go of unnecessary tension in our body through dynamic relaxation, using imagery and visualization, and through the magic of dance. $110

The Feeling Process / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feelings from thoughts —sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $110

Presence: The Art of Being / Simone Surpin

Being can be seen as that inner source, still and full, from which all action springs. Like the silence that follows on the footsteps of a sound, our being continually is. It is the backdrop for all activity, complete knowledge and love rise from it and rest within it.

We will attend to this state of inner presence this weekend with meditation. We will bridge the inner space to the outer through our hearts with chanting. We will reflect, share experiences, practice gentle bodywork, take walks together and bask in that inner glow that comes from touching the Self. $110

Esalen will not hold any five day workshops during this period.

Weekend of November 24-26

The Miracle of Perception / Charlotte Selver & Charles Brooks

On this Thanksgiving weekend we will gather to dig out and celebrate our true and abiding blessings: the inborn faculties of perception, movement, action and expression through which we are able to participate in a feast that is always there, when we discover it and are there for it.

Charlotte brought her first workshop to Esalen fifteen years ago this fall. Now you are invited to share with her and with Charles a study which opens us all to the offerings on the table of life and enables us to distinguish what is really there from what we just talk and fantasize about. $110

For workshop description see October 6–8. $110

More / Michael Butler

This workshop is to teach ways of tuning into the "more" of what is inside you. The goal is more self awareness, more joy, and more ease in life.

This method of awareness is based on self discovery. We will use a variety of tools which are gentle, yet go deep. There will be music and chanting to open the heart, work with intuition, sharing experiences with each other, and teaching sessions to relate our experiences to everyday life.

We will study meditation as a tool for growth—to overcome blocks and to get in touch with the perfection inside. A form of meditation will be taught which can replenish you day to day and help you increase the "more" of your life. $110

Week of November 26 · December 1

The Miracle of Perception / Charlotte Selver & Charles Brooks

For workshop description see November 24–26. $270

Self Re-parenting / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to re-turn to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments will progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and re-infanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-Reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $270

Care of the Dying: Traditional vs. Alternative Star Walmsley, Polly Kirby, RN, Steve Connor & Steve Levine

This workshop will explore alternative ways of dealing with dying patients. The focus will be on the hospises movement and other options open to those seeking a more holistic approach to care of the dying. Participants will become aware of how dying is seen as a potential in awakening the spirituality in the person. Through various holistic approaches as meditation, yoga, gestalt and massage, we will experience how holistic care of the dying involves the physical, mental and spiritual realm. 30 hours of continuing education credit is available to nurses. $270

The Moving Center / gabrielle

The Moving Center method is an intuitive, imaginative, inspirational approach to self-awareness which is grounded in movement and sound experiences designed for every body. This weekend is being created for you to experience that part of yourself that wants to live deeply, fully and creatively. Be prepared for vigorous, intensive sessions of movement alternating with periods of deep meditation. Music by Rafiel.

Each gesture is from

The Origin of Consciousness / Julian Jaynes

In this workshop Julian Jaynes will discuss his theories of the origin of consciousness. At one time nature was split into an executive part called a god and a follower part called man. Neither was consciousness. The earliest writing that we can comprehend reveals a different mentality from our own. In the bicameral mind volition, planning, and iniative is organized with no consciousness and then "told" to the individual in his familiar language, sometimes with the visual aura of a friend or authority figure or sometimes simply as a voice alone. The individual obeyed these hallucinated voices because he would not see what to do by himself. Catastrophes that had to be dealt with and increased trade among nations tended to weaken the authority of auditory hallucinations and led to the breakdown of the bicameral mind and the origin of consciousness: the invention of an interior mind space, the "Analog I," which can move around in imagination and do things the body is not actually doing.

For more information on Julian Jaynes's theories, see the Food For Thought section. Recommended reading: Jaynes, The Origin of Consciousness in the Breakdown of the Bicameral Mind (Houghton-Mifflin). $110

Running Home: Recent Developments in the Mind/Body Approach to Running / Mike Spino

In this workshop we will draw on recent developments in sport physiology, preventive medicine, the mental training of athletes in East Germany and the Soviet Union, Eastern philosophy, yoga, and the martial arts as well as research on bodily transformations at the Esalen Sport Center. We will work with gaits and tempos for running, muscle/skeletal exercises, flexibility exercises, training routines, visualization exercises and meditation techniques. $110

Week of December 3-8

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / gabrielle

For workshop description see October 15–20. $270

Approaches to Birth, Sex & Death
Stanislav & Christina Grof

In this workshop we will explore the implications of modern consciousness research for the understanding of the three basic aspects of human existence and their mutual interrelations; their significance for mental health and illness. We will focus on such issues as the relevance of the birth trauma for psychiatry and psychotherapy; new understandings of emotional, sexual, and psychosomatic disturbances; the Kundalini syndrome; revolutionary approaches to psychotherapy; and insights into the experience of clinical death. The format of the workshop combines slide illustrated discussions, guided fantasy with music, mandala drawing, an audiovisual experiential slide show, and individual work if indicated. The participants will have an opportunity to explore their experiences and feelings in the above three areas. $270

Stress: How to Avoid it, Prevent it and Dissolve it
Ken Dychtwald

"No one ever said that it was going to be too easy!"
—my grandfather, 1974

In this workshop, we will examine the physical as well as psychological dynamics and characteristics of stress. With the help of daily massage sessions at the Esalen baths, relaxation techniques and a wide variety of pleasurable bodymind awareness exercises, we will examine ways to become more aware of our own psycho-physical stress patterns while we learn methods for avoiding, preventing and dissolving the negative and deteriorating impact that stress can have on our daily lives. Particular emphasis will be placed on exploring ways to increase health, well-being and total bodymind fitness within the context of relationships, home and work environments. $270

Opening the Feelings

RADIX NEO-REICHIAN WORKSHOPS
(formerly Interscience Workshops)

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this series of workshops which employ neo-Reichian techniques of emotional release. The Radix Intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, is practiced by Charles and Erica Kelley and their staff at the Radix Work Shop. The Intensive, like other neo-Reichian techniques used in these workshops, grew from the discovery by Charles Kelley's teacher, Wilhelm Reich, of the way in which feeling is rooted in the flow of energy in the body, and is blocked by chronic muscular contractions which Reich called the muscular armor. Freeing the armor enables the student to open feeling that is buried and to soften and free feeling that is too strong and has been held in for fear of explosion. In these workshops armor is softened by simultaneous work on the character and body, using techniques not only from Reich, but also from bioenergetics, sensory awareness, and other body-oriented approaches. The participant/teacher ratio is kept small, never more than 10/1. Each weekend participant who wishes will receive an Intensive, while 5-day workshop participants receive two. By meeting sometimes in small groups and sometimes together in large groups, Radix combines the intimacy and individual attention of the small group with the energy and dynamism of the large. Grief or pain, fear, and rage that have been held in since childhood emerge in these workshops. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he/she discovers a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience changes profoundly as tender and sexual feelings for the mate intensify and merge.

Gestalt Practice / Richard & Christine Price, Joan Fiore & the Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c. 2500 BC

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "Leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment.

The second half of this program will have participants working primarily with each other, relating whatever is being learned (or unlearned) to the development of their own styles. Thus this program might be especially useful to those wishing to utilize a gestalt approach in their professions (e.g. counselors, teachers, ministers, mothers, doctors and nurses).

There will be some experiential and didactic sessions involving other related procedures such as Radix and Neurolinguistic Programming.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); Cutting Through Spiritual Materialism (Chogyam Trungpa); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Education in Feeling and Purpose (Kelley); Meditation: The Art of Ecstasy (Bhagwan Rajneesh). $575

Weekend of December 8-10

Energy Awareness & the Crystalline State / George Leonard

In the crystalline state, there is no expectation nor any prejudgment. Concentration on the past and future gives way to primary focus on the present. Action taken while in the crystalline state is not considered action but rather appropriate action. When fully achieved, this state permits you to experience the harmony and connectedness of all existence. This energy awareness workshop will emphasize the crystalline state as described in George Leonard's latest book, The Silent Pulse: A Search for the Perfect Rhythm that Exists in Each of Us, and will also involve centering, balancing and stress reduction. $110

Clair Killen, Sharon Henry, Brian Killen

For workshop description see page 23. $300

Human Sexuality / Donald Lindsay, MD

This workshop for health professionals and their companions will cover the following topics: (1) anatomy, physiology, endocrinology and sexual performance; (2) body awareness and birth control; (3) humanism, depersonalization and sex; (4) health and sensuality (including non-genital sensuality); (5) sexual pathology within the cultural context.

There will be didactic and experiential sessions in the classroom and at the Esalen baths. Participants will earn 30 hours category I physician credit or 30 hours nurse continuing education units. $270

Massage Intensive / The Esalen Massage Crew

For workshop description see October 1–6. $270

Weekend of December 15-17

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity / Robert Nadeau

For workshop description see November 10–12. $110

Simply Loving My "Self" / Phyllis Shankman

The simple experiences of self-love and self-acceptance are the keys to peace, joy and creative living. As individuals we will slow down, relax and enjoy our "selves" with quiet meditations and breathing. As a group we will talk, play, massage, move, dance and experience ourselves in relation to others as open, caring, sharing human beings. $110

For workshop description see October 20–22. $110

Self Hypnosis, Selective Awareness & Movement
Emmett Miller

Movement requires the use of muscular activity in varying degrees of intensity. So, too, thought processes and interpersonal communication proceed through stages of higher and lower energy. Most of our personal and social difficulties (symptoms, unwanted emotions, maladaptive habit patterns) can be eased when we learn to react in accordance with and in response to our internal and external environment.

In this workshop we will learn and apply principles of self-hypnosis, selective awareness, feldenkrais, tai chi, dance and movement . . . to expand our self awareness and ability to allow our minds and bodies to flow with our changing experiences. $110

Gestalt Workshop / Marty Fromm

This workshop is designed for professionals who are interested in further personal growth and professional training in the practice of gestalt, as well as for others who are simply interested in their own personal growth through gestalt. While the sessions will be mostly experiential, ample time will be provided for didactic sessions of theory and practice.

The focus is on awareness: the discovery of what is, rather than on what was, might be or should be. We will concentrate on "how and now" rather than on "why and because" of past and future, and will attend to body language and feelings. $270

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics and journal work. $270

Movement, Music, Massage, Dance
James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

"Free your body and your mind will follow.
Free your mind and your body will follow."
—Last Poets

This workshop will be a fun filled exciting five days of joy and delight in the celebration of life through dance, creating a safe space for participants to do their thing while learning from others.

Morning movement sessions will be slow meditative "movement ritual one" developed by Anna Halprin, San Francisco Dancers Workshop.

Afternoon sessions will be massage and hot baths. Working in groups of twos and threes, utilizing methods adapted from Esalen, shiatsu, Lomi body work, polarity and reflexology, we will discover ways to care for and nurture ourselves and others.

Evening sessions will be high energy movement and dance developed by James Xavier Nash and Jasmine Nash.

Music will be live and pre-recorded, some of which you have never heard before. Video tape feedback and portrait study will also be incorporated as well as a costume ball. $270

The Birth of the Sun / Paul Rebillot

The winter solstice is a time for restful introspection as the earth's outer darkness allows the inner sun of the soul to regenerate and find expression. Traditional cultures the world over have rested, fasted, and feasted during this time of the year in celebration of the turning point, the cyclic return.

We will join together to create our own ritual and pegent for the staff and guests of Esalen during this holiday week. Using a variety of techniques such as gestalt, guided fantasy, movement, massage, and more, we will integrate our personal rituals into a group presentation.

Participants may come for the entire seven days or join the group for the weekend. $380

Gestalt Synergy—Integrating Gestalt, F M Alexander Technique & Feldenkrais Method

Ilana Rubenfeld & the Esalen Staff

This intensive workshop is designed for professionals and those interested in psychology, psychiatry, education, expressive arts (drama, music, art and dance) and body/mind philosophies. It is focused for those who wish to integrate gestalt theory and practice and body/mind approaches into their own work/life journey.

In this workshop participants will learn the basic tools of the gestalt approach while working with them in relationship to personal/professional growth.

The blending of gestalt with Alexander Technique and feldenkrais exercises is used as a gateway to contacting, expressing and working through the deep feelings which often become stored in our body/mind and result in tension and imbalance. Trainees explore how the body/mind "speaks" and how we can learn to "listen" to ourselves and others in a flowing, integrative, congruent manner.

Every day will be divided into several sessions—morning, afternoon and evening. These sessions will include theory, demonstration and experimentation; practicum—supervised practice sessions where trainees take the roles of client, observer and gestalt leader; body/mind approaches and the use of touch. Sessions concerning group process will be woven into the tapestry of the training. Several guest leaders will work and share their approach in individual and group facilitation.

The major themes of this workshop emerge from the following modalities:

1 Gestalt Theory & Practice generally encompasses such central issues as awareness, contact boundary, impasse, foreground and background, polarities and their integration, dream work and appropriate use of time in verbal and non verbal intervention.

2 The Alexander Technique & Feldenkrais Exercises—a psychophysical modality. This includes the relationship of posture to emotions and emotions to posture—how changes of inner and outer space affect our intellectual and emotional capacities. These methods deal with body posture, kinesthetic sense and a re-education of the brain's neural system.

3 Use of Touch: Attention will be given to the use of touch. To learn where, when, how and whom to touch requires sensing where the other person is. The leader/trainee can learn to protect himself/herself from toxic energies and open themselves for nourishment. Trainees will learn how to use themselves—their whole being—as an instrument.

4 Group Process: Part of this training will address itself to the subtleties of group process. An experienced group facilitator will be available to guide trainees in the processing of group dynamics.

When each one of us works on our own process we can then learn how to bring out total self into the "therapeutic" situation, transforming it into a collaborative effort which fosters acceptance, caring, humour and continual growth.

This workshop is part of an ongoing program which takes place at Esalen. Those who have participated before need only send in their registration and deposit. Those who are interested in joining the group must send a letter containing personal and professional interests, a recent photo and deposit to Ilana Rubenfeld, 115 Waverly Place, New York, New York 10011. In order to allow time to review and evaluate your application we have set a deadline of November 1 for ALL applications and registrations. A few partial scholarships are available for this program. For scholarship applications write Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. $1000 Deposit: $400

Celebration / Betty Fuller

'Tis the season for year-end accounting—body, mind and spirit; for weeding self-negating weed beliefs and planting self expanding and self enhancing seed beliefs; for awareness through feldenkrais, Trager gestalt and massage; for clearing emotional log jams to give free rein to choice and self-response-ability; for balance and energy in the fine-tuning of bodymind to the power of "the Force" through guided imagery, meditation, music, dance and laughter. Rejoice! Bring musical instruments. $270

New Year's Tune Up—Yoga & Massage / Deborah Medow

Let's bring the old year to a close with a body/mind tune up!

With Ashtanga yoga in the mornings . . . massage, movement and various body/mind purification practices in the afternoon . . . a light diet . . . and good vibrations, we'll tune ourselves to an optimal pitch for the coming year—1979. $270

The Birth of the Sun / Paul Rebillot

(See December 22—29.) This five day group will join with the others, who, during the previous weekend will develop a holiday ritual and celebration involving music, movement, and other forms of creative expression. $270

The Energetic Dimension: A Weekend of Energy Release with Bioenergetics & Gestalt / Alan Schwartz

Read the description of the five day workshop (see December 31—January 5). This weekend can be thought of as an opportunity to become aware of blocks to the free flow of energy in the body's musculature. Integration via bioenergetic grounding and gestalt support concepts will be the focus. $110

New Year's Workshop / Jack Downing

Based on our experience at last New Year's workshop, we'll again say goodbye to the old year, welcome the new, and arrive in the eternal now, all with appropriate ceremonies. Using our well-stocked kit of psychic, gestalt, and body integration tools, we'll accentuate our positive, eliminate the negative, and gain some experience in staying that way. Old friends and new, come enjoy our celebration of life. $110

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body / Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact, and nurturing, sensitive giving and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $110

Week of December 31- January 5

Gestalt, Bioenergy & Human Contact / Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $270

Varieties of Sexual Experiences & Behaviors (Observations from LSD Research) / Stanislav Grof

Using the extended cartography of the human unconscious based on observations from clinical LSD research, we will discuss the nature of sexual energy and the many specific forms it assumes. Special attention will be paid to new understanding of the psychodynamics of sexual variations, disorders, and deviations, and to transpersonal dimensions of sex (satanic, oceanic, and tantric). We will use a combination of discussion, group interaction, experiential exercises, mandala drawings, slide and film projection, and non-drug technology for altering consciousness. Participants will have the opportunity to confront their feelings about sexuality and gain deeper insight into the nature of their experiences in this area. $270

The Tamalpais Experience Richard Heckler, George Leonard & Wendy Palmer

Aikido is the most sophisticated of the major martial arts. It is also a means for reducing stress, a guide to solving problems of everyday life, and a way of being in the world. Richard Heckler, George Leonard and Wendy Palmer will present the unique approach to aikido and energy awareness they have developed at their Marin County school, Aikido of Tamalpais. No previous training is needed to experience the essence of the art. $110

The Many Faces of the Self / Bette Dingman

Using guided fantasy, psychosynthesis exercises, and gestalt practice, we will explore the different "selves" within us in a safe environment. $110

Recent Developments in Nurse Healing Practices Polly Kirby, RN

This workshop gives an overview of recent developments in non-traditional methods of holistic healing, presenting alternative methods to the practicing nurse. Using experiential methods the nurse explores herself as healer, discovering her preferences and potential for healing. Various healing models will be discussed including the present scientific medical model. Concepts of health and disease will be developed within their historical and conceptual contexts demonstrating differences, similarities and limitations. Nurses earn 10 continuing education units. $110

Weekend of January 12-14

Music, Dance, Trance & Celebration Nitza Miller

In cultures which are less dominated by technology and industry, music, dance, and celebration are not spectator sports. These activities, along with "trance" states such as meditation, deep relaxation, and hypnosis have been traditionally initiated cross-culturally for physical and emotional balance—release of tension, clearing of the mind, joy and ecstasy, and for interpersonal and transpersonal communication; and everyone participates!

This will be an experiential weekend where participants will be invited to share several deep relaxation ("trance") experiences to help intensify sound and movement and the natural body rhythms.

The lovely sounds of the keyboard, the stirring flute and the passion of drums will facilitate spontaneous movement to stimulate the evolution of your own body rhythms towards freedom, pleasure, and joy. $110

The Lawyer–A New Perspective
A Weekend for Lawyers presented by the Humanistic Law Institute

"Like mounds in a sandy desert, intellectual knowledge is mounting up without provision for the expression of the heart."
–Meher Baba

As lawyers we were trained to use our heads and not our hearts–to make choices and decisions based upon "reason," "principles," and "issues" and not to trust feelings, intuition or compassion–often with less than satisfying results in our "professional" and/or "private" lives.

During this weekend we will explore and share with other lawyers, in the peaceful, reflective, nourishing, and evocative setting of Esalen, ways of using and integrating all aspects of ourselves–our bodies, our minds, our feelings, our "hearts" to see if we can make our work and our "private" lives more effective and more integrated, flowing, meaningful, and enjoyable.

The program will be conducted by a lawyer member of the HLI staff and another experienced group leader and will be largely experiential, using approaches and methods of gestalt awareness, psychosynthesis, massage, meditation, and bioenergetics. $110

Evolutionary Relationships Between Mind & Body
Michael Murphy & James L Hickman

Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman are gathering examples of extraordinary bodily transformations from various fields–from the yogic and contemplative literature, psychiatric records, hypnosis and drug research, sport, the arts, and everyday life–in an attempt to learn more about the range of such changes and the ways in which they happen. In this seminar they will present their work to date and speculate with the participants about the implications of their findings. Two questions for discussion are: (1) Do these bodily changes reveal an evolutionary possibility? (2) How do they relate to notions of "enlightenment"? $110

Week of January 14-19

Live Better Longer / Donald Lindsay, MD

This will be a workshop in holistic medicine emphasizing prevention, nutrition, health maintenance and experiential learning about body-psyche relationships. It is about joyous living and includes body work at the Esalen baths. The student will learn to use new advances in health care. There will be sessions on medical consumerism, on interacting with physicians. Enrollment is limited. Nurses taking this course will receive 30 hours of continuing education credits. $270

The Executive Couple / The Gentle Art of Blending Separate, Busy Lives / David Schiffman

The ability to create and maintain the delicate balance between autonomy and commitment is central to the success of any couple relationship. This is especially true in relationships where both partners are deeply committed to their own individual careers as well as each other. This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of the positive mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying relationships. Our time together will be spent exploring the most effective means for expressing the ability to be loving, while maintaining a sense of personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits that we use to celebrate or diminish the growth and joy we allow for ourselves as well as for our partners. Some of the practices we will be using include guided imagery, meditation, intuitional sensing, massage, bio-energetics, gestalt and psychosynthesis. $110 per person

Future Workshop Announcements

Workshops of more than one week require special planning for participants. Whenever possible we will announce such workshops well in advance. More detailed descriptions—and any changes—will appear in the catalog covering the period in which the workshop is scheduled.

Friends of Esalen

FRIENDS OF ESALEN provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available to a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to the knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

Special Information

THE ESALEN CATALOG is published quarterly. Subscription cost for one year is $2 for the United States, $4 for Canada and Mexico, $8 for Europe and South America and $10 for all other countries. Please make all payments in US currency. Those attending Esalen workshops and conferences are automatically added to the mailing list for one year. A single inspection copy of the current issue is available free upon request from Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

CONTRIBUTIONS to Esalen Institute are tax deductible.

ACCREDITATION: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs.

RECORDINGS OF ESALEN PROGRAMS: For a catalog of recordings of Esalen/San Francisco programs contact Big Sur Recordings, Big Sur, CA 93920. They also have Big Sur programs prior to 1973.

Commercial use of Esalen program tapes is prohibited; all rights are reserved.

FILMS of the work of Fritz Perls, Carl Rogers, Abraham Maslow, Rollo May, Virginia Satir, Alexander Lowen, and others are available from Psychological Films, 205 West 20th Street, Santa Ana, California 92706. The periods after birth and before death have not received as much focus as the identifiable events themselves, but are nonetheless important times for growth and exploration. There is a need to evolve new structures for these times as well. The Gazebo program at Esalen is pioneering a model for this space for younger people, providing a structure for experiential learning in a healthy environment, where teacher and student participate confluently.

A possible extension of the "gazebo approach" would be to incorporate the elders in this learning environment to create their own structure of transition. This could be likened to the sannyasi phase in Hindu culture, where the elders free from household responsibilities, begin their search for spiritual re-awakening. At present we lack, as a society, positive models for this self rediscovery to occur. Esalen could provide the gathering focus of energy where people involved in similar developmental quests could participate in a confluent setting. After the incorporation of the elders within this environment there would be multiple avenues to involve professionals who are involved with elders and children to experience this setting for their own personal and professional growth.

The Gazebo area could be the focus of this process. "Work," in the form of intentional environment creation with the children and "play," in the art form that children know best would provide the grounding for the exploration of the limitlessness of growth and development. The children and elders would be the co-participants, with staff facilitation, of the environment of transition and boundary testing. At the same time a natural climate would be created for the passage of cultural learning between the elders and children providing a conduit for a more richly embroidered fabric of exchange. ■

For reservations and information, write or call:
Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.
Phone: (408) 667-2335, 10 to 3:30 every day;
10 to 8 Sunday & Friday.

Unless otherwise indicated, all programs listed in this brochure are residential programs in Big Sur. Send reservations for all programs to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute—By Reservation Only.

Fee Information: We require a reservation fee of $20 for weekend groups, $70 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs. Please mail all reservations to Esalen/Big Sur. Balance of payment is due on arrival. Esalen accepts Mastercharge, Bankamericard, and American Express. U S currency only, please.

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for a long term Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation (allow at least 3 weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—August 31 programs or for weekend programs.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has limited child care facilities. If you are interested in bringing a child while you are attending a workshop of five days or longer, contact the office well in advance for information on availability of child space.

We ask workshop participants not to have guests. Please do not bring pets.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5—5:30 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying, or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Who's Responsible at Esalen?

We have long regarded Esalen Institute as an educational laboratory. Our evolving philosophical and operational positions reflect this regard. Underlying it all is a baseline ethic of "self-awareness and self-responsibility." However re-presented and operationalized in the past, by us or by others, this ethic continues to be the basis for our world view, and following from this, our educational approach. The self-awareness/self-responsibility ethic has grown and stabilized out of at least two generations of weighty dis-illusioning social and political events—all connected by a common reminder:

> Give away your personal faculties of discernment, of evaluation, of self-reference, and you lose your integrity (your wholeness). "Take responsibility for your every thought, your every feeling, your every action," said our beloved friend and teacher, Fritz Perls.

We view the implications of this position as being social as well as personal. They concern the ways we relate to ourselves and others.

In our position as educators, we invite people to take responsibility for their whole life situation while at Esalen. This includes taking responsibility for who they select as their teachers, their leaders, their gurus, their authority figures . . . and so on—and to be aware, whenever possible, what effect this has on them. We, of necessity, are setting up a situation for our seminarians to learn the practice of self-responsibility from the time they consider selecting a workshop, not just during the workshop. In effect, we are asking that this self-responsibility attitude be present in the initial contact with Esalen. Ideally, the same attitude will pervade after a workshop when our seminarians go back to the community and seek out others—physicians, teachers, counselors, mental health professionals, etc.

As we have become more thoughtful and self-critical about the overall direction of Esalen we have begun to concentrate on enhancing our basic offering—the Esalen environment and life style. Our primary emphasis is not on teaching particular truths or personal and interpersonal techniques for daily life; rather our primary concern is with a particular consciousness and developing an environment to support the evolution of that consciousness—the consciousness of self-awareness/self-responsibility.

Food for Thought

HEALTH CARE FOR HEALTH PROFESSIONALS

(The following is excerpted from "Notes From an Esalen Director's Handbook" by Julian Silverman with Wendy Ovaitt, in press.)

ON THE HEALTH CARE OF HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS

Resistance to really innovative changes in health care is built into a system which often makes health a "conceptual issue" divorced from bodily experience, sensory awareness of low-level chronic stress living patterns, diet, and other ecological considerations.

Health care professionals share with their patients an attitude about the body as "an object of study", something that is prone to malfunction, something that is not intrinsically enjoyable for its own sake (except in sex and sports). We don't educate for health with anywhere the energy that we educate against disease.

Further, the health care of health care professionals themselves is a problem at present. For example, a search of the medical literature indicates a significant, uncomfortably high incidence of documented dis-ease among physicians—alcoholism, drug use, suicides, chronic stress levels, physical diseases, and other "social breakdown" syndromes.

Programs obviously are needed for enhancing the personal care of these individuals.

EDUCATION & VALUES

The field is in the process of going through some important changes. Innovations in the training and development of health care professionals are occurring in response to public demands for more advances in quality of health care.

Education is not only a matter of technological information giving, but is also the shaping of attitudes and values. There is a growing desire for a value system which re-establishes the primacy of "primary" health care as compared with the larger and larger emphasis on specialized, fragmented "secondary" and "tertiary" (health) care.

Implicit in the idea of primary care is the idea of "direct patient care."

The idea of "direct patient care" involves becoming related to patients "directly." "Directly" means straight forward, without evasiveness, it implies contacting an other "with whole-heartedness," "with spontaneity," with competence.

Direct patient care also implies being capable of "being direct" with one's self so as to be direct with others, of "having a direct line" to one's self,
of "knowing where one is" at "a moment's notice."

It implies therefore a specific type of training of health professionals which is not foreground in today's educational system.

Our schools do not yet emphasize in their training programs the importance of the self as a fully participating instrument in the health care of others.

We train health care providers to be professional/mechanical in their contacts with patients; they tend to lose touch with their selves when they are in their professional work situations. In this way they inadvertantly limit their capacity for healing, for wholeness.

ON CERTAIN MAL-CONCEPTIONS IN THE HEALTH CARE FIELD

Our conception of what health care people do is unbalanced. We are doers to patients. As treaters of disease, we take responsibility for our patients, "take over" for our patients.
in this way we mis-inform,
take away,
(rob) from our patients,
a major part of their involvement in their own health care.

In doing so, we interfere with the healing process, limit the healing power of the patient, create iatrogenic diseases which then require additional treatment.
Our treatments not uncommonly cause side effects which are really additional diseases.

We don't emphasize teaching health care professionals about caring for their own beings.
We don't provide a healthy environment for them.
We are one-sided in our concerns about health.
Thus we tend to make prestige, larger salaries, and other fringe benefits the preferred considerations.
We don't provide/emphasize the most important of health benefits — an orientation to caring for one's self, a value system for caring for one's self.

SELF CARE

Training in self-care is at a minimum. Health professionals are not educated to develop self-centering, self-awareness,
self-reference,
early in their training which would sensitize them to others while concurrently insulating them ("innoculating them") against diseases . . . when they go "out in the field."

Health professionals routinely contact individuals with diseases. Daily they have numerous opportunities to be in relation to toxicity, negativity, sadness, depression, unhappiness. To imagine that such continual exposure has no significant affect on their well-being is a serious misunderstanding of how individuals affect each other. The germ theory of medicine is only one formulation about ways that negative life conditions are communicated from individual to individual.

It is certainly no surprise that, under such conditions even the most dedicated should resort to preparations such as alcohol or other drugs that reduce their awareness of chronically unpleasant life conditions. It is further not surprising that the home adjustments of significant numbers of these individuals are unsatisfactory. Their extra-ordinary occupational situations simply add on to any problems that already exist.

Our traditional emphasis is not as much in keeping fit, enjoying being alive (in health giving food, air, exercise) but with treating mal-functioning parts of the body. Enjoying being healthy is an "untaught."

PHYSICIANS & METAPHYSICIANS

There is a need to identify potential teachers (educators) in the health care field who are by temperament and interest sensitized to the problems and potential solutions of the above-mentioned issues.

We need to develop a program for identifying and training professionals who teach about being in the world as compared with only practicing health care, people who are whole beings as compared with people who are emersed in the role of physician, nurse, social worker, attendant, psychiatrist, psychologist, physiotherapist, etc., etc., etc.

In the planning stage—a research program for identifying physicians and other categories of health professionals who are comfortable with people and who have the capacity of being doctors (teachers)* of being-in-the-world as professional and as whole persons.

Approach:

To establish criteria for identifying such individuals by (a) constructing ideal prototypes of desirable and undesirable qualities of health care specialists and (b) carrying out pre-post measurements and follow-up measurements on groups of these individuals (temperament, personality, and attitude measurements, cognitive style measurements).

To develop and evaluate a format during professional training and during continuing education:

for enhancing sensitivity to stress (whether patients, colleagues or intimate associates) and to their selves, to their own needs, for clearly recognizing their own imbalances;
for learning techniques for dealing with negativity, which are "healthier" than using drugs, alcohol or getting sick themselves, and which will enhance their personal lives outside of their health care work.

Then health professionals would have something to "teach" their patients that has to do with more than managing disease.

Such a plan is unfolding at present.

The GAZEBO game may be played indoors or out, standing still, walking, or running. It can be a soft-ball game, or a volley ball ... as long as there are three or more generations, or four or more decades.

A GAZEBO PLAYING FIELD can be created at MacDonald's or the fanciest eatery in town. It can be a sail boat ride or a talk under a pine tree, or an organically grown, old fashioned, new age hoe-down (American word for tribal dance). It can be concrete, abstract, physical or spiritual. Every city part or country acre provides a GAZEBO PLAYING FIELD. The GAZEBO GAME has to do with a point of view. And the GAZEBO is a metaphor that brings together the human seasons and cycles of life within a harmonious context.

There's a magic castle, a tree house that's secret and high.
Musicians visit and play.
It's a drag race,
a farm,
a place to experience substance, color, and sound.

. . . and when we die,
our ashes are USED in a GAZEBO PLAYING FIELD for a tree to grow,
a rose to bloom,
or maybe under a drinking fountain.
". . .what a very special world," said Alice!
". . .Strange," said Peter.
". . .Specially strange," said Pinocchio.

. . .and the music goes round and round and there's stompin' and clappin' after rockin' and rollin' it's organically home grown, old fashioned, new age hoe-down music . . .
where every body's dancin'
and everybody's got a dance (using everything that's able.)

Alice and the Rabbit danced and the turtle beat on his bongo drums.

Food For Thought

We invite your comments on our Food for Thought section. Address letters to Food for Thought, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. While we may not be able to respond to each letter, we will be sure to read all of them.

March 16–18

Arthurian Romance: The Holy Grail & the Medieval Tarot
Joseph Campbell

A weekend of slides, lectures, and relevant discussions illustrating the great twelfth and thirteenth century flowering of gothic literature, romance and the arts. The symbolism of courtly love, the Tristan and Grail Romances, cathedral architecture and the Marseilles Tarot will be treated, not as historic curiosities, but as clues to the essential character of a European spirituality distinct from all oriental types which is evident to this day in the works of our leading creative minds. $110

PROGRAMS AT WESTERBEKE RANCH

This series of programs sponsored by Esalen will be held at the Westerbeke Ranch in Sonoma County, which is about an hour's drive north of San Francisco. These residential workshops will be held in an intimate setting which includes rustic cabins, home cooked meals, a sauna and Japanese tub, a large swimming pool, and beautiful scenery. Weekend workshops begin on Friday evening and end Sunday at noon. Five day workshops begin on Sunday evening and end Friday at noon. A reservation fee of $70 is required for five day programs, and $20 for weekend programs. Reservation fees are not refundable, but with five days notice they can be transferred to other Esalen seminars. Full payment for all Westerbeke workshops is due five days in advance of the beginning of the program. Send all reservations and payments to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

March 18–23

Hinduism & Buddhism in Oriental Art / Joseph Campbell

Five days of slide lectures and relevant discussions illustrating the course of development of these two dominant religions of the Orient, from ancient to recent times. The first days will be devoted largely to the history, arts, and doctrines of the two in ancient and medieval India and the later sessions will be devoted to Buddhism in its regional developments throughout Asia. $270

March 11–16

Languages & Models for Medicine
Beverly Silverman & Alan Gutman, MD

In this experiential and didactic workshop for health professionals, we will draw on the roots of our medical knowledge and practice to renew the inspirations that led us into our healing professions. We will reconsider how the language and models we use in medicine profoundly organize how we perceive and thereby respond. We will explore how seeing and experiencing the bodymind as a cybernetic system deepens our understanding and increases our ability to positively influence health and life. Nurses and physicians will earn 30 hours continuing education units. $270

March 23–25

Ways of Nourishing the Helping Professionals
Polly Kirby, RN, Jean Rossiter, & Maureen Christine

In the everyday working situation, whether it be hospital, school, or another environment, helping professionals are continually being asked to give of themselves. To be able to give to others, you must be able to give to yourself. (Healer heal thyself.) This workshop will help the participants provide ways of giving continual nourishment to themselves. Various approaches such as meditation, massage, use of physical environment, and time structuring will be used to show participants ways of continually restoring themselves. A climate where participants can have direct experience of spontaneity, enthusiasm and harmony will be established. Nurses and physicians will receive 10 hours of continuing education credit for participation in the workshop. $110

March 23–25

The Many Faces of the Self / Bette Dingman

Within each of us are many other "selves" who demand expression. By not recognizing them we dis-own those qualities that we dis-like about our "self". Using psychosynthesis methods, fantasy imagery, soft body work and gestalt, we will integrate towards the "whole" personality creating vital avenues of expression. $110

April 1–6

Human Sexuality / Donald Lindsay, MD & Jack Rosenberg

This workshop reviews and relates the fields of human sexuality and humanistic psychology for the health professional. Both the medical and psychological aspects of sexuality will be covered, as well as a body energy approach to sexual counseling. Nurses and physicians will earn 30 hours of continuing education units. $270

April 6–8

Hypnosis & Parapsychology / Lee Pulos

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lecturettes explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $110

April 15–20

Motion & E-Motion: A Moving Celebration
Betty Fuller, Milton Trager, MD & Janet Sachson Zuckerman

An interdisciplinary training program for professionals and interested lay persons in counseling, education, health care, performing arts and sports. In these fields which utilize movement as a primary means to self-learning, self-realization and self-expression, learning to use one's own bodymind as a biofeedback instrument is critical.

Bodymind approaches include daily Trager Mentastics and feldenkrais awareness through movement lessons as well as other movement work which results in heightened consciousness, reduced stress, increased flexibility and greatly expanded self image. Emotional release and communications flow generated by the movement work and transforming experience of self will be processed in regular (small and whole) group sessions using gestalt, encounter, psychosynthesis and other visualization methods.

In addition to training in combining movement work and group process, each participant will have some experience of Trager Psychophysical Integration, his innovative one-to-one learning method which Dr. Trager will demonstrate.

Wear clothes suitable for movement and floor work and bring musical instruments for dancing and celebrating the flow. $270

April 20–22

Conscious Living/Dying / Stephen Levine

We will directly explore our attitudes and reactions to the process of dying and death through discussion and meditation. Our focus will include working through the heart with the dying, keeping death as an advisor, and working with the dying as a means of working on ourselves. $110

Gestalt Synergy–Integrating Gestalt, F M Alexander Technique & Feldenkrais Method
Ilana Rubenfeld & the Esalen Staff

This intensive workshop is designed for professionals and those interested in psychology, psychiatry, education, expressive arts (drama, music, art and dance) and body/mind philosophies. It is focused for those who wish to integrate gestalt theory and practice and body/mind approaches into their own work/life journey.

In this workshop participants will learn the basic tools of the gestalt approach while working with them in relationship to personal/professional growth.

The blending of gestalt with Alexander Technique and feldenkrais exercises is used as a gateway to contacting, expressing and working through the deep feelings which often become stored in our body/mind and result in tension and imbalance. Trainees explore how the body/mind "speaks" and how we can learn to "listen" to ourselves and others in a flowing, integrative, congruent manner.

Every day will be divided into several sessions–morning, afternoon and evening. These sessions will include theory, demonstration and experimentation; practicum–supervised practice sessions where trainees take the roles of client, observer and gestalt leader; body/mind approaches and the use of touch. Sessions concerning group process will be woven into the tapestry of the training. Several guest leaders will work and share their approach in individual and group facilitation.

The major themes of this workshop emerge from the following modalities:

1 Gestalt Theory & Practice generally encompasses such central issues as awareness, contact boundary, impasse, foreground and background, polarities and their integration, dream work and appropriate use of time in verbal and non verbal intervention.

2 The Alexander Technique & Feldenkrais Exercises–a psychophysical modality. This includes the relationship of posture to emotions and emotions to posture–how changes of inner and outer space affect our intellectual and emotional capacities. These methods deal with body posture, kinesthetic sense and a re-education of the brain's neural system.

3 Use of Touch: Attention will be given to the use of touch. To learn where, when, how and whom to touch requires sensing where the other person is. The leader/trainee can learn to protect himself/herself from toxic energies and open themselves for nourishment. Trainees will learn how to use themselves–their whole being–as an instrument.

4 Group Process: Part of this training will address itself to the subtleties of group process. An experienced group facilitator will be available to guide trainees in the processing of group dynamics.

When each one of us works on our own process we can then learn how to bring out total self into the "therapeutic" situation, transforming it into a collaborative effort which fosters acceptance, caring, humour and continual growth.

This workshop is part of an ongoing program which takes place at Esalen. Those who have participated before need only send in their registration and deposit. Those who are interested in joining the group must send a letter containing personal and professional interests and deposit to Ilana Rubenfeld, 115 Waverly Place, New York, New York 10011. A few partial scholarships are available for this program. For scholarship applications write Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. $1000 Deposit: $400

The Tamalpais Experience
Richard Heckler, George Leonard & Wendy Palmer

Aikido is the most sophisticated of the major martial arts. It is also a means for reducing stress, a guide to solving problems of everyday life, and a way of being in the world. Richard Heckler, George Leonard and Wendy Palmer will present the unique approach to aikido and energy awareness they have developed at their Marin County school, Aikido of Tamalpais. No previous training is needed to experience the essence of the art. $110

The Many Faces of the Self / Bette Dingman

Using guided fantasy, psychosynthesis exercises, and gestalt practice, we will explore the different "selves" within us in a safe environment. $110.

Recent Developments in Nurse Healing Practices
Polly Kirby. RN

This workshop gives an overview of recent developments in non-traditional methods of holistic healing, presenting alternative methods to the practicing nurse. Using experiential methods the nurse explores herself as healer, discovering her preferences and potential for healing. Various healing models will be discussed including the present scientific medical model. Concepts of health and disease will be developed within their historical and conceptual contexts demonstrating differences, similaritites and limitations. Nurses earn 10 continuing education units. $110

Week of January 7-12

Living Tao: Re-Discover a Singing & Dancing Body in You!
Al Chung-Liang Huang

Explore heaven-earth—the moving forces in our bodies, in the watercourse ways of t'ai chi. To become your own living practice; to be healthy, joyful and alive!

Recommended non-reading: Living Tao: Still Visions and Dancing Brushes by Huang with photographs by Sichi Ko (Celestial Arts) $270

Varieties of Sexual Experiences & Behaviors (Observations from LSD Research)
Stanislav Grof & Christina Grof

Using the extended cartography of the human unconscious based on observations from clinical LSD research, we will discuss the nature of sexual energy and the many specific forms it assumes. Special attention will be paid to new understandings of the psychodynamics of sexual variations, disorders, and deviations, and to transpersonal dimensions of sex (satanic, oceaninc, and tantric). We will use a combination of discussion, group interaction, experiential exercises, mandala drawings, slide and film projection, and non-drug technology for altering consciousness. Participants will have the opportunity to confront their feelings about sexuality and gain deeper insight into the nature of their experiences in this area. $270

The Feeling Process / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feelings from thoughts —sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $270

Weekend of January 12-14

Music, Dance, Trance & Celebration
Nitza Miller

In cultures which are less dominated by technology and industry, music, dance, and celebration are not spectator sports. These activities, along with "trance" states such as meditation, deep relaxation, and hypnosis have been traditionally initiated cross-culturally for physical and emotional balance—release of tension, clearing of the mind, joy and ecstasy, and for interpersonal and transpersonal communication; and everyone participates!

This will be an experiential weekend where participants will be invited to share several deep relaxation ("trance") experiences to help intensify sound and movement and the natural body rhythms.

The lovely sounds of the keyboard, the stirring flute and the passion of drums will facilitate spontaneous movement to stimulate the evolution of your own body rhythms towards freedom, pleasure, and joy. $110

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $100

Running Home: Recent Developments in the Mind/Body Approach to Running / Mike Spino

In this workshop we will draw on recent developments in sport physiology, preventive medicine, the mental training of athletes in East Germany and the Soviet Union, Eastern philosophy, yoga, and the martial arts as well as research on bodily transformations at the Esalen Sport Center. We will work with gaits and tempos for running, muscle/skeletal exercises, flexibility exercises, training routines, visualization exercises and meditation techniques. $110

Exploring Self-Acceptance / David Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter techniques, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $110

Week of January 14-19

Live Better Longer / Donald Lindsay, MD

This will be a workshop in holistic medicine emphasizing prevention, nutrition, health maintenance and experiential learning about body-psyche relationships. It is about joyous living and includes body work at the Esalen baths. The student will learn to use new advances in health care. There will be sessions on medical consumerism, on interacting with physicians. Enrollment is limited. Nurses taking this course will receive 30 hours of continuing education credits. $270

Your Own Myth-Body to Live By!
Joseph Campbell & Al Chung-Liang Huang

We will explore and re-create ancient myths in our daily lives—in our thoughts and in our bodies—as we integrate intellect and movement into one harmonious living practice.

Recommended readings:

by Campbell—Myths to Live By (Bantam). The Flight of the Wild Gander (Gateway), The Complete Grimm Fairytales (Pantheon)

by Huang—Embrace Tiger, Return to Mountain (Real People), Tao: The Watercourse Way (with Alan Watts, Pantheon). Living Tao (Celestial Arts). $300

Personal Integrity / Exploring Self Esteem
David Schiffman

In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical and mental potentials and how they effect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others.

To this end we will employ a variety of focuses including music, movement, meditation, guided fantasy, as well as intensive individual work using bio-energetic, gestalt, and psychosynthetic techniques.

Our emphasis will be on discovering and affirming the qualities each person values most inside him or her self and in sensing whether it is worth taking the risk to share these qualities with others. $270

Gestalt Practice
Richard Price, Leonard Bearne & the Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustible.
—Lao Tzu c. 2500

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "Leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure or accomplishment.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); Cutting Through Spiritual Materialism (Chogyam Trungpa); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Education in Feeling and Purpose (Kelley); Illusions (Richard Bach). $270

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

This workshop will include massage and dancing, exploring the rituals of Black disco dancing in contemporary American society. High-low energy, sensual and sexual, rhythm and syncopation, hand clapping, foot stomping, using African drums, we will use our voices and pre-recorded popular Black music. $110

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

In this workshop we will explore the relationship between who we are and who we would like to be. We will use gestalt and guided fantasy to contact our inner selves. In a non-judgmental, supportive atmosphere we will experiment with music, drawing and theater games to open up and to express our natural creativity. No special talent or previous group experience is required to begin "getting your act together." $110

The Lawyer—A New Perspective
A Weekend for Lawyers presented by the Humanistic Law Institute

"Like mounds in a sandy deset, intellectual knowledge is mounting up without provision for the expression of the heart."
—Meher Baba

As lawyers we were trained to use our heads and not our hearts—to make choices and decisions based upon "reason," "principles," and "issues" and not to trust feelings, intuition or compassion—often with less than satisfying results in our "professional" and/or "private" lives.

During this weekend we will explore and share with other lawyers, in the peaceful, reflective, nourishing, and evocative setting of Esalen, ways of using and integrating all aspects of ourselves—our bodies, our minds, our feelings, our "hearts" to see if we can make our work and our "private" lives more effective and more integrated, flowing, meaningful, and enjoyable.

The program will be conducted by a lawyer member of the HLI staff and another experienced group leader and will be largely experiential, using approaches and methods of gestalt awareness, psychosynthesis, massage, meditation, and bioenergetics. $110

Evolutionary Relationships Between Mind & Body
Michael Murphy & James L Hickman

Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman are gathering examples of extraordinary bodily transformations from various fields—from the yogic and contemplative literature, psychiatric records, hypnosis and drug research, sport, the arts, and everyday life—in an attempt to learn more about the range of such changes and the ways in which they happen. In this seminar they will present their work to date and speculate with the participants about the implications of their findings. Two questions for discussion are: (1) Do these bodily changes reveal an evolutionary possibility? (2) How do they relate to notions of "enlightenment"? $110

EXPERIENCING ESALEN

Experiencing Esalen Staff

Coordinated by Janet Sachson Zuckerman

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificance of the Big Sur coast.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls) and Anger and the Rocking Chair (Lederman).

Week of January 21-26

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop
Renan Sercarz, Ron Andes, Julie Wright

For workshop description see page 23. $300

Be Your Own Author-ity / Beverly Silverman

Be the author of your own life—write down your own script. You don't have to live someone else's plot. Life is a continuous process and we can be in charge of our own movement. The style of contact we use will be gestalt and psychosynthesis and anything else that works. $270

Massage Intensive / The Esalen Massage Crew

The members of the massage crew, each with their own unique style, will give instruction and help the group to practice basic techniques of massage upon one another: Sensory awareness, deep muscular massage, joint articulation, polarity. As we learn to feel with our hands how the body and the life-force within it works, we learn to release tensions in others and to be more fully aware of ourselves.

The group meets daily in the mineral baths. $270

Weekend of January 26-28

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity / Robert Nadeau

Who are we really?

On a "bad day" we approach life feeling anxious, incompetent, unloved, unloving—basically negative and small. At other times we're like a different person—calm, squared away, loving, open. And then there are those extraordinary moments of opening to larger, finer dimensions where we experience the oneness, the totality of our philosophies.

These are shifts of identity, and the shifting process is a natural one. But most of us stumble from identity to identity, getting "stuck" in smaller states and only rarely touching finer ones.

In this workshop we'll experience the shifting process and learn to apply it to our jobs, our relationships, the ordinary and extraordinary times in our lives. We'll use meditation, imagery, centering, and body movement. $110

The Executive Couple / The Gentle Art of Blending Separate, Busy Lives / David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

The ability to create and maintain the delicate balance between autonomy and commitment is central to the success of any couple relationship. This is expecially true in relationships where both partners are deeply committed to their own individual careers as well as each other.

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of the positive mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying relationships. Our time together will be spent exploring the most effective means for expressing the ability to be loving, while maintaining a sense of personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits that we use to celebrate or diminish the growth and joy we allow for ourselves as well as for our partners. Some of the practices we will be using include guided imagery meditation, intuitional sensing, massage, bio-energetics, gestalt and psychosynthesis. $110 per person

This workshop is to teach ways of tuning into the "more" of what is inside you. The goal is more self awareness, more joy, and more ease in life.

This method of awareness is based on self discovery. We will use a variety of tools which are gentle, yet go deep. There will be music and chanting to open the heart, work with intuition, sharing experiences with each other, and teaching sessions to relate our experiences to everyday life.

We will study meditation as a tool for growth—to overcome blocks and to get in touch with the perfection inside. A form of meditation will be taught which can replenish you day to day and help you increase the "more" of your life. $110

Week of January 28 - February 2

Fluidity of Being / Elisa Lodge

In this workshop we will explore through physical awareness and expression the basic principles of movement and breath that allow us to maximize our potential for balanced effortless movement.

We will apply these concepts not only to our daily activities such as sitting, standing and walking, but to specialized activities such as jogging, tennis, playing a musical instrument and massage.

Some of the practices we will touch on include structural patterning, meditation, creative sound and movement, and theater games. The emphasis will be on evoking grace and harmony throughout all our expression. $270

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $240

Concentrated Radix Feeling Work
Clair Killen & Merri (Devarani) Goldenson

Under the sponsorship of the Radix Institute this workshop will provide an environment for deep feeling work. We will work as a group to experience the connection between our body armor, the ways we block our feelings and how we control our lives. As we become aware of how we control our feelings and our lives, we can consider letting go of control that stands in the way of greater experience of love, pleasure and trust. Each participant will receive four individual intensives. The enrollment will be limited to twelve participants who have experienced at least a previous five day Radix workshop. $300

Supernormal Transformations of the Body
Michael Murphy & James L Hickman

In this workshop, Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman will present the results of their research on supernormal bodily changes that occur in yoga, sport, psychosis, hypnosis and other kinds of activity. Questions for discussion are: the relationship of psychokinesis and intentionality to deliberate bodily change; ways in which these changes occur; what a transformed body might look like and how it might function; the ethics of extraordinary powers; the implications of such research for the culture at large; the relations between internally mediated bodily change, genetic engineering and mind-machine entities (cyborgs). There will also be sessions of meditation and running, energy awareness exercises, experiments with "inner seeing" and "inner hearing", and yoga exercises that are related to physical transformation. Slide shows illustrating various aspects of these topics will be presented at some of the sessions. $270

February 4–March 2

Gestalt Practice / Richard & Christine Price, Janet Sachson Zuckerman, Joan Fiore, Leonard Bearne & the Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear–
And used–is inexhaustable.
–Lao Tzu c 2500 BC

Gestalt is as old as the world.
–Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form–nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental–evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment. The second half of this program will have participants working primarily with each other, relating whatever is being learned (or unlearned) to the development of their own styles. Thus this program might be especially useful to those wishing to utilize a gestalt approach in their professions (e.g. counselors, teachers, ministers, mothers, doctors and nurses). There will be some experiential and didactic sessions involving other related procedures such as Radix and neurolinguistic programming.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls);Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); Cutting Through Spiritual Materialism (Chogyam Trungpa); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Education in Feeling and Purpose (Kelley); Illusions (Richard Bach). $1150

Weekend of February 2-4

Family Circles / Paul Rebillot

Family Circles is a process that provides a ritual setting to help counter and destroy negative programs subconsciously operating in our lives and replace them with positive, supportive experiences.

During the workshop you will be able to protest and feel your full power against all the "you can'ts" and "no's" you were taught as a child. With the support of the group you will have an opportunity to "beat down" the negative images that hold you back and plant in their place new affirmations of yourself that will support your expansion. $110

Steps to an Ecology of Mind / Gregory Bateson

In the last twenty years, the theoretical advances in cybernetics and advances in the study of personal interaction have led to new ways of looking at the living world, including everything from biology to poetry and politics. The workshop will explore these ways of perceiving and thinking. $110

THE ESALEN WORK-STUDY PROGRAM

In the process of becoming educated, we are taught that it is more important to be involved with the outside world than with our Selves. We are taught to become Ego-involved—involved with manipulating things and people. We are taught to experience our selves primarily in relation to others; we lose touch with our essence.

From this perspective, we offer an opportunity to return to our Selves within the working context of the Esalen community. Our faculty for this program is our environment—staff—community.

Learning/dis-covering the use of your own energy in work . . .
For your SELF.
Living together (close to others) operatively and co-operatively in a unique, high intensity environment.
Contact/communication with the people of Esalen via group work and in day-to-day Esalen happenings.
An opportunity for:
SELF-regulation
SELF-examination
SELF-contemplation
and if you choose
SELF-reevaluation
Facilitated by removal from your ordinary living context.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week at such jobs as gardening, maintenance, office, kitchen duries, etc. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs and work assignments are made according to these requirements. (Flexibility is one of the watchwords of life at Esalen). The Work-Study program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program (emotionally and physically) and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share—contact—play/alone-together.

Accommodations are shared. The program lasts 28 days; four weeks and four weekends at a basic cost of $350. Depending on your work schedule, weekend workshops may be available for an additional fee. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates. Arrangements are made through the office.

It is possible to be in the work-study program up to three months, by invitation, after the first month.

Available dates:

December 3—31; December 31—January 28; January 28—February 25; February 25—March 25; March 25—April 22; April 22—May 20; May 20—June 17; June 17—July 15.

If interested, please apply as early as possible to Work Study Program, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. Only a limited number of applicants are accepted. Scholarships are not available for the Work-Study program.

Scholarship Information

If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program of five days or longer, write for a scholarship form before making a reservation. Allow at least three weeks for processing. If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving the notification. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15–August 31 programs or for weekend workshops.

Ongoing Residence Program

Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $960 per 26-day period.

Week of February 4-9

A Psychic Training Program / Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $270

The Hero's Journey / Paul Rebillot

The Hero's Journey is a dynamic form designed to facilitate people through life changes. Your world is viewed through the lens of fantasy, dramatized and experienced in a rite of passage based on a universal ritual used to celebrate this metamorphisis: the myth of the hero.

Your hero is structured from the absolute "yes", your demon from the absolute "no" of your personality, externalizing your inner conflict. The two confront each other on The Hero's Journey, a dramatic struggle ensues until a synthesis of the opposing forces is reached. $270

Weekend of February 9-11

Zen & the Art of Self Hypnosis / Emmett Miller

Selective Awareness and self hypnosis form a link between the Eastern and Western approaches. The principles of relaxation, imagery, being here now, and letting go with the flow underly changes in health, habits and happiness.

We will start from where the group is "at" and flow through silence and sound, through stillness and movement, learning methods which can help us actualize our philosophical beliefs and life goals. Self hypnosis, music, dance and celebration will be part of this experience. $110

Body Awareness & Health Practices—For Health Professionals / Donald Lindsay, MD

Experiential teaching is emphasized in this workshop. The student will be a participant-observer. Recent developments in experiential aspects of body awareness will be developed followed by practical applications to patient care. Aspects of inner awareness will be used to enhance professionalism, self confidence, professional autonomy as well as improved interprofessional relations. Nurses and physicians will receive 30 hours of continuing education credits. $270

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be / David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics and journal work. $270

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

For workshop description see January 19-21. $110

Inner Love / Simone Surpin

In each of us exists a place where we can merge in and with a certain kind of love: a love that is the source of our inner being; a love that is not dependent on something outside of itself for sustenance; a love that renews itself and clears our vision of ourselves and of others.

As purely and as simply as possible, we will attempt to explore and experience this state; to touch these experiences with our minds and share them outside ourselves.

We will meditate, chant, do gentle body work practices, and learn about energy flows. Each session will be a blend of both didactic and experiential work. Some time will also be taken for silent walks together in the country. $110

For workshop description see January 12-14. $110

Week of February 18-23

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body / Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact, and nurturing, sensitive giving and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $270

Positive Resistance / Beverly Silverman

In the human potential movement we have come to think of resistance as a negative quality, something to do something about—get rid of. Resistance for most of us has served a useful protective purpose and also balanced physical resistance is a way of experiencing positive energy in the system. Learn to contact your resistance and salute it. If it is obsolete and gets in your way you can say goodbye to it. If it serves a useful purpose you can learn how to use it. $270

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $240

Weekend of February 23-25

Energy Awareness & the Crystalline State / George Leonard

In the crystalline state, there is no expectation nor any prejudgment. Concentration on the past and future gives way to primary focus on the present. Action taken while in the crystalline state is not considered action but rather appropriate action. When fully achieved, this state permits you to experience the harmony and connectedness of all existence. This energy awareness workshop will emphasize the crystalline state as described in George Leonard's latest book, The Silent Pulse: A Search for the Perfect Rhythm that Exists in Each of Us, and will also involve centering, balancing and stress reduction. $110

Experiencing the Joy of Your Inner Self / Michael Butler

Within each of us is an untapped seed of emotional and spiritual energy which can be the source of great joy and love in our life—our own "inner self". All of us have moments in touch with it, and those are times when we are especially aware of our own beauty and strength. This workshop will teach ways to discover and nurture this loving center of yourself.

The methods of opening used are gentle, yet go deep—music and chanting to open the heart, gentle physical exercises, sharing our experiences with each other, meditation. We will study ways to grow through regular meditation, and participants will be taught a simple, natural way of meditating to continue the process of opening at home.

The workshop is appropriate both for those with group experience as well as for beginners. $110

Vision Improvement—Our Willingness to See Laura DeNuccio

This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and our Selves to see. Utilizing deep emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the Bates system, nutrition and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience and expand—enabling us to look newly at our Selves and our world in which we live. Limited to ten participants. $110

Week of February 25 - March 2

A Movement Approach to Individual Growth and Group Process / In Contact with Mangrove

Mangrove is a community and performance collective of seven men from San Francisco. We work in an improvisational life process originating in organic movement flow.

We begin with our most basic dances of lying, sitting, standing, walking, and running. Each person explores the dynamics of his moving/thinking body in relation to balance, momentum and gravity. We use the tools of nonverbal communication: the dynamics of pressure, immediate responsiveness and the give and take of weight. To play with each other in the present moment, we let go of expectations, projections and static images of ourselves.

This everchanging dance constantly asks for our presence and support, physically, emotionally and spiritually. We dance alone, in pairs and as a group, and we use voice and music to support and extend the contact improvisation. $270

The simple experiences of self-love and self-acceptance are the keys to peace, joy and creative living. As individuals we will slow down, relax, and be our "selves" with quiet meditations, breath work, yoga, walks, and special time for solitude. As a group we will come together and create a safe place to explore and expand our ability to experience ourselves with others as open, caring, sharing human beings. Group activities will include gestalt work, massage, music, dance-movement, art-imagery and whatever else presents itself in the moment for our attention. Come alone or with a partner.

Weekend of March 2-4

The Miracle of Perception / Charlotte Selver & Charles Brooks

We gather to dig out and celebrate our true and abiding blessings, the inborn faculties of perception, movement, action and expression through which we are able to participate in a feast that is always there, when we discover it and are there for it.

Charlotte brought her first workshop to Esalen fifteen years ago this fall. Now you are invited to share with her and with Charles a study which opens us all to the offerings on the table of life and enables us to distinguish what is really there from what we just talk and fantasize about. $110

Agelessness / Elisa Lodge

The inner experience of grace, ease and vitality need not be diminished by age. We can maintain a vibrant, open state of loving and sharing if we take the time to tune and cleanse our bodies. The spirit we open to through this tuning and cleansing is ageless. It is the source of our enthusiasm, excitement and strength.

In this workshop we will use a synthesis of structural patterning, self massage, color, sound and nutritional practices, each serving to evoke and maintain a vivid sense of living fully in the present. $110

Close Encounters of a Balanced Kind / An Experiment In Meeting & Contacting Other Human Beings Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop provides an opportunity for you to pay attention to the quality of your interpersonal contact, and, particularly, to your ability to stay tuned in to yourself while meeting and contacting others.

You may discover your own rhythm of contact and withdrawal; you may discover how you sabotage yourself from having more satisfying personal relationships; you may discover you're getting exactly what you want from your relationships. You may discover anything; you may discover nothing. You're in charge. $110

Inner Road to Health / David Schiffman, Barbara Braunstien, Patricia Caldwell, Jeanne Rose, Ryan Kopperud, Elisa Lodge & the Esalen Staff

This is a training workshop about health—learning how to get well and stay well, and helping others to do the same, all by natural means. Sessions held during the day will focus on a variety of holistic health practices. We will cover herbal systems, nutrition and diet, different forms of massage such as shiatsu, polarity, Esalen massage and deep-tissue massage. The sessions will be both experiential and didactic. As different systems are introduced we'll explore ways of experiencing and embodying this knowledge, using our hands as well as minds. For example, we'll gather our own herbs to prepare powders, salves, infusions, tinctures, and herbal baths while at the same time learning the medicinal uses of various herbs.

Evening sessions will focus on individual and interpersonal process work, based on gestalt and psychosynthesis approaches. Weekends will generally be free and participants in the workshop may sign up for regularly scheduled weekend brochure programs, for the catalog price minus $50.

A principal emphasis throughout the month will be on discovering and awakening inner resources. In this connection, regular meditation, patterning, chanting, yoga, tai chi, massage, and other quieting practices will help still the mind and relax the body, permitting new sensitivities to emerge. We will also have dance, movement, and various forms of energy awareness sessions for the sheer enjoyment of learning to move freely and spontaneously in response to inner rhythms.

The group will meet in the Big House and many of the participants will be housed there. This provides a unique opportunity and setting for evolving this month-long group experience into a family experience. For those who cannot afford the full tuition cost, a limited number of partial scholarships are available, for which a weekly work commitment is required. For scholarship information write to Esalen, Big Sur, CA 93920. This is an educational program, it is not for the treatment of disease. Tuition: $1150 Deposit: $400

RADIX NEO-REICHIAN WORKSHOPS

(formerly Interscience Workshops)

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this series of workshops which employ neo-Reichian techniques of emotional release. The Radix Intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, is practiced by Charles and Erica Kelley and their staff at the Radix Institute. The intensive, like other neo-Reichian techniques used in these workshops, grew from the discovery by Charles Kelley's teacher, Wilhelm Reich, of the way in which feeling is rooted in the flow of energy in the body, and is blocked by chronic muscular contractions which Reich called the muscular armor. Freeing the armor enables the student to open feeling that is buried and to soften and free feeling that is too strong and has been held in for fear of explosion. In these workshops armor is softened by simultaneous work on the character and body, using techniques not only from Reich, but also from bioenergetics, sensory awareness, and other body-oriented approaches. The participant/teacher ratio is kept small, never more than 10/1. Each weekend participant who wishes will receive an Intensive, while 5-day workshop participants receive two. By meeting sometimes in small groups and sometimes together in large groups, Radix combines the intimacy and individual attention of the small group with the energy and dynamism of the large. Grief or pain, fear, and rage that have been held in since childhood emerge in these workshops. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he/she discovers a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience changes profoundly as tender and sexual feelings for the mate intensify and merge.

Put Your Memories, Fantasies & Dreams to Work For You: A Reichian / Gestalt Approach to Energy Release Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

"To understand is to tremble. To recollect is to reenter and be riven."
—Harold Brodkey

This workshop focuses on releasing the energy locked in our memories, fantasies, and dreams so that this energy can be made available for present relationships and life situations in a way that makes our existence in the present less encumbered by unfinished business of the past as well as self-programmed, self-fulfilling prophecies of doom for the future. First priority is on intensive intrapersonal work in a supportive group setting. There will also be opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $270

Weekend of March 9-11

Tune Your Body—A Movement Adventure Nitza Broide Miller

The process of growing up provides us with many experiences—sensations, impulses, desires which express themselves spontaneously. Our body generates energy. We enjoy the pleasures of body movements, the touch, the magic of exploration and the joy of discovery.

At times, this growth process is cut off by rules and taboos or by other obstacles that are hard to conquer. We begin to listen more to the surroundings than to ourselves!

In this workshop we will listen to the excitement of our own rhythms; we'll tune into the internal voice of our body, and to the sensual flow and pleasure in recreating and reconnecting with ourselves. We will learn to let go of unnecessary tension in our body through dynamic relaxation, using imagery and visualization, and through the magic of dance. $110

Body Energetics and Primal Imprints / Hector Prestera

Neurolinguistic Programming Workshop Robert Dilts & Terrence McClendon

Neurolinguistic programming is based on the premise that "the map is not the territory"; that is, that we do not operate directly on the world around us but through maps or models of the world that we develop from the information we receive through our senses or representational systems (i.e., seeing, hearing, feeling, tasting and smelling). Neurolinguistic programming (NLP) is a way to work with this modelling process—how behavioral programs become established and changed. The purpose of NLP is to help people enrich potentially empoverished models of the world by working directly with the perceptual strategies that they have for organizing their experience.

The workshop will provide the participant with a set of conceptual tools and operational procedures that are powerful, effective, and at the same time gentle. The NLP techniques, which may also be applied successfully with families and organizations as well as individuals, are designed to increase the potentials of our models for behavior in all aspects, including creativity, decision-making, remembering and motivation. The focus of the workshop will be on the elicitation and utilization of cognitive strategies for change, and on the process of re-framing—a method of turning behavioral blocks into resources by changing the way they fit into a particular model of the world. $110

Weekend of March 30 - April 1

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

"When sex comes from the physical center, it is a necessity. When it comes from the mental center, it is a fantasy. When sex comes from the heart center, it is a deep, total, and profound experience of our own divinity. Sex is meaningless without the heart."

The purpose of this workshop is to heal the separation between our divinity and our sexuality as it exists in our consciousness, attitudes, and actions. This weekend will include breathing, movement, music sound, and massage meditation. We will come together to dance, to sing, to worship, to cry—to celebrate our vulnerability and our strength, our heights and our depths. Gabrielle will support us in going within ourselves to rediscover the magnitude of our own heart energy, thus infusing our sexuality, and our entire life experience, with depth and purpose. $110

This workshop is about handling fear in ourselves and in others in emergency and crisis situations. It is for nurses, physicians and other health professionals. There will be a session at the Esalen baths. Participation earns 10 hours continuing education credit. Enrollment is limited. $110

Close Encounters of a Balanced Kind / An Experiment In Meeting & Contacting Other Human Beings
Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

For workshop description see March 2–4. $110

The Lawyer—A New Perspective
A Weekend for Lawyers Presented by the Humanistic Law Institute

For workshop description see January 19–21. $110

Innerstanding / Daniel Bianchetta

This weekend we will gently explore and share our thinking (mind) feeling (body), and intuitive (spirit) processes. Experientially we will be using gestalt practices, meditation, movement and massage. Emphasis will be on being able to "take it home" with you. $110

Esalen Sport Center Residential Program

April 1—27
Sport & Consciousness
Coordinated by Mike Spino

There are many connections between consciousness and mental function on the one hand and athletic performance and enjoyment on the other. This workshop will explore some of these connections.

Mike Spino will individualize his mind/body approach to running as well as act as the co-ordinator of the various practices taught during the month.

Michael Murphy will discuss the role of altered states in sports-extraordinary perceptions, out-of-body experiences, moments of illuminations.

Frank Zane, the 1977 Mr. Olympia, will guide the seminar participants through a program of body building and will present many methods of physical and mental training that he has used to become the world's leading body builder.

George Leonard will introduce various methods of energy work that he has developed, and will discuss the relevance sports has for personal and social transformation.

A. J Lewis will introduce workshop participants to several approaches developed by Russian psychologists that have relevance for athletic training.

Ken Dychtwald will introduce a yoga stretching set for each participant as well as provide information relating to the understanding of proper physical functioning.

George Pferrier, Director of Xerox Fitness Center and clinical researcher in sport and awareness, will survey the recent research in sports medicine and methods to attain high levels of fitness and relaxation.

Dr Joan Ullyot will present results of her medical research into optimum fitness and will discuss various aspects of training for women.

Dr Donald Lindsay will discuss health aspects of sport including exercise physiology.

Deborah Medow will provide instruction in various types of massage practices.

Jim Hickman will present results of research on super normal bodily transformations.

Each workshop participant will receive an individualized training routine based on his or her level of fitness. The training will include running, stretching, mental exercises, and optional strength exercises based on a gradual progression of difficulty. If you have any questions about your ability to participate in a physical training program, please consult your physician prior to the workshop. A few partial scholarships are available for this program. For scholarship applications write Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. The program will have an enrollment limited to eighteen people. $1150 Deposit $400

Week of April 1-6

Cycles / Gabrielle Roth

This is a five day Moving Center ritual designed to inspire and channel the religious, sexual and creative aspects of life energy into unity and expression. Through movement, sound, music and writing meditations, we will explore and present our unique experiences of life's waves, rhythms and cycles. Life is theater and we will dance both as we stretch to our full beauty and power in a safe, comfortable and challenging atmosphere. $270

The Feeling Process / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

For workshop description see January 7—12. $270

Herbal Intensive / Jeanne Rose & Ryan Kopperud

This is a workshop about well-being and unity: how to get there and stay there; using plants for food/medicine and integrating health disciplines—jogging, yoga, tai chi, chanting and meditations incorporating both the spiritual and plant world.

We will gather, eat, rub, massage, smell, prepare in all ways (tinctures, elixirs, poultices) and contemplate plants in the natural Big Sur environs, making soups, cleansing both internally and externally, absorbing herbal baths and flower eating.

Our purifications will continue daily and these practices will enhance the unification of the body/mind/spirit. Our week in the glorious Big Sur will culminate in composing and eating The Herbal Feast. $270

Self Re-parenting / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to re-turn to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments will progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and re-infanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-Reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $270

Weekend of April 6-8

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

For workshop description see January 19-21. $110

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $100

The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples / David Schiffman

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery as well as gestalt awareness techniques. $110 per person

Week of April 8-13

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop David Grill, Sandy Thompson & Brian Killen

For workshop description see page 23. $300

Be Your Own Author-ity / Beverly Silverman

For workshop description see January 21-26. $270

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom to Be / David Schiffman

For workshop description see February 11-16. $270

Weekend of April 13-15

An Emotional and Sensual Flow through Movement Nitza Broide Miller

Movement and rhythm are the essence of life. Experience the rhythm of breathing and dancing; the joy of the sensations of our body and the excitement of its energy.

In this workshop we'll learn to become more aware of feelings, desires, motivations, and body sensitivity through movement. We'll learn to accept the gifts our body offers us; we'll experience our emotional and sensual flow of energy and become more integrated human beings. $110

Bodymind / Ken Dychtwald

The human potential movement has given birth to a variety of methods and practices that suggest direct and holistic relationships between the body and mind. During this workshop we will examine the basic principles and tenets that underly a holistic approach to bodymind development, health and fitness. In addition, drawing from the works of Reich, Perls, Rolf, Feldenkrais and several of the yoga schools, we will explore ways that the personality and health/dis-ease conditions can be read directly from the flows and form of the body. Through discussion, demonstration and a variety of bodymind awareness exercises, participants will have an opportunity to explore some of the many relationships between body and mind.

Required reading: Bodymind (Jove HBJ, 1978). $110

Tai Chi Chih—A Gift of Life / Catherine Elber

First presented to the public in 1974, Tai Chi Chih is based on ancient movements that were a closely guarded secret of the Chinese emporers and their clansmen for over a thousand years.

Easier than Tai Chi Chuan, these 19 gentle movements are becoming one of the simplest and most effective methods available for realizing within one's self how truely beautiful the gift of life really is.

By adding the principles of these motions to your life, you can experience a continual unfoldment of your potential while providing an enrichment to your life on every level. The effects of these movements enable you to experience the beauty and honor of personal transformation as your body, mind and soul reap the benefits of harmony and balance—physical health and grace, mental peace and clarity, spiritual infinity. $110

Week of April 15-20

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity / Robert Nadeau

For workshop description see January 26-28. $270

The Gestalt Triangle: Right-Brain, Left-Brain, & Body Energy / Frank Rubenfeld

In this workshop we will work and play with our left and right brains and with our body sensations and energy. Hot seat work will alternate with guided fantasies, use of art materials, energy massage and whatever else arises out of our context. $270

Massage Intensive / The Esalen Massage Crew

For workshop description see January 21-26. $270

Weekend of April 20-22

The Body & the Energy Body / George Leonard

Many ancient and modern disciplines of personal health, growth and change depend upon concepts of energy flows in and around the bodies of living things. Using techniques derived from the art of aikido, George Leonard will present his approach to the human biofield or "energy body." Through simple mental and physical exercises, participants will experience their energy bodies in interaction with nature and other people, and will practice centering and heightened awareness with special attention to stress reduction and good health. They will be introduced to alternative ways of dealing with everyday life situations—especially those involving tension and expectation—and will explore ways of getting in touch with their own hidden powers. There will also be discussion of these experiences as they relate to education, sports, and social transformation. $110

The Fertile Void: Paradox of Freedom / Jack Gaines

Though we act as though we are outer-directed, most of us are learning that we write our own scripts. In one way or another our teachers—biblical as well as contemporary—point out that each of us chooses whether our lives will be melodramatic or a mellow drama.

In our fear of emptiness, we evade the fertility of the void. Yet it is in the void—allowing life to unfold—that our happiness lies dormant. We will examine the synthesis between the fertile void, which is the teachings of Ram Dass, Krishnamurti, Muktananda, Alan Watts, Fritz Perls, Freud, Eric Berne, Assagioli, Ron Hubbard and Werner Erhard among others. Each uses a different metaphor. It is in the application of these seemingly diverse paths that the self-created obstructions to our own growth are dissolved. $110

Exploring Your Creative Process / Nancy Lunney

Through gestalt, imagery, music, writing, drawing, and videotape, we will investigate aspects of the creative experience, from blocking and stagefright to euphoria. Focus will be on self awareness and on developing the confidence and freedom necessary for the creative journey.

Individual projects can be developed during the workshop based on each person's major interest. This workshop is suitable for non-professionals as well as professionls in the creative and performing arts. $110

Week of April 22-27

A Workshop in Movement & Dance / Anna & Daria Halprin

This workshop is designed to explore with movement from the perspective of one's own life resources. The process the participants will experience is a physical one, utilizing movement and spontaneous dances. Mind/Body relationships will be an important focus. The workshop leaders will also incorporate gestalt principles, visualizations, music, and sharing as a way to enjoy, broaden and assimilate our experiences together. The natural and magnificent outdoor environment and facilities at Esalen will be a further enhancement. $270

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $240

Gestalt Practice
Richard & Christine Price & the Esalen Staff

For workshop description see January 14-19. $270

Weekend of April 27-29

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body / Barbara Clemans

For workshop description see February 18-23. $110

Adding More to Your Relationships—Couples Workshop
Gerald Smith & Betsy Hand

The goal of this workshop is to develop more skill in expressing what you feel—in being close—in getting distance—in fighting fairly. It is not for couples in serious trouble, but instead for prevention and growth. $110 per person

Experiencing the Joy of Your Inner Self / Michael Butler

For workshop description see February 23-25. $110

Feldenkrais Process & Gestalt / Kolman Korentayer

Kolman Korentayer has created and evolved a blending of the teachings and philosophies of Fritz Perls and Moshe Feldenkrais to form his own style of gestalt practice work. He has lived and worked with both Perls and Feldenkrais and is both a gestaltist and a graduate feldenkrais practitioner.

This workshop will involve the use of the gestalt process with an emphasis on "body-mind" techniques. In addition, the relationship of the gestalt and feldenkrais processes will be explored. $110

FUTURE WORKSHOP ANNOUNCEMENTS

Workshops of more than one week require special planning for participants. Whenever possible we will announce such workshops well in advance. More detailed descriptions—and any changes—will appear in the catalog covering the period in which the workshop is scheduled.

May 6—June 1

Holistic Medicine & Health Practices
Stanislav & Christina Grof

This workshop will focus on approaches to emotional, psychosomatic and physical disorders, as well as the events of birth and death, that are based on holistic understanding of the organism in its interpersonal, social, environmental, and cosmic context. We will explore the following areas:

Ancient & Non-Western Systems Based on the Unity of Mind & Body
We will review the historical material on supernormal physical feats, body transformation and "mind-over-body" manifestations as well as some extraordinary contemporary examples of these phenomena (the Murphy—Hickman transformation project). We will explore shamanic practices, psychic healing, Chinese philosophy and medicine, shiatsu, aikido, and the yogic disciplines.

Holistic Trends in Contemporary Medicine
The areas examined in this context will include comprehensive approaches to pregnancy and delivery (psychological, philosophical and spiritual significance of birth; work with pregnant couples; alternative methods of delivery; politics of birth); holistic approach to the treatment of cancer; revolution in the attitudes toward death and dying; and modern kundalini research. Special sessions will be dedicated to the theoretical models for holistic medicine emerging from the work of Karl Pribram and modern consciousness research. Donald Lindsay will conduct a comprehensive course on the principles of self-care based on most recent medical findings.

Self-Exploration & Group Process
Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators in an ongoing process of intrapsychic and interpersonal self-exploration of the participants. An important aspect of the programs of this series is a new approach to learning that combines information input with personal experience. We will experiment with gestalt practice, encounter, neo-Reichian approaches, guided imagery with music, mandala work, psychosynthesis, polarity and Esalen massage.

This is an educational program, it is not for the treatment of disease. Some weekend programs related to the subject matter of this workshop will be available to workshop participants at a reduced rate. The program is limited to 30 participants selected from applicants. The fee is $1150 including room and board. Some working scholarships are available for students on the basis of need. Scholarship forms can be obtained from Esalen Institute. If you wish to enroll in the workshop, send a letter of biographical information to: Holistic Medicine, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

DEFINITIONS

PSYCHOSYNTHESIS

Psychosynthesis is a psychological and educational approach for recognizing and harmonizing the many, often conflicting, elements of our inner lives. It is a developmental process based on a positive conception of man/woman within an evolving universe. Starting with each person's existential situation as he or she perceives it, personal growth is organized into a process aiming at the integration of personality and the emergence of an effective unifying center of being and awareness, the Self. The practical work of psychosynthesis chooses in each situation the appropriate progressive activities among many techniques and methods available. Some of these are: guided imagery, movement, self-identification, creativity, gestalt, meditation, training of the will, symbolic art work, journal keeping, ideal models, and development of intuition. The emphasis is on fostering an ongoing process of growth that can gain momentum and bring about a more joyful, balanced actualization of one's life.

MASSAGE

Massage is practiced to help the body relax, to release tensions, to balance the energy flow, and to soothe the being with gentle caring. Massages are given individually; workshops, classes, and private lessons are available.

T'AI CHI CHUAN

T'ai Chi Chuan is an ancient Chinese exercise discipline practised for health, meditation, energy flow, and self-defense. The slow, flowing movements of the "shadow boxing" comprise the oldest and "softest" of the Asian martial arts. Developed from the Chinese practice of nei kung, or inner exercise, it is part of the system of Taoist yoga. The term t'ai chi can be translated as "grand ultimate" and is expressed by the familiar symbol of yang and yin. It is thus rooted in the Chinese philosophy of change as expressed in the I Ching.

Bioenergetic analysis attempts to understand the life of the body through its expression of vitality, gesture, emotion, feeling, and relationship. The body is viewed as an energetic process that participates as the world in the world of instinctual, social, imaginative and creative realms. Bioenergetics seeks to develop an individual's range of expression by working through this process.

ENCOUNTER

The ground rules of encounter are that participants be open and honest in a group setting, that they avoid mere theorizing and instead talk about their feelings and perceptions. There is often an emphasis on eliciting emotions which lead to positive or negative confrontations rather than away from them. The focus of encounter is to explore interpersonal relations. Over the past years encounter, as practised at Esalen, has evolved into a direct approach incorporating several related disciplines to achieve its aims. Techniques and insights gained from gestalt, sensory awareness, bioenergetics, massage, movement, and structural integration are all part of Esalen's encounter groups today.

GESTALT

Gestalt Awareness Training is a theory and approach to personality integration first developed by Fritz and Laura Perls, though new styles and methods are being developed by other leaders. The goal of the training is to assist the participants to utilize excitement and awareness and to develop responsibility. Excitement—to have life energy freely available and flowing, not blocked. Awareness—to be conscious of my energy as and where it flows; to have action accessible to consciousness, not happening mechanically. Responsibility— to know and act on the principle that I am the one who acts, thinks, and feels whatever it may be that I act, think, or feel. No one else or no event influences me except with my consent. At times, everyone in the workshop may work simultaneously with some awareness exercise, or in interaction with each other. More traditionally, a fair amount of time will be spent with participants working individually with the leader. The starting point for such individual work is whatever is here and now of most involving concern for the organism; a fantasy or dream, an interaction with another person, a memory, or a physical posture. "Problems" are welcome as starting points, if they are truly present and not merely verbally presented. In keeping with the gestalt emphasis on personal responsibility, the leader usually leaves the initiative for such work with the participants. The assumption is made that participants are not "patients" but are persons responsible for their own life decisions.

STRUCTURAL INTEGRATION (ROLFING)

Structural Integration or Rolfing is a method of deep manipulation of the musculo-skeletal system that aims at balancing the major segments of the body. We have learned that connective tissue (fascia, tendons, ligaments) can be lengthened by palpation and a second principle: posture is behavior. Humans are psychophysical organisms; one cannot divorce their physical from their change the function.

SHIATSU MASSAGE

Shiatsu massage is the oriental art in which the hands are used to apply pressure to acupuncture points over the entire body, allowing the springs of life to flow.

in our organization . . .

FRIENDS OF ESALEN provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available to a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to the knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

SPECIAL INFORMATION

THE ESALEN CATALOG is published quarterly. Subscription cost for one year is $2 for the United States, $4 for Canada and Mexico, $8 for Europe and South America and $10 for all other countries. Please make all payments in US currency. Those attending Esalen workshops and conferences are automatically added to the mailing list for one year. A single inspection copy of the current issue is available free upon request from Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

CONTRIBUTIONS to Esalen Institute are tax deductible.

ACCREDITATION: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs.

RECORDINGS OF ESALEN PROGRAMS: For a catalog of recordings of Esalen/San Francisco programs contact Big Sur Recordings, Big Sur, CA 93920. They also have Big Sur programs prior to 1973.

Commercial use of Esalen program tapes is prohibited; all rights are reserved.

FILMS of the work of Fritz Perls, Carl Rogers, Abraham Maslow, Rollo May, Virginia Satir, Alexander Lowen, and others are available from Psychological Films, 205 West 20th Street, Santa Ana, California 92706. For color film documentaries with Alan Watts, Huston Smith, Lama Govinda, Joseph Campbell, Edgar Mitchell, and Margaret Mead, write: Hartley Productions, Cat Rock Road, Cos Cob, Connecticut 06807. For a list of other humanistic film sources write to Association for Humanistic Psychology, 325 Ninth Street, San Francisco, CA 94103. A film of Al Huang's work, Tai Chi: The Watercourse Way, is available through Cornerstone, 470 Park Avenue South, Suite N-3, New York City 10016.

REGISTRATION INFORMATION

For reservations and information, write or call:
Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.
Phone: (408) 667-2335, 10 to 3:30 every day;
10 to 8 Sunday & Friday.

Unless otherwise indicated, all programs listed in this brochure are residential programs in Big Sur. Send reservations for all programs to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute—By Reservation Only.

Fee Information: We require a reservation fee of $20 for weekend groups, $70 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs. Please mail all reservations to Esalen/Big Sur. Balance of payment is due on arrival. Esalen accepts Mastercharge, Bankamericard, and American Express. U S currency only, please.

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for a long term Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation (allow at least 3 weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—August 31 programs or for weekend programs.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has limited child care facilities. If you are interested in bringing a child while you are attending a workshop of five days or longer, contact the office well in advance for information on availability of child space.

We ask workshop participants not to have guests. Please do not bring pets.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5—5:30 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

☐ To obtain future issues of the Esalen Catalog & occasional mailings for one year, please send a check or money order for $2 to:

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying, or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Who's Responsible at Esalen?

We have long regarded Esalen Institute as an educational laboratory. Our evolving philosophical and operational positions reflect this regard. Underlying it all is a baseline ethic of "self-awareness and self-responsibility." However re-presented and operationalized in the past, by us or by others, this ethic continues to be the basis for our world view, and following from this, our educational approach. The self-awareness/self-responsibility ethic has grown and stabilized out of at least two generations of weighty dis-illusioning social and political events—all connected by a common reminder:

> Give away your personal faculties of discernment, of evaluation, of self-reference, and you lose your integrity (your wholeness). "Take responsibility for your every thought, your every feeling, your every action," said our beloved friend and teacher, Fritz Perls.

We view the implications of this position as being social as well as personal. They concern the ways we relate to ourselves and others.

In our position as educators, we invite people to take responsibility for their whole life situation while at Esalen. This includes taking responsibility for who they select as their teachers, their leaders, their gurus, their authority figures . . . and so on—and to be aware, whenever possible, what effect this has on them. We, of necessity, are setting up a situation for our seminarians to learn the practice of self-responsibility from the time they consider selecting a workshop, not just during the workshop. In effect, we are asking that this self-responsibility attitude be present in the initial contact with Esalen. Ideally, the same attitude will pervade after a workshop when our seminarians go back to the community and seek out others—physicians, teachers, counselors, mental health professionals, etc.

As we have become more thoughtful and self-critical about the overall direction of Esalen we have begun to concentrate on enhancing our basic offering—the Esalen environment and life style. Our primary emphasis is not on teaching particular truths or personal and interpersonal techniques for daily life; rather our primary concern is with a particular consciousness and developing an environment to support the evolution of that consciousness—the consciousness of self-awareness/self-responsibility.

THE PSYCHIC SIDE OF SPORTS

The following excerpts are taken from The Psychic Side of Sports by Michael Murphy and Rhea White published by Addison-Wesley

For the last six years, we have been investigating extraordinary psychic events in sport—moments of illumination, out-of-body experiences, altered perceptions of time and space, exceptional feats of strength and endurance, states of ecstasy. From personal interviews, books, magazines, letters and dissertations, we have gathered more than 4,500 of these incidents from famous and not-so-famous athletes. These tales are part of a sports underground—stories that athletes sometimes tell each other but that rarely appear in the sports pages. It's no wonder. Many of the experiences they reveal are surpassingly strange, and the athletes themselves often have trouble accepting them.

The many reports we have collected show us that sport has enormous power to sweep us beyond the ordinary sense of self, to evoke capacities that have generally been regarded as mystical, occult, or religious. This is not to say that athletes are yogis or mystics. Very few of us approach games with the lifelong dedication and conscious aspiration for enlightenment that the mystical path requires. It is simply to recognize the similarities that exist between the two fields of activity, both in their methods and in the states of mind they both evoke. The great seers of the contemplative traditions have explored the inner life more deeply than most of us, have opened up spiritual territories that we may or may not enter. But many athletes and adventurers have followed part way, however inadvertently, through the doorways of sport.

Yet we have found that athletes can be as shy or frightened about these things as our Victorian relatives supposedly were about sex. Some athletes have even denied stories that they had told us on previous occasions. Experiences of dramatically altered perception can be traumatic—and understandably so. Anyone would have trouble accepting these startling powers and strange states of mind if he or she had no context for them, no language or philosophy to support them. We hope to resolve that dilemma somewhat in this book. Chapters 2, 3, and 4 describe various psychic events, including mystical feelings and sensations, altered perceptions, and athletic feats that seem to defy normal explanations. In the last three chapters we examine some of the ways in which the timeless truths of our religious heritage, East and West, provide a framework for understanding such experiences as they appear in sports.

Given the similarities between sport and religious practice, the question arises whether training programs could deliberately cultivate the spiritual elements in athletics. Could the kinds of experience we have described in the preceding chapters be more fully evoked and nourished? Part of the answer is clear: coaches and athletes all over the world are already using methods from yoga, the martial arts, hypnosis, meditation, and other disciplines to enrich their training programs. For example:

During the 1960s a field of applied psychology called "psychic self regulation" was developed in the Soviet Union. It is based on laboratory studies of our human ability to control various physiological processes, including pulse, muscular relaxation, blood pressure, and breathing. The methods developed in this new discipline are being used in sport now by some Russians and East Europeans. The immensely effective sports training program in East Germany includes meditation, autogenic training, hypnosis, methods of "self-regeneration," dance, and various kinds of group process.

The United States Olympic Committee, while not making the effort that Russia and East Germany are in these areas, has recently instituted a few programs in biofeedback training and mental practice at their training centers at Squaw Valley, California, and elsewhere. The Buffalo Bills football team has worked with clinical psychologist Robert Nideffer on methods of mental practice, relaxation, and concentration.

In baseball, the Detroit Tigers have worked with biofeedback, and the Philadelphia Phillies have used transcendental meditation. Ken Norton has employed hypnosis before several of his fights, including the one in which he beat Muhammad Ali.

Lee Pulos, a Canadian clinical psychologist, has helped the Canadian National Women's Volleyball team and many other world-class athletes by getting them to practice their sports both mentally and physically. Like other sports psychologists Pulos has found that mental practice enhances physical performance, that when the mind and body are simultaneously trained the best results usually follow. His general method is simple. In volleyball, for example, he might have the player imagine a particular shot several hundred times until he or she sees it vividly. Then, when the image is powerfully established, the athlete will begin to practice that shot on the court, bringing his body into alignment with his inner vision. Periods of physical practice alternate with periods of mental practice until the athlete clearly sees what he wants to do—and then does it to his or his coach's satisfaction. Billie Jean King, Olympic 400 meters champion Lee Evans, high jumper Dwight Stones, and bodybuilder Arnold Schwartzenegger have all used mental techniques. The list could go on and on. The point we want to make is clear, however, many coaches and athletes pay attention to the mental aspects of their training. The question is: How far might this be developed? What could be done to bring the spiritual dimensions of games and training out into the open and nurture them more fully?

THE SCIENCE OF KNOWING

GREGORY BATESON

If you want to know—to understand—what's the matter with contemporary education, established medicine, holistic medicine, parent-child relations, conservatism, radicalism, government, religion, and the international scene, you will do well to study biology, and especially that branch of biology which is called epistemology.

Even this scientific discipline will not help you much because all the sciences together contain rather little knowledge of education and the rest, but it will help a little.

Epistemology is that science whose subject matter is itself. It is the name of a species of scientific study and talk. We set out to study the nature of study itself, the process of the aquisition of information and its storage.

The conventional definitions of epistemology would place it in philosophy and regard it as beyond empirical research—the discussion only of how we can know anything.

But how we acquire knowledge or information is a matter of observation and even experiment: how do the monarch butterflies find their way to the butterfly tree in the Esalen canyon? Not one of them has ever been here before.

The study of physics and how physics is done and the study of the language of physics in which the resulting knowledge is ordered and stored. All that can be a matter of empirical knowledge. It is a science as much as it is a branch of philosophy. It is not physics; it is a realm of knowledge where mathematics and logic and linguistics should meet to work on a common mass of data.

The study of art and poetry and of how these things are done and how history is done—all these are epistemology, along with the study of how epistemology is done.

It follows that epistemology is the great bridge between all branches of the world of experience—intellectual, emotional, observational, theoretical, verbal and wordless. Knowledge, wisdom, art, religion, sport and science are bridged from the stance of epistemology. We stand off from all these disciplines to study them and yet stand in the very center of each.

Epistemology is inductive and experimental and, like any true science, it is deductive and, above all abductive, seeking to put side by side similar chunks of phenomena. It notes that the structure of the mammalian face with a so-called "nose" between two so-called "eyes" is formally to be compared with the structure of a sentence whose so-called "subject" has a certain positional relation to so-called "verb" and so-called "object". We know that the thing in the middle of an elephant's face is its "nose" because it is located between two eyes.

Of course, there are no things for the science of epistemology to study—we study only ideas—only the ideas of things. No noses but only "noses".

When the elephant was still a fetus, long before its nose was useful for smelling or for lifting heavy logs, that incipient organ was somehow a "nose"—a relational, positional nose—in the organisational system of information upon which the embryology hinges.

"What the Frog's Eye Told the Frog's Brain" and "What is a Number that a Man may Know It and What is a Man that he may Know a Number?" These are titles of essays from Warren McCulloch's wonderful book Embodiments of Mind. These are essays fundamental to epistemology as a science. In the living of the frog the only input that can reach the frog's mind (it's total organisation) through the frog's eye is input about moving objects. It cannot see the stationary. The experiments are simple at least in principle. When an electrode attached to a galvanometer is placed on the frog's optic nerve, it becomes at once evident that motion in front of the eye is necessary in order to create an impulse in the nerve.

By the same token, our human machinery for perceiving—our sense organs—can receive news only of difference. And within the wide category of difference, we can perceive only those differences which are either already events in time or which can be converted into events in time. We can do a little better than the frog. She sees only the moving fly but we can see the fly which is not moving. We do this by converting the external static difference between fly and background into an event on our retina. The eye vibrates in its socket to create a scanning. The image of the fly moves relative to the rods and cones and thereby triggers their action.

So, epistemology insists that the stuff of knowledge is always made of the news of difference. But what's wrong with contemporary education? And the international scene? And all that?

Well, the next step from news of single differences is to the building up of patterns or configurations. Quite a step! And one which cannot be filled in here. Suffice it to say that notions like "aggression," "crime," "wealth"—and even "god"—are highly abstract patterns which continually provide the tramlines upon which our thought travels forward to decisions of all kinds.

If we have wrong ideas of how our abstractions are built—if, in a word, we have poor epistemological habits, we shall be in trouble—and we are.

Consider "crime". This is a word used by lawyers, a bunch of highly trained and intellectual men who should know better than to use it the way they do. They seem to think that "crime" is the name of an act or set of actions, and that this act if punished will disappear. That is, they act as if they believed—that "crime" will obey the same rules of reinforcement as the behavior of a rat in a learning experiment. (And, I suppose some criminals may share this crazy belief—and therefore be cured of "crime" by the negative reinforcements which the law provides.)

For the most part, "crime" is not at all what the law supposes. As Dr. Johnson observed "The Law, sir, is an ass".

"Crime" is an abstraction rather like "play" or "exploration". When grown-ups try to punish "play," they commonly discover that their threats and other procedures get incorporated into the play. To risk the punishment becomes part of the game. Likewise if you try to extinguish "exploration" in a rat by having him get an electric shock when he pokes his nose into a box, he will stop exploring that box, which he now knows to be dangerous, but he will continue to explore all other boxes because they might be dangerous and he needs to know!

Similarly with "crime". A large proportion of "criminals" will become better criminals under threat of punishment.

Epistemology will tell you that the name of the thing is not the thing named. A simple motto which current education will not regularly teach—because it is not "English Lit." or "Sociology" or "Citizenship" or "Bio," but more basic than any of them.

VALUES & OBJECTIVES IN HEALTH CARE

In August of 1978, a group of faculty from Stanford and the University of California, Davis, Medical School (Departments of Family Medicine) met at Esalen on two consecutive weekends.

One of the outcomes of these meetings was the drafting of a unique Statement of Values and Objectives for Health Care Workers – a set of guidelines for the education and practice of medicine, nursing and allied health professions.

At present, we are seeking to correct what we believe is a major defect in professional health care education—the inclination to emphasize technological factors while de-emphasizing attitudinal, interpersonal and self-care factors. The development of a corrective strategy in regard to this one-sided, unbalanced educational approach is a fundamental objective of our own educational program.

E.F. Schumacher, a prominent social critic, stated the problem this way: "Science and engineering produce 'know how' but 'know how' is nothing by itself; it is a means without an end, a mere potentiality, an unfinished sentence. . .Can education help us to finish the sentence, to turn the potentiality into a reality to the benefit of man?

"To do so the task of education would be, first and foremost, the transmission of ideas of value, of what to do with our lives. . . More education can help us only if it produces more wisdom. (p 82)

". . .Whether the subjects taught are subjects of science or of the humanities, if the teaching does not lead to a clarification of our fundamental convictions, it cannot educate a person and consequently cannot be of real value to society. (p 93)

"The essence of education is the transmission of values, but values do not help us to pick our way through life unless they have become our own, a part, so to say, of our mental make-up. This means that they are more than mere formulae or dogmatic assertions; that we think and feel with them, that they are the very instruments through which we look at, interpret, and experience the world. (p 82)

". . .Education which fails to clarify our central convictions is mere training or indulgence. For it is our central convictions which are in disorder. . . (p 101)"

—Small is Beautiful
Harper & Row, 1973

Without an explicitly stated core of convictions—a guiding image, or leitbild as the Germans say—we have ventured on a problem-filled course:

greater and greater specialization (almost for its own sake) growing impersonality serious mal-practice cases ecological and nutritional imbalances and more.

A gnawing awareness has developed among many people of the limitations of contemporary ways of being health care professionals in a society which has so fragmented the health care of its individuals (including that of its health care professionals).

The problem is not just in the field of health care. It is more general. It is at the very roots of our educational system. The words education and educate come from the latin educere which means "to lead out that which is within".

This meaning of the word is not appreciated by too many professional educators who tend to operate principally as in-structors of methods and of techniques, with minimal appreciation of the importance of self-awareness and the awareness of other selves. It is our aim to correct this deficiency in our own training program. As educators we view our task as two-fold: (1) provision of the best technical training possible, and (2) "the transmission of ideas of value," to quote Schumacher again, "of what to do with their lives," the articulation of a "guiding image" with which health care professionals can clarify central convictions and thus facilitate their own overall education—their own "leading out from within" of their own health care potential.

In order to accomplish our task we have undertaken to articulate a core of "ideas of value," as well as the primary objectives which stem from them and which together constitute the leitbild of our co-operative training program.

"All subjects, no matter how specialized, are connected with a centre; . . .the centre is constituted by our most basic convictions, by those ideas which really have the power to move us. In other words, the centre consists of metaphysics and ethics, of ideas that—whether we like it or not—transcend the world of facts." (Schumacher, p 94)

SELF-DETERMINATION

The following article was prepared by the staff of Self-Determination

A professor at the University of California at Santa Cruz began a special lecture last October with the question: "How many of you here think power is corrupting?" It was "Open House" at UCSC, and his audience was an unusually diverse group of parents, professors, and prospective students. All hands went up.

If the unanimity of response was surprising, it only reflected a truth about us as a society: we are uncomfortable about the use of power. The irony of this phenomenon is that democracy requires that citizens naturally assume and use power constructively. The same is true for us as persons: to be both responsible and caring, we need to be able to feel our own power and self-limit it by sharing it with others in healthy ways.

The values of self-awareness and personal responsibility are intimately tied to the issue of power. In order to develop self-awareness, we need the power to express and actualize our needs as we clarify them. Conversely, to use power constructively requires an awareness of our own motivations. Responsibility—the concern about and accountability for the effects of our use of power—develops only as a consequence of our commanding it. Learning to handle power is as much a part of our personal growth as it is a requisite for a healthy political system.

In the middle of 1974, John Vasconcellos, a California Assemblyman who was experiencing this personal/political connection and exploring its implications, met Stan Commons and Steve Reed, both of whom were campaign organizers with similar perceptions. All three were frustrated with attempts to effect social changes through traditional political processes. They reasoned that healthier people, with a stronger, clearer sense of themselves and their own power, were needed in order to effect meaningful social change. They also saw that social institutions can either enhance or inhibit personal growth. Institutional changes had to occur as well.

From this premise, a rough idea for a new organization began to take shape. Others soon joined Stan, Steve, and John. Through the first half of 1975, this small band held some 135 meetings throughout California with other groups, the result of which was a unique, non-profit organization which they called "SELF DETERMINATION: A Personal/Political Network".

The first SD'ers felt like pioneers. Not that the idea of a personal-political integration was new: as John, Stan, and Steve found on their travels, many people were thinking astoundingly alike. Rather, SD was a new realization of the idea in organizational form. The trips around California were like the first contacts of random molecules in the primal sea. The molecules, each autonomous and with different qualities, connected to form a new organism.

The group set about formulating a structure and process which would correspond to its philosophical base—and soon identified a "network" as an appropriate framework. The members are the network. Within the network, support and action can be initiated at any point. There is room for both cooperation and self-reliance. Individuals interact within the network according to their interests and needs:

- in issue areas of their own choosing;
- in core groups organized by geographical area;
- as participants in one or more of the network programs.

The staff facilitates participation by working to bring together individuals and organizations with common purposes and interests. This process is called networking (and, characteristically, this process is also one in which individual members can participate).

Now an organization of over 2000 members, the Self Determination Network's program to provide practical support for personal/political growth and change is threefold:

*The Self Determination Quarterly Journal, which is a forum for activists and writers to explore personal experiences and social theories, to describe creative community projects and institutional alternatives, and to promote community-based resources. Each Journal addresses a contemporary issue of our culture, with an emphasis on discovering hopeful alternatives for the future.

*The Network Exchange, which is a statewide program to locate, disseminate information about, and facilitate use of resources which assist persons and groups in becoming more active and effective in personal and/or community exchange activities. Resource information is available through a resource directory (NEX*US), a cross-referenced listing of personal and community resources augmented by descriptions of techniques for accomplishing cooperative goals, and an on-call computerized resource bank, an efficient source of up-to-date resource information throughout California.

*A Skills Workshops Program, which brings to local communities workshops which fuse personal growth and interaction with political skills and processes. The intention of these workshops is the widespread distribution of effective interpersonal, technical and political skills—with an emphasis on network processes.

People involved in Self Determination see the realization of the values of individual power, self-awareness, and responsibility as an evolutionary process, analogous to the recent revolution in our understanding of the human body. For some 300 years, the paradigm for the body was a machine commanded by a rational brain. Recently, work in a variety of disciplines has indicated that the functioning of organisms is not only—or even primarily—cognitive, but is emotional, physical, and spiritual as well. Accordingly, we now model the body as a biological system in equilibrium. SD's purpose is to extend this model to our understanding of personal/political relationships. Politics can no longer be viewed as a function of a few cells at the top: it is an integral part of every cell's activity to be pursued solely for its own merits, but as an inseparable function of our search for better ways of living in the world.

None of us has a master plan for a humanistic society. If one is to be found, we must arrive at it together. Self Determination will be conducting a workshop on networking at Esalen on June 29—July 1. Much of the workshop will be experiential, involving clarification of values and formulation of personal frustrations into political issues, in addition to practicing skills such as facilitation and information processing. As we learn to experience power and use it responsibly, we become active participants in creating our own future. The S D staff invites you to join them in this process.

If you wish to contact S D, call or write: Self Determination, 2431 Forest Ave., San Jose, CA 95128 (408) 984-8134

We invite your comments on our Food for Thought section. Address letters to Food for Thought, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. While we may not be able to respond to each letter, we will be sure to read all of them.

PROGRAMS AT WESTERBEKE RANCH

This series of programs sponsored by Esalen will be held at the Westerbeke Ranch in Sonoma County, which is about an hour's drive north of San Francisco. These residential workshops will be held in an intimate setting which includes rustic cabins, home cooked meals, a sauna and Japanese tub, a large swimming pool, and beautiful scenery. Weekend workshops begin on Friday evening and end Sunday at noon. Five day workshops begin on Sunday evening and end Friday at noon. A reservation fee of $70 is required for five day programs, and $20 for weekend programs. Reservation fees are not refundable, but with five days notice they can be transferred to other Esalen seminars. Full payment for all Westerbeke workshops is due five days in advance of the beginning of the program. Send all reservations and payments to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

April 1–6

Human Sexuality / Donald Lindsay, MD & Jack Rosenberg

This workshop reviews and relates the fields of human sexuality and humanistic psychology for the health professional. Both the medical and psychological aspects of sexuality will be covered, as well as a body energy approach to sexual counseling. Nurses and physicians will earn 30 hours of continuing education units. $270

April 6–8

Hypnosis & Parapsychology / Lee Pulos

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lecturettes explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possiblity of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $110

April 15–20

Motion & E-Motion: A Moving Celebration
Betty Fuller, Milton Trager, MD & Janet Sachson Zuckerman

An interdisciplinary training program for professionals and interested lay persons in counseling, education, health care, performing arts and sports. In these fields which utilize movement as a primary means to self-learning, self-realization and self-expression, learning to use one's own bodymind as a biofeedback instrument is critical.

Bodymind approaches include daily Trager Mentastics and feldenkrais awareness through movement lessons as well as other movement work which results in heightened consciousness, reduced stress, increased flexibility and greatly expanded self image. Emotional release and communications flow generated by the movement work and transforming experience of self will be processed in regular (small and whole) group sessions using gestalt, encounter, psychosynthesis and other visualization methods.

In addition to training in combining movement work and group process, each participant will have some experience of Trager Psychophysical Integration, his innovative one-to-one learning method which Dr. Trager will demonstrate.

Wear clothes suitable for movement and floor work and bring musical instruments for dancing and celebrating the flow. $270

April 20–22

Conscious Living/Dying / Stephen Levine

We will directly explore our attitudes and reactions to the process of dying and death through discussion and meditation. Our focus will include working through the heart with the dying, keeping death as an advisor, and working with the dying as a means of working on ourselves. $110

May 18–20

Accepting the Many Sounds of Our Miraculous Dancing Body / Nitza Miller

In this adventure of exploration of the natural space and beauty surrounding us as well as the richness of the miracle inside us, we shall tune in and listen to the myriad of sounds, rhythms, voices, and flowing movements expressed in our bodies which make us the miraculous and unique human beings we are.

Through effortless movement and the excitement and magic of dance, we'll experience the sensual flow of our energy with which we connect with ourselves and with others.

We'll use dance, music, sounds, art, dynamic relaxation, imagery and visualization to rediscover the many sounds of our dancing body. $110

May 18–20

Introduction to Shiatsu Massage / Patricia Caldwell

Shiatsu is the oriental art in which the hands are used to apply pressure to points on the body. Emphasis will be on self-awareness for both the receiver and the giver, providing the experience of expanding shiatsu practice into one's life as the experience of moving in the world without effort, and with the flow. A working knowledge of shiatsu in both theory and practice will be given. $110 per person

May 20–23

Care of the Hospice Worker and the Hospice Freestanding Facility / Stephen Connor, Becky Allen & Sandol Stoddard

Much focus is placed today on the "how to" of hospice care and the many approaches to providing care to the terminally ill. This three day workshop is planned for those who already are involved in providing hospice care. Discussion and exercises will center on taking care of ourselves when we are involved in taking care of others. This is an opportunity for peers to come together and share their common experiences while learning valuable self-help methods. We will also cover the use and care of volunteers. In addition there will be a workshop on the implementation of hospice freestanding facilities. This workshop will offer an opportunity for those involved in hospice work to come together for growth knowledge and enjoyment. $165

Massage & Deep Tissue Work–A Synthesis
Ryan Kopperud & Deborah Medow

This workshop for massage and health practitioners will combine massage with principles of deep tissue work: a deep tissue massage. As we work together, participants will experience body restructuring and increased body awareness. To enhance our understanding and experience of body/mind/spirit in this work, daily morning yoga sessions will be offered.

Some massage experience is necessary. Review of structural anatomy is also recommended for the training. $270

Massage for Couples / Gail Stewart Worth

This group is for partners (spouses, friends, lovers or good neighbors) who would like a weekend to melt down, cool out and lighten up with each other. We will ease into ourselves with massage, tantra, dance, chanting and other effortless delights. Leave behind your schedules and duties and bring along someone you trust. $110 per person

Self-Care for Helping Professionals / Tom Ferguson, MD

People in the helping professions frequently pay a great personal price in trying to live up to internalized models of what they should be. In this workshop we will join together to create a supportive peer community of sharing, trust, and good will. With the support of the group, we will each have an opportunity to explore conflicts between our professional lives and our own personal health and growth, and to work toward our own solutions to these problems.

Topics to be explored include: how rescuing leads to burnout, helping professionals as self-care role models, new kinds of worker-client interactions, creating peer support groups, a self-administered self-care skills inventory, and the self-care movement. $110

Perception, Change and Movement / Emmett Miller

A multi-dimensional experience of the inner and outer self. Meditation and self hypnosis for relaxation of the belief system, opening to perception and intuition, and for catalyzing desirable changes; massage and touch for awakening the body and for deeper personal communication; music, movement and dance for release of tension, expanding communication and joyful celebration; verbal and nonverbal experiences for the development of open, honest, direct sensitive communication patterns. Health professionals attending will be offered an opportunity to learn or to improve skills in hypnosis, psycholinguistics, and touch throughout the week. Nurses and physicians will earn continuing education units. $270

Awakening the Magician Within / Emmett Miller

Whether or not we have as yet learned it, there is a magician within each of us. His magic wand is belief. If we believe we are sick, we are sick; if we believe we are afraid, we are afraid; if we believe we are stuck, we are stuck. But all coins, even magic ones, have two sides. If we believe we are growing stronger every day, we are; if we believe we are free, we discover freedom all around us; if we believe in our creativity, our problems can joyfully solve themselves. In this seminar we will investigate and discover what truth there is in each of these statements for us, individually. Our explorations will be experiential, using methods of deep relaxation, visualization, movement and selective awareness. As we learn to tap the wellsprings of our belief systems we will begin to write our own movie—and to deprogram negative future expectations. $130

July 22–27

Gestalt Practice
Richard & Christine Price & The Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c. 2500

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure or accomplishment.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); Cutting Through Spritual Materialism (Chogyam Trungpa); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Education in Feeling and Purpose (Kelley); Illusions (Richard Bach). $300

Self Re-parenting / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to re-turn to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments will progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and reinfanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-Reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $300

March 4–30

Inner Road to Health / David Schiffman, Barbara Braunstien, Patricia Caldwell, Jeanne Rose, Ryan Kopperud, Elisa Lodge & the Esalen Staff

This is a training workshop about health—learning how to get well and stay well, and helping others to do the same, all by natural means. Sessions held during the day will focus on a variety of holistic health practices. We will cover herbal systems, nutrition and diet, different forms of massage such as shiatsu, polarity, Esalen massage and deep-tissue massage. The sessions will be both experiential and didactic. As different systems are introduced we'll explore ways of experiencing and embodying this knowledge, using our hands as well as minds. For example, we'll gather our own herbs to prepare powders, salves, infusions, tinctures, and herbal baths while at the same time learning the medicinal uses of various herbs.

Evening sessions will focus on individual and interpersonal process work, based on gestalt and psychosynthesis approaches. Weekends will generally be free and participants in the workshop may sign up for regularly scheduled weekend brochure programs, for the catalog price minus $50.

A principal emphasis throughout the month will be on discovering and awakening inner resources. In this connection, regular meditation, patterning, chanting, yoga, tai chi, massage, and other quieting practices will help still the mind and relax the body, permitting new sensitivities to emerge. We will also have dance, movement, and various forms of energy awareness sessions for the sheer enjoyment of learning to move freely and spontaneously in response to inner rhythms.

The group will meet in the Big House and many of the participants will be housed there. This provides a unique opportunity and setting for evolving this month-long group experience into a family experience. For those who cannot afford the full tuition cost, a limited number of partial scholarships are available, for which a weekly work commitment is required. For scholarship information write to Esalen, Big Sur, CA 93920. This is an educational program, it is not for the treatment of disease. Tuition: $1150 Deposit: $400

April 1–27

Sport & Consciousness

Coordinated by Mike Spino

There are many connections between consciousness and mental function on the one hand and athletic performance and enjoyment on the other. This workshop will explore some of these connections.

Mike Spino will individualize his mind/body approach to running as well as act as the co-ordinator of the various practices taught during the month.

Michael Murphy will discuss the role of altered states in sports-extraordinary perceptions, out-of-body experiences, moments of illuminations.

Frank Zane, the 1977 Mr. Olympia, will guide the seminar participants through a program of body building and will present many methods of physical and mental training that he has used to become the world's leading body builder.

George Leonard will introduce various methods of energy work that he has developed, and will discuss the relevance sports has for personal and social transformation.

Ken Dychtwald will introduce a yoga stretching set for each participant as well as provide information relating to the understanding of proper physical functioning.

George Pferrier, Director of Xerox Fitness Center and clinical researcher in sport and awareness, will survey the recent research in sports medicine and methods to attain high levels of fitness and relaxation.

Dr Donald Lindsay will discuss health aspects of sport including exercise physiology.

Deborah Medow will provide instruction in various types of massage practices.

Jim Hickman will present results of research on super normal bodily transformations.

Each workshop participant will receive an individualized training routine based on his or her level of fitness. The training will include running, stretching, mental exercises, and optional strength exercises based on a gradual progression of difficulty. If you have any questions about your ability to participate in a physical training program, please consult your physician prior to the workshop. A few partial scholarships are available for this program. For scholarship applications write Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. The program will have an enrollment limited to eighteen people. $1150 Deposit $400

Week of April 1-6

Cycles / Gabrielle Roth

This is a five day Moving Center ritual designed to inspire and channel the religious, sexual and creative aspects of life energy into unity and expression. Through movement, sound, music and writing meditations, we will explore and present our unique experiences of life's waves, rhythms and cycles. Life is theater and we will dance both as we stretch to our full beauty and power in a safe, comfortable and challenging atmosphere. $270

The Feeling Process / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feelings from thoughts—sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $270

Herbal Intensive / Jeanne Rose & Ryan Kopperud

This is a workshop about well-being and unity: how to get there and stay there; using plants for food/medicine and integrating health disciplines—jogging, yoga, tai chi, chanting and meditations incorporating both the spiritual and plant world.

We will gather, eat, rub, massage, smell, prepare in all ways (tinctures, elixirs, poultices) and contemplate plants in the natural Big Sur environs, making soups, cleansing both internally and externally, absorbing herbal baths and flower eating.

Our purifications will continue daily and these practices will enhance the unification of the body/mind/spirit. Our week in the glorious Big Sur will culminate in composing and eating The Herbal Feast. $270

Self Re-parenting / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to re-turn to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments will progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and re-infanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-Reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $270

Weekend of April 6-8

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

This workshop will include massage and dancing, exploring the rituals of Black disco dancing in contemporary American society. High-low energy, sensual and sexual, rhythm and syncopation, hand clapping, foot stomping, using African drums, we will use our voices and prerecorded popular Black music. $110

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $100

The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples / David Schiffman

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery as well as gestalt awareness methods. $110 per person

Week of April 8-13

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be / David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the methods of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics and journal work. $270

David Grill, Sandy Thompson & Brian Killen

For workshop description see page 23. $300

Be Your Own Author-ity / Beverly Silverman

Be the author of your own life—write down your own script. You don't have to live someone else's plot. Life is a continuous process and we can be in charge of our own movement. The style of contact we use will be gestalt and psychosynthesis and anything else that works. $270

Weekend of April 13-15

An Emotional and Sensual Flow Through Movement
Nitza Broide Miller

Movement and rhythm are the essence of life. Experience the rhythm of breathing and dancing; the joy of the sensations of your body and the excitement of its energy.

In this workshop we'll learn to become more aware of feelings, desires, motivations, and body sensitivity through movement. We'll learn to accept the gifts our body offers us; we'll experience our emotional and sensual flow of energy and start to become more integrated human beings. $110

Through gestalt, imagery, music, writing, drawing, and videotape, we will investigate aspects of the creative experience, from blocking and stagefright to euphoria. Focus will be on self awareness and on developing the confidence and freedom necessary for the creative journey.

Individual projects can be developed during the workshop based on each person's major interest. This workshop is suitable for non-professionals as well as professionals in the creative performing arts. $110

Tai Chi Chih—A Gift of Life / Catherine Elber

First presented to the public in 1974, Tai Chi Chih is based on ancient movements that were a closely guarded secret of the Chinese emporers and their clansmen for over a thousand years.

Easier than Tai Chi Chuan, these 19 gentle movements are becoming one of the simplest and most effective methods available for realizing within one's self how truly beautiful the gift of life really is.

By adding the principles of these motions to your life, you can experience a continual unfoldment of your potential while providing an enrichment to your life on every level. The effects of these movements enable you to experience the beauty and honor of personal transformation as your body, mind and soul reap the benefits of harmony and balance—physical health and grace, mental peace and clarity, spiritual infinity. $110

Week of April 15-20

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity / Robert Nadeau

Who are we really?

On a "bad day" we approach life feeling anxious, incompetent, unloved, unloving—basically negative and small. At other times we're like a different person—calm, squared away, loving, open. And then there are those extraordinary moments of opening to larger, finer dimensions where we experience the oneness, the totality of our philosophies.

These are shifts of identity, and the shifting process is a natural one. But most of us stumble from identify to identity, getting "stuck" in smaller states and only rarely touching finer ones.

In this workshop we'll experience the shifting process and learn to apply it to our jobs, our relationships, the ordinary and extraordinary times in our lives. We'll use meditation, imagery, centering, and body movement. $270

In this workshop we will work and play with our left and right brains and with our body sensations and energy. Hot seat work will alternate with guided fantasies, use of art materials, energy massage and whatever else arises out of our context. $270

Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

The members of the massage staff, each with their own unique style, will give instruction and help the group to practice basic techniques of massage upon one another: sensory awareness, deep muscular massage, joint articulation, polarity. As we learn to feel with our hands how the body and the life-force within it works, we learn to release tensions in others and to be more fully aware of ourselves.

The group meets daily in the mineral baths. $270

EXPERIENCING ESALEN

Experiencing Esalen Staff

Coordinated by Janet Sachson Zuckerman

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificance of the Big Sur coast.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls) and Anger and the Rocking Chair (Lederman).

Weekend of April 20-22

The Body & the Energy Body / George Leonard

Many ancient and modern disciplines of personal health, growth and change depend upon concepts of energy flows in and around the bodies of living things. Using methods derived from the art of aikido, George Leonard will present his approach to the human biofield or "energy body." Through simple mental and physical exercises, participants will experience their energy bodies in interaction with nature and other people, and will practice centering and heightened awareness with special attention to stress reduction and good health. They will be introduced to alternative ways of dealing with everyday life situations—especially those involving tension and expectation—and will explore ways of getting in touch with their own hidden powers. There will also be discussion of these experiences as they relate to education, sports, and social transformation. $110

The Fertile Void: Paradox of Freedom / Jack Gaines

Though we act as though we are outer-directed, most of us are learning that we write our own scripts. In one way or another our teachers—biblical as well as contemporary—point out that each of us chooses whether our lives will be melodramatic or a mellow drama.

In our fear of emptiness, we evade the fertility of the void. Yet it is in the void—allowing life to unfold—that our happiness lies dormant. We will examine the synthesis between the fertile void, which is the teachings of Ram Dass, Krishnamurti, Muktananda, Alan Watts, Fritz Perls, Freud, Eric Berne, Assagioli, Ron Hubbard and Werner Erhard among others. Each uses a different metaphor. It is in the application of these seemingly diverse paths that the self-created obstructions to our own growth are dissolved. $110

The human potential movement has given birth to a variety of methods and practices that suggest direct and holistic relationships between the body and mind. During this workshop we will examine the basic principles and tenets that underly a holistic approach to bodymind development, health and fitness. In addition, drawing from the works of Reich, Perls, Rolf, Feldenkrais and several of the yoga schools, we will explore ways that the personality and health/dis-ease conditions can be read directly from the flows and form of the body. Through discussion, demonstration and a variety of bodymind awareness exercises, participants will have an opportunity to explore some of the many relationships between body and mind.

Required reading: Bodymind (Jove HBJ, 1978). $110

Week of April 22-27

A Workshop in Movement & Dance / Anna & Daria Halprin

This workshop is designed to explore with movement from the perspective of one's own life resources. The process the participants will experience is a physical one, utilizing movement and spontaneous dances. Mind/Body relationships will be an important focus. The workshop leaders will also incorporate gestalt principles, visualizations, music, and sharing as a way to enjoy, broaden and assimilate our experiences together. The natural and magnificent outdoor environment and facilities at Esalen will be a further enhancement. $270

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

Gestalt Practice
Richard Price, Leonard Bearne & the Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c. 2500

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure or accomplishment.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); Cutting Through Spiritual Materialism (Chogyam Trungpa); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Education in Feeling and Purpose (Kelley); Illusions (Richard Bach). $270

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body / Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feelings of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact, and nurturing, sensitive giving and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital exploration in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $110

Adding More to Your Relationships—Couples Workshop Gerald Smith & Betsy Hand

The goal of this workshop is to develop more skill in expressing what you feel—in being close—in getting distance—in fighting fairly. It is not for couples in serious trouble, but instead for prevention and growth. $110 per person

Feldenkrais Process & Gestalt / Kolman Korentayer

Kolman Korentayer has created and evolved a blending of the teachings and philosophies of Fritz Perls and Moshe Feldenkrais to form his own style of gestalt practice work. He has lived and worked with both Perls and Feldenkrais and is both a gestaltist and a graduate feldelkrais practitioner.

This workshop will involve the use of the gestalt process with an emphasis on "body-mind" techniques. In addition, the relationship of the gestalt and feldenkrais processes will be explored. $110

Week of April 29-May 4

Body Awareness & Health Care Julian Silverman & Robert Nadeau

Most of us have more energy available to us than we are aware of:
more health,
more vibrance,
more balance.

This workshop is aimed:
at connecting with that "more",
at educating how to be more CARE-FUL with one's self and with others, at learning how to use one's self in health care work.

We will use methods derived from aikido, various moving and sitting meditations, gestalt, psychosynthesis and other systems. $270

A Psychic Training Program / Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only to learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $270

Put Your Memories, Fantasies & Dreams to Work For You: A Reichian / Gestalt Approach to Energy Release Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

"To understand is to tremble. To recollect is to reenter and be riven."
—Harold Brodkey

This workshop focuses on releasing the energy locked in our memories, fantasies, and dreams so that this energy can be made available for present relationships and life situations in a way that makes our existence in the present less encumbered by unfinished business of the past as well as self-programmed, self-fulfilling prophecies of doom for the future. First priority is on intensive intrapersonal work in a supportive group setting. There will also be opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $270

THE ESALEN WORK-STUDY PROGRAM

In the process of becoming educated, we are taught that it is more important to be involved with the outside world than with our Selves. We are taught to become Ego-involved—involved with manipulating things and people. We are taught to experience our selves primarily in relation to others; we lose touch with our essence.

From this perspective, we offer an opportunity to return to our Selves within the working context of the Esalen community. Our faculty for this program is our environment—staff—community.

Learning/dis-covering the use of your own energy in work . . .
For your SELF.
Living together (close to others) operatively and co-operatively in a unique, high intensity environment.
Contact/communication with the people of Esalen via group work and in day-to-day Esalen happenings.
An opportunity for
SELF-regulation
SELF-examination
SELF-contemplation
and if you choose
SELF-reevaluation
Facilitated by removal from your ordinary living context.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week at such jobs as gardening, maintenance, office, kitchen duties, etc. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs and work assignments are made according to these requirements. (Flexibility is one of the watchwords of life at Esalen). The Work-Study program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program (emotionally and physically) and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share—contact—play/alone-together.

Accommodations are shared. The program lasts 28 days; four weeks and four weekends at a basic cost of $350. Depending on your work schedule, weekend workshops may be available for an additional fee. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates. Arrangements are made through the office.

It is possible to be in the work-study program up to three months, by invitation, after the first month.

Available dates:

March 25–April 22; April 22–May 20; May 20–June 17; June 17–July 15; July 15–August 12; August 12–September 9; September 9–October 7.

If interested, please apply as early as possible to Work Study Program, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. Only a limited number of applicants are accepted. Scholarships are not available for the Work-Study program.

WAYS OF BEING AT ESALEN

Scholarship Information

If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program of five days or longer, write for a scholarship form before making a reservation. Allow at least three weeks for processing. If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving the notification. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15–August 31 programs or for weekend workshops.

Ongoing Residence Program

Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (for four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $960 per 26-day period.

Weekend of May 4-6

Selective Awareness: Mind-Body Relationships in Psychosomatic Medicine / Emmett Miller

When we teach ourselves to act in response to our internal as well as external environment, many of our difficulties (unwanted emotions, maladaptive habits) can be eased. The ability to resolve personal blocks, develop increased sensitivity, heighten awareness, and produce desirable states of consciousness lies within each of us. Our processing of the world and our communicating with it proceeds throughout varying stages of higher and lower energy; as the mind-body becomes attuned, it acts in accord with its changing experience. In this workshop we will apply the principles of selective awareness and self-hypnosis to learn to expand awareness and to adjust to changing experiences. $110

I'm Entitled! / George & Judith Brown

This workshop teaches the process of owning what each of us has available in both our inner world and in our outer world, and appreciating the ways we interrupt our own natural growth and personal and interpersonal development. Then we can recognize what is and what isn't and what could (not "should") be and relish the choices, challenges, adventures, and peace to which we are all entitled. Suitable for couples or individuals. Limited to 20.
$110 per person

Close Encounters of a Balanced Kind / An Experiment In Meeting & Contacting Other Human Beings Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop provides an opportunity for you to pay attention to the quality of your interpersonal contact, and particularly, to your ability to stay tuned in to yourself while meeting and contacting others.

You may discover your own rhythm of contact and withdrawal; you may discover how you sabotage yourself from having more satisfying personal relationships; you may discover you're getting exactly what you want from your relationships. You may discover anything; you may discover nothing. You're in charge. $110

Lomi: An Exploration of the Body / Mind / Spirit Through Awareness / David Kessler

"Knowing others is wisdom Knowing the self is enlightenment."
—Lao Tzu

Using tools from the Lomi tradition; gestalt, conscious movement, breath awareness, aikido, body work, polarity massage, meditation, and Neurolinguistic Programming. We will explore and enhance our body/mind/spirit processes. The focus is cultivation of awareness at all levels of existence and development of tools for self-care. $110

May 6—June 1

Holistic Medicine & Health Practices Stanislav & Christina Grof

This workshop will focus on approaches to emotional, psychosomatic and physical disorders, as well as the events of birth and death, that are based on holistic understanding of the organism in its interpersonal, social, environmental, and cosmic context. We will explore the following areas:

Ancient & Non-Western Systems Based on the Unity of Mind & Body
We will review the historical material on supernormal physical feats, body transformation and "mind-over-body" manifestations as well as some extraordinary contemporary examples of these phenomena (the Murphy—Hickman transformation project). We will explore shamanic practices, psychic healing, Chinese philosophy and medicine, shiatsu, aikido, and the yogic disciplines.

Holistic Trends in Contemporary Medicine
The areas examined in this context will include comprehensive approaches to pregnancy and delivery (psychological, philosophical and spiritual significance of birth; work with pregnant couples; alternative methods of delivery; politics of birth); holistic approach to the treatment of cancer; revolution in the attitudes toward death and dying; and modern kundalini research. Special sessions will be dedicated to the theoretical models for holistic medicine emerging from the work of Karl Pribram and modern consciousness research. Donald Lindsay will conduct a comprehensive course on the principles of self-care based on most recent medical findings.

Self-Exploration & Group Process
Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators in an ongoing process of intrapsychic and interpersonal self-exploration of the participants. An important aspect of the programs of this series is a new approach to learning that combines information input with personal experience. We will experiment with gestalt practice, encounter, neo-Reichian approaches, guided imagery with music, mandala work, psychosynthesis, polarity and Esalen massage.

This is an educational program, it is not for the treatment of disease. Some weekend programs related to the subject matter of this workshop will be available to workshop participants at a reduced rate. The program is limited to 30 participants selected from applicants. The fee is $1150 including room and board. Some working scholarships are available for students on the basis of need. Scholarship forms can be obtained from Esalen Institute. If you wish to enroll in the workshop, send a letter of biographical information to: Holistic Medicine, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

Classical Mysteries of the Goddess / Joseph Campbell

A weekend of slide-illustrated lectures and discussions, dealing with the goddess cults of the Ancient World, from circa 7000 B C to the rise of the Christian cult of the Virgin. Contrasts with the Old Testament and Olympian mythologies will be analyzed, and their relevance recognized to some of our modern sociological problems. Is the Great Goddess of Many Names, known in India as Maya-Shakti-Devi, again coming, for example, into her own? $110

Exploring Self-Acceptance / David Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self-concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter methods, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $110

Dreams and Your Personal Mythology
Stanley Krippner & David Feinstein

Examining one's dreams is a powerful mode for assuming increased conscious and active participation in the ongoing development of one's personal mythology. This workshop will introduce the concept of personal mythology, explore the processes in personal myth development, survey approaches for increasing conscious participation in one's myth life, and examine the state of one's own personal mythology with techniques from gestalt, psychosynthesis and the exploration of dream material. A substantial portion of the workshop will be devoted to intense personal exploration that will support participants in assessing their current life space and to intentionally focus energy in new directions. Participants are encouraged to bring a journal and to record their dreams in it prior to the workshop.

Suggested reading: The Realms of Healing (S Krippner & A Villoldo) (Millbrae, CA: Celestial Arts, 1976); The Dream Game (A Faraday) (New York: Harper, 1975); Myths to Live By (J Campbell) (New York: Viking, 1972); The Quest: History and Meaning in Religion, (M Eliade) (Chicago: Univ. of Chicago Press, 1969). $110

Week of May 13-18

The Visionary Journey / Joseph Campbell

The universally recognized "Stations of the Mystic Way" will be the concern of this five day series of slide-illustrated lectures and discussions. The differing imageries of a Navaho version of the Journey, Dante's Divine Comedy, the medieval Grail and Tristan romances, the Marseilles Tarot deck, Tibetan Book of the Dead, and Chakra system of the Kundalini, will be compared and interpreted in terms of the Jungian theory of psychological archetypes. The inward journeys of two twentieth-century women will bring the whole to a modern focus. $270

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be / David Schiffman

For workshop description see April 8–13. $270

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

All the world's a stage and the current production can be a soap opera, musical comedy, tragedy, or three-ring circus. Since we choose our parts, finding new ways to express ourselves can open up a variety of options on how to play our lives. Using gestalt, music, drawing, and video tape in a non-judgmental environment, we will explore getting our "act" together. No special talent or previous group experience is necessary. $270

Weekend of May 18-20

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity / Robert Nadeau

For workshop description see April 15–20. $110

Steps to an Ecology of Mind / Gregory Bateson

In the last twenty years, the theoretical advances in cybernetics and advances in the study of personal interaction have led to new ways of looking at the living world, including everything from biology to poetry and politics. The workshop will explore these ways of perceiving and thinking. $110

Kundalini Awakening / Lee Sannella & Harold Streitfeld

There exists a growth process that imitates, particularly in its early stages, familiar clinical symptoms. However, this process itself is not pathological.

Those who experience this process display a variety of unusual manifestations occurring at any or all levels of functioning: sensory, motor, emotional and mental. Strange bodily sensations and pains make them worry that they may be coming down with some dread disease. Mental disturbances make them wonder whether they may be losing control of their minds. Inexplicable outbursts of crying or anger are thought to be hysteria. The basis of this unusual condition is the arising in the body of a special non-physical "life" energy. A commonly used name for this energy is kundalini.

In this workshop kundalini awakening will be approached from an enlightened psychiatric point of view through lectures, case material from the files of the Kundalini Clinic, meditation enhanced by energy transmission (shaktipat) and a unique set of Taoist exercises for stabilizing the kundalini flow. This workshop is for professionals and students in the areas of psychiatry, psychology, general medicine and the healing professions. $110

Gestalt, Bioenergy & Human Contact / Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $270

Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

For workshop description see April 15–20. $270

Weekend of May 25-27

Energy Systems and Gestalt Process / Alan Schwartz

Read the weeklong description (May 20–25). This will be a weekend to explore and understand our individual energy systems and their relation to how we both make contact and inhibit contact. One focus will be on integration via energy release techniques. Another will be on the simple task of being present, physiologically and emotionally, being aware that contact refers to our consistent awareness process and the autonomous expression of who we are. $110

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 15. $100

Running Home: Recent Developments in the Mind/Body Approach to Running / Mike Spino

In this workshop we will draw on recent developments in sport physiology, preventive medicine, the mental training of athletes in East Germany and the Soviet Union, Eastern philosophy, yoga, and the martial arts as well as research on bodily transformations at the Esalen Sport Center. We will work with gaits and tempos for running, muscle/skeletal exercises, flexibility exercises, training routines, visualization exercises and meditation techniques. $110

Week of May 27-June 1

Awareness Through Movement & Functional Integration: The Feldenkrais Method / Mia Segal

Through a series of simple, gentle exercises devised by Moshe Feldenkrais we will learn more about how our bodies work and explore new possibilities of movement. $270

Zero Balancing / Fritz Smith

Zero balancing is a body handling system utilizing structural acupressure to deal directly with the interface between body structure and energy flow. The workshop will be both didactic and experiential.

Traditional anatomy, physiology, and kinesiology will be reviewed and then reinterpreted from an alternative viewpoint indicating the often overlooked imbalances which occur within our foundation joints. These imbalances may lead to chronic body pain, and frequently represent an ongoing energy drain from the body. Based on laws of nature Zero Balancing is both a pleasure to give and to receive, and results seen are immediate, gratifying and often inspiring, with seemingly little effort on our part. While there will be both theoretical presentations and practical demonstrations, the main emphasis of the workshop will be toward individual instruction.

The workshop is designed for persons in the healing professions. $270

Weekend of June 1-3

The Theater of Being / Elisa Lodge

The stage is set: the ocean, the sky, the mountains and ourselves.

The plot: the manner in which we move, live and love.

In this weekend of creative exploration we will touch into the inner sources where our beauty and power begins.

The tools: structural patterning, acting methods, visualization, meditation with sound, movement, music and massage.

All for the benefit of releasing ourselves; our heart and soul into the world. $110

Experiencing Esalen for Health Care Professionals Coordinated by Jay Kaplan, MD

This workshop is designed for health care professionals who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on experiencing a variety of approaches to self awareness and self care. Some of the following experiences will be available: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, rolfing, feldenkrais, yoga, polarity massage and shiatsu. Nurses and physicians will earn continuing education units. $110

Open Psychodrama Encounter / Walt & Maurica Anderson

This workshop is a flexible weekend's work and play using a variety of encounter, gestalt, and body-movement approaches, with emphasis on psychodrama—the enactment of improvised life scenes as a way of expressing feelings, gaining insight, working through interpersonal conflicts, developing more openness and spontaneity, and having fun. The degree of active involvement is up to the individual. $110

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop
Merri Goldenson, Joel Dweck & Peter Bernhardt

For workshop description see page 23. $300

The Creative Journal: A Path to Personal Integrity & Enthusiasm / Dee Mundschenk

This workshop will focus on a journal-keeping process for searching out and honoring our singular strengths and individual capabilities. With a personal journal we have an instrument to use in our search for balance, harmony and growth. It aids in formulating insights into visible, useful expressions; releasing powerful emotions creatively; strengthening personal integrity; and illuminating the body/mind processes.

In non-analytical, non-coercive, non-judgmental modes drawn from Eastern and Western practices for self-realization, we will begin developing the discipline and perspectives useful in honoring our vast mental, physical, and emotional prowess. Whether participants are devoted seekers or occasional explorers in the realm of personal integrity, this journal workshop will be of sufficient scope to provide extensive individual insights into personal power, compassion, humor, and new directions.

Please bring loose leaf notebooks with dividers, if possible, favorite pens, a small mirror, an open mind, and good and playful will for yourself. $270

Heal Thy Self: A Workshop for Health Professionals
Hughes Andres, MD & Mary O'Hara Devereaux, FNP

This workshop focuses on our behavior as health care practitioners and how this behavior affects our own health as well as the health of our patients. It emphasizes:

- Self-responsibility for each practitioners health;
- Techniques for enhancing the sensitivity of practitioners in ways which make them more "tuned-in" to each patient-consumer;
- Caring and being careful—applying sound judgment and knowledge in relation to patients and simultaneously not taking health-care responsibility away from patients.

Nurses and physicians will receive 30 hours of continuing education credits. $270

Opening the Feelings

RADIX NEO-REICHIAN WORKSHOPS

(formerly Interscience Workshops)

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this series of workshops which employ neo-Reichian techniques of emotional release. The Radix Intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, is practiced by Charles and Erica Kelley and their staff at the Radix Institute. The intensive, like other neo-Reichian techniques used in these workshops, grew from the discovery by Charles Kelley's teacher, Wilhelm Reich, of the way in which feeling is rooted in the flow of energy in the body, and is blocked by chronic muscular contractions which Reich called the muscular armor. Freeing the armor enables the student to open feeling that is buried and to soften and free feeling that is too strong and has been held in for fear of explosion. In these workshops armor is softened by simultaneous work on the character and body, using techniques not only from Reich, but also from bioenergetics, sensory awareness, and other body-oriented approaches. The participant/teacher ratio is kept small, never more than 10/1. Each weekend participant who wishes will receive an Intensive, while 5-day workshop participants receive two. By meeting sometimes in small groups and sometimes together in large groups, Radix combines the intimacy and individual attention of the small group with the energy and dynamism of the large. Grief or pain, fear, and rage that have been held in since childhood emerge in these workshops. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he/she discovers a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience changes profoundly as tender and sexual feelings for the mate intensify and merge.

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth (A four week internship program for personal & professional growth)

David Schiffman, Elisa Lodge
Richard & Christine Price with the Esalen Staff

Over the years Esalen has functioned as a major clearing house for a wide variety of approaches and means for facilitating personal evolution and expression. One's journey could begin with any realm—mental, physical, emotional, or transpersonal—each path serving to create a wealth of information and energetic access.

What are the common experiential and conceptual threads that underlie each of these paths? How can these threads of experience be best woven together to create a fabric whose qualities are simultaneously exquisite in their delicacy while still remaining strong enough to sustain the wear and tear of worldly existence? And how best might this very personal process of self-discovery and integration be taught and shared with others?

The exploration and resolution of these and other basic questions pertaining to the process of change and growth will serve as the basis of our work together during this month long institute program.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own ability, style, and artfulness both as individual guide and group facilitator, as well as to do in-depth personal work and training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthetic techniques, and the meditative arts.

The program will be structured to include: intensive individual work, supervised observations, practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills, video feedback, illustrated lectures and didactic theoretical sessions. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective linking human potential practices with traditional psychological and counseling modalities.

Curriculum

The curriculum will be divided into seminars, observation-supervision sessions, and group sessions. Seminars will consist of conceptual presentations, guided exercises and discussions done by core as well as visiting faculty.

Observation and supervision sessions will involve individual counseling among group members with supervision by core faculty. Included in these will be video replays and discussions pertinent to the work being done.

Group sessions will provide the participants with the opportunity to do in-depth work on their own process with the faculty as well as explore practical applications of material presented in seminars. In addition, a major portion of the last week will be used for polishing leadership skills with each person in the group being given the opportunity to lead. Video feedback will again be employed. Some of the major areas and practices to be explored during this program include:

A. Physiological maps and entries to experience

Beginning from the assumption that the human body is a metaphor which holds and reflects how we have been shaped by past experience and habits, we will explore the effects of these patterns and their possible transcendence. Sessions in bio-energetics, neo-Reichian work, shiatsu, and various styles of massage will be scheduled to provide tools and perspectives relating to physically rooted patterns of holding and diminishment.

B. Gestalt Practice

The emphasis in this phase of our work together will be in creating a stance to facilitation which is non-analytic, non-coercive, and non-judgmental. We'll focus on the use of the awareness continuum, the nature of the impasse, contact and boundaries, ways of visualization and meditation and the development of leadership skills which reflect clarity and flow from whatever emerges in process.

C. Psychosynthetic Techniques

Using the over-arching perspective created by Psychosynthesis we'll examine reference points and specific experiences which include discerning different levels of the unconscious, basic personality organization, choice and the development of will, resolving inner conflicts, reflective and receptive meditation, dis-identification and self-identification, the use of ideal models, the nature of purpose, developing desired qualities, aligning with the transpersonal, guided imagery, journal work and music.

D. The Psycho-dynamics of Group Structure

Drawing on techniques based primarily in encounter we'll look into the formation of the group, ascertaining its energy field, the stages of group evolution, inclusion, power and affection, grounding cathartic experience in the group context, as well as examining the differences and effects of counseling, teaching and encounter modalities.

The program is designed both for professionals and students and those interested in the fields of psychiatry, psychology, religion, education, and philosophy. A few partial scholarships are available for this program. For scholarship applications write Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. $1150 Deposit $400

Energy Awareness & the Crystalline State / George Leonard

In the crystalline state, there is no expectation nor any prejudgment. Concentration on the past and future gives way to primary focus on the present. Action taken while in the crystalline state is not considered action but rather appropriate action. When fully achieved, this state permits you to experience the harmony and connectedness of all existence. This energy awareness workshop will emphasize the crystalline state as described in George Leonard's latest book, The Silent Pulse: A Search for the Perfect Rhythm that Exists in Each of Us, and will also involve centering, balancing and stress reduction. $110

Body Energetics and Primal Imprints / Hector Prestera

This workshop will include body reading, color-auric energy fields, imprinted body emotions and emotional-energetic release methods.

Recommended reading: Selected Writings (Reich), The Body Reveals (Kurtz & Prestera, published by Bantam and Harper & Row). $110

The Lawyer—A New Perspective
A Weekend for Lawyers presented by the Humanistic Law Institute

"Like mounds in a sandy desert, intellectual knowledge is mounting up without provision for the expression of the heart."
—Meher Baba

As lawyers we were trained to use our heads and not our hearts—to make choices and decisions based upon "reason," "principles," and "issues" and not to trust feelings, intuition or compassion—often with less than satisfying results in our "professional" and/or "private" lives.

During this weekend we will explore and share with other lawyers, in the peaceful, reflective, nourishing, and evocative setting of Esalen, ways of using and integrating all aspects of ourselves—our bodies, our minds, our feelings, our "hearts" to see if we can make our work and our "private" lives more effective and more integrated, flowing, meaningful, and enjoyable.

The program will be conducted by a lawyer member of the HLI staff and another experienced group leader and will be largely experiential, using approaches and methods of gestalt awareness, psychosynthesis, massage, meditation, and bioenergetics. $110

Week of June 10-15

Five Days with Jack Rosenberg

My current focus is on enjoying life to the fullest and bringing the clearest expression of my self to each moment. Many people describe what I do as gestalt body work with a transpersonal bend.

During the workshop we will cover many aspects of my energetic approach to sexuality as well as working with the body energy field and the belief system which keeps us locked in obsolete behavior patterns. Where you are is where we will start. $270

The Process of Psychosynthesis / Harry Sloan

Rooted within each of us is a deep tending toward wholeness and an inherent urge to make more sense and meaning of our lives. However, much of what we experience as we grow up slows this purpose within us and we often become painfully distracted from the process of realizing our true and full selves in the world. The principles and practices of psychosynthesis enable a person to work with these difficulties in whatever dimension of experience they exist and to learn gradually how to cooperate with, and be released again to, the natural process of maturation and integration.

This workshop will focus on participants gaining an experiential and conceptual understanding of the major principles and practices of psychosynthesis. $270

Concentrated Radix Feeling Work
Clair Killen & Merri Goldenson

Under the sponsorship of the Radix Institute this workshop will provide an environment for deep feeling work. We will work as a group to experience the connection between our body armor, the ways we block our feelings and how we control our lives. As we become aware of how we control our feelings and our lives, we can consider letting go of control that stands in the way of greater experience of love, pleasure and trust. Each participant will receive four individual intensives. The enrollment will be limited to twelve participants who have experienced at least a previous five day Radix workshop. $300

Introduction to Gestalt Practice / Joan Fiore

After introducing the "language" of gestalt and various gestalt experiments in breath, body, and feeling awareness, this workshop concentrates on providing the opportunity for intensive individual gestalt work in a supportive group setting. Suitable for novices as well as veterans. $110

Inner Love / Simone Surpin

In each of us exists a place where we can merge in and with a certain kind of love: a love that is the source of our inner being; a love that is not dependent on something outside of itself for sustenance; a love that renews itself and clears our vision of ourselves and of others.

As purely and as simply as possible, we will attempt to explore and experience this state; to touch these experiences with our minds and share them outside ourselves.

We will meditate, chant, do gentle body work practices, and learn about energy flows. Each session will be a blend of both didactic and experiential work. Some time will also be taken for silent walks together in the country. $110

Grammar of Spontaneity / Ruthy Alon

In this experiential workshop you will participate in guided processes of organic motions from the feldenkrais method, Awareness Through Movement.

In a supportive space, free of rightness or effort, you will explore a variety of alternative movement options, meditate on their inner qualities and nurture your body intelligence to choose more gratifying ways of day to day functioning, like enjoying lightness and grace in your moving, tuning into your personal rhythm, coordinating your organism to avoid pain and allowing sex to flow effortlessly.

In the early mornings, a special out of doors experience will be extended to link the grammar of explorations with your spontaneity, through a ritual of 12 swinging natural motions inspired by the need to move and celebrate liveliness in the fresh Esalen air over-looking the ocean. $270

Advanced Massage / Esalen Massage Staff

The soothing release of everyday tensions is really only the beginning of the sensations and revelations possible through massage. The release of chronic energy blocks can produce dramatic results in our physical and emotional well-being; awareness and memories may be triggered which begin a process that goes far beyond the massage itself. We would like to demonstrate and practice together some of our own explorations in massage and manipulation of the energy bodies and to share our experiences of the sometimes surprising results of these techniques. $270

Gestalt Intensive / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop provides the time, the space, the license, the opportunity to move forward at your own pace along your own path—from dis-ease to ease, from fragmented to whole, from self-discounting to self-validating, from role-playing to authentic self-expression, from helpless victim of, to active participant in, your personal destiny—or from wherever you happen to be coming to wherever you're growing. You might explore your dreams, your tensions, your madness or your options; take room to breathe or to explode, soak in nurture or exorcise demons, finish past unfinished business or examine present concerns. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to experiment with the quality of interpersonal contact through group interactions. $270

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

"When sex comes from the physical center, it is a necessity. When it comes from the mental center, it is a fantasy. When sex comes from the heart center, it is a deep, total, and profound experience of our own divinity. Sex is meaningless without the heart."

The purpose of this workshop is to heal the separation between our divinity and our sexuality as it exists in our consciousness, attitudes, and actions. This weekend will include breathing, movement, music sound, and massage meditation. We will come together to dance, to sing, to worship, to cry—to celebrate our vulnerability and our strength, our heights and our depths. Gabrielle will support us in going within ourselves to rediscover the magnitude of our own heart energy, thus infusing our sexuality, and our entire life experience, with depth and purpose. $110

Education: Its Effects on Learning
Janet Lederman, Gregory Bateson, Joan Fiore & David Schiffman

In other words . . .
How do the rules of behavior
from past generations and different tribes,
fit with the more inclusive and flexible
life styles of today . . . spiritually, physically –
the abstract and the concrete.

What kinds of confusion are generated?
What kinds of creativity have already emerged in patterns and structures, both legal and extra-legal?

Exploring the conflicting areas and the absorption with form.

How do we communicate information, the sending and receiving, from one decade to the next, one tribe to the other, one system to the next?

. . . and who is WE?

Self-Reliance and Cooperation: The Ethics and Techniques of Networking / John Vasconcellos and the Staff of Self-Determination

Networking, in its most general sense, is bringing together persons who share values, needs, tasks, goals and/or kinship, through a lateral and mutually-supportive framework or activity. This workshop is devoted to exploring networking: what it is, how it is done, and its potential for transforming cultural assumptions and political systems.

Based upon the practical experience of four-year-old, California-based Self Determination: A Personal-Political Network, the workshop will include discussion of the ethics/values/assumptions of networking vis-a-vis present-day culture as well as experiential awareness of networking and cooperation, and lectures/exercises will explore the practicalities of community networking.

This workshop is especially recommended for persons seriously interested in applying the principles and techniques of networking to their own lives/communities. $130

Live Better Longer / Donald Lindsay, MD

This will be a workshop in holistic medicine emphasizing prevention, nutrition, health maintenance and experiential learning about body-psyche relationships. It is about joyous living and includes body work at the Esalen baths. The student will learn to use new advances in health care. There will be sessions on medical consumerism, on interacting with physicians. Enrollment is limited. Nurses and physicians taking this course will receive 10 hours of continuing education credits. $130

Weekend of July 6-8

Let Go / Let Be / Betty Fuller

This workshop will include physical and mental stress reduction exercises, guided imagery, simple meditations and body methods such as feldenkrais, Trager and massage. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual follow up will be presented. The workshop schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths. $130

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

Centering in Action / Bob Kriegel

The purpose of this workshop is to show that there is nothing mysterious, mystical, or devotional about centering—the process of tuning into that place of inner strength and wisdom from which we experience more of our possibilities and potential.

To experience centering we will play active games of all types, invent new ones, and practice exercises from yoga, aikido, t'ai chi, and sensory awareness.

We will use gestalt awareness, visualization, and psychosynthesis techniques to bring the insights gained in these activities to a more conscious level and to transfer them into our daily lives. $130

Week of July 1-6

Massage and Movement / Peggy Morrison

This workshop will provide the space for self exploration through massage and movement. Our focus will be on releasing tension and experiencing our aliveness and creativity. There will be time at the hot baths massaging each other, time in structured movement and time celebrating in music and dance. $300

For workshop description see June 1–3. $270

Gestalt Practice / Esalen Gestalt Staff

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment. $300

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be
David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics and journal work. $430

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feelings from thoughts—sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $430

On Letting Go / Judyth Weaver
I propose that we are all holding on more than we know. This workshop will use Reichian breathing and movement methods, sensing, meditation, dance, and an ancient form of balance and relaxation: tai chi chuan, to bring us to more understanding of what and how we hold on and how to let go and allow more fully our spontaneous feelings and energy which can lead to a more naturally balanced and enjoyable way of living. $300

Adventures in Self-Exploration
Stanislav Grof & Christina Grof
Focused self-exploration in this workshop will be based on the model of the unconscious that emerged from psychedelic research. It includes not only biographically determined areas but also the dynamics of the death-rebirth process and transpersonal experiences. We will use a combination of music and guided affective imagery, mandala drawing, yoga, massage and individual work when indicated. $300

Self and Beyond / John Zeigler
". . . the key is to open a way whence the imprisoned splendor can escape." —Browning
This will be an occasion to celebrate the restoration of the original you: loveable, capable, trouble-free and unscarred by destructive parental/societal beliefs and indoctrinations that are at the root of most emotional upsets.

The awakening of this serene and perfect inner self can give expression to a natural clarity, aliveness and creativity. We will use a synthesis of intensive body and gestalt work for deep emotional release, supportive group interaction, tai chi, movement, massage and other ancient and modern body/mind/spirit methods. Through it you will have an opportunity to experience conflicts for what they really are; opportunities that can create a spontaneous unconditional love of self, others, and an abundant universe. $300

The emphasis will be on using the methods of herbs, massage, chanting, movement, meditation, and balanced diet for physical cleansing and balancing. We will demonstrate the use of herbs as generators of health and creativity. We will learn how to make special teas, soups, baths, and fomentations using herbs which we will gather. In addition we will use clay and herbal oils to anoint ourselves, helping to free old blocks and tensions. As a rhythmic and melodic complement we will utilize the sounds and chants of nature from the African, East Indian and American Indian traditions with appropriate dance-like movements to give fuller expression to our being. We will take walks together to discover the wild herbs and trees which we can use as food. $300

FUTURE WORKSHOP ANNOUNCEMENTS

Workshops of more than one week require special planning for participants. Whenever possible we will announce such workshops well in advance. More detailed descriptions—and any changes—will appear in the catalog covering the period in which the workshop is scheduled.

Be Your Own Child—A Movement Journey
Nitza Broide Miller

Discover the child in you—its joy, sadness, fear, excitement, anger, curiosity, wondering, fun, sensuality, loneliness, playfulness.

Reconnect with the child in you so that it is nurtured, loved, cared for and allowed to grow.

In this workshop we'll learn to give the child in ourselves permission to be. Through dance, energy flow, touch, imagery, relaxation and dynamic breathing we shall tap on our hidden and forgotten desires and secret wants and allow them to be expressed. We shall nurture them in loving-caring movement adventure. Touch and movement rituals of self care will be learned and practiced. $130

Experience your own relating: how to better care for yourself in relationships with those you love. Using gestalt, fantasy, breathing and awareness of body stress, we will work with memories and dreams to re-experience past choices and to bring more energy into the present. We will work on contacting our inner self, our central vigor. $130

Energy: Physical, Emotional and Spiritual
Stanislav & Christina Grof

A four-week interdisciplinary program for professionals and students in the areas of psychiatry, psychology, general medicine, anthropology, physics, philosophy, and religion. This workshop will focus on various manifestations of energy and on techniques of channeling them for the purpose of self-exploration and spiritual growth. Special attention will be paid to the problems of interrelations between consciousness, energy and matter. The program will cover three thematic areas:

1. Ancient Spiritual Systems and Techniques of Dealing With Energy.
We will explore, theoretically and practically, Tantric art and ritual, the Tibetan vajrayana, kundalini yoga, Agni yoga, Basque mysticism, astrology and alchemy.

2. Consciousness Research and Modern Physics.
We will focus on revolutionary findings from experiential psychotherapy, psychedelic research, parapsychology, anthropology and modern physics. The controversies about the pioneering research of Wilhelm Reich will be reviewed by his prominent former co-worker, Bernard Grad. Special sessions will be dedicated to the striking convergence between mysticism, consciousness research, and modern physics.

3. Self-Exploration and Group Process
The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with personal experience. Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators of an ongoing process of intrapsychic and interpersonal exploration of the participants throughout the program. In this context, we will use gestalt practice, encounter, neo-Reichian approaches, dance, fantasy exercises with music, mandala drawing, psychosynthesis, and different forms of body work. $1200

We invite you to join us
in our organization . . .

FRIENDS OF ESALEN provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available to a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to the knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

REGISTRATION INFORMATION

For reservations and information, write or call:
Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.
Phone: (408) 667-2335, 10 to 3:30 every day;
10 to 8 Sunday & Friday.

Unless otherwise indicated, all programs listed in this brochure are residential programs in Big Sur. Send reservations for all programs to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute—By Reservation Only.

Fee Information: We require a reservation fee of $20 for weekend groups, $70 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs. Please mail all reservations to Esalen/Big Sur. Balance of payment is due on arrival. Esalen accepts Mastercharge, Bankamericard, and American Express. U S currency only, please.

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for a long term Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation (allow at least 3 weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—August 31 programs or for weekend programs.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has limited child care facilities. If you are interested in bringing a child while you are attending a workshop of five days or longer, contact the office well in advance for information on availability of child space.

We ask workshop participants not to have guests. Please do not bring pets.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5—5:30 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

☐ To obtain future issues of the Esalen Catalog & occasional mailings for one year, please send a check or money order for $2 to:

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying, or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Who's Responsible at Esalen?

We have long regarded Esalen Institute as an educational laboratory. Our evolving philosophical and operational positions reflect this regard. Underlying it all is a baseline ethic of "self-awareness and self-responsibility." However re-presented and operationalized in the past, by us or by others, this ethic continues to be the basis for our world view, and following from this, our educational approach. The self-awareness/self-responsibility ethic has grown and stabilized out of at least two generations of weighty dis-illusioning social and political events—all connected by a common reminder:

> Give away your personal faculties of discernment, of evaluation, of self-reference, and you lose your integrity (your wholeness). "Take responsibility for your every thought, your every feeling, your every action," said our beloved friend and teacher, Fritz Perls.

We view the implications of this position as being social as well as personal. They concern the ways we relate to ourselves and others.

In our position as educators, we invite people to take responsibility for their whole life situation while at Esalen. This includes taking responsibility for who they select as their teachers, their leaders, their gurus, their authority figures . . . and so on—and to be aware, whenever possible, what effect this has on them. We, of necessity, are setting up a situation for our seminarians to learn the practice of self-responsibility from the time they consider selecting a workshop, not just during the workshop. In effect, we are asking that this self-responsibility attitude be present in the initial contact with Esalen. Ideally, the same attitude will pervade after a workshop when our seminarians go back to the community and seek out others—physicians, teachers, counselors, mental health professionals, etc.

As we have become more thoughtful and self-critical about the overall direction of Esalen we have begun to concentrate on enhancing our basic offering—the Esalen environment and life style. Our primary emphasis is not on teaching particular truths or personal and interpersonal techniques for daily life; rather our primary concern is with a particular consciousness and developing an environment to support the evolution of that consciousness—the consciousness of self-awareness/self-responsibility.

In Memory of Ida Rolf

Some people are, in their consciousness, possessed by an image,
a form which they must express,
a point of view with a spirit which they must demonstrate.

Such people,
when they express this aspect,
when they bring it into being,
tend to be experienced as extraordinary.

In a few, their consciousnesses become "signposts" or "turning points" in the evolution of our collective consciousness.

The dominating central image in such individuals' consciousness becomes a fulcrum,
in relation to which major changes take place in the collective consciousness.

Such was the case with Einstein, with Columbus with Galileo, with others.

When an individual's expression in consciousness is concerned directly with people's well-being, then it becomes holy (whole-ly) work.

We believe all of this to be so in the case of Ida Rolf.
Her work was extra-ordinary, a turning point,
a whole-ly work.

It was concerned, fundamentally, with well-being in the consciousness of others.

From her viewpoint in consciousness, she saw evolve a practice or method, an instruction for reducing discomfort in the body and thus for reducing discomfort in consciousness for facilitating the building of ease in consciousness.

Her viewpoint and her work are a gift;
in her consciousness to her SELF and from her consciousness to US.

And of this work and its effects
she said, time and time again,
"Praise the Lord."

Food for Thought

On One Way to Look at Diseases in Consciousness

(Excerpted from the book Stormy Journey Towards The Self)

–by Julian Silverman

OVERVIEW

I am troubled by the possibility that there is real evil in the world that cannot be cured, forms of schizophrenia that cannot be resolved.

I do not want to believe that there are truly fatal dis-eases.
But why not?

Why should there not be forms of dis-ease that persist in spite of all earthly ministrations?

For some dis-eases are unconsciously welcomed and nourished by their hosts.

The sufferings of some may be almost gladly endured when they are for certain mysterious purposes most often only dimly understood by them or us.

And then the question occurs to me:
Is there really anything "fatal" in a fully human consciousness?

The word "fatal" has a limited connotation;
it applies only to the material world.

It has no terrible meaning in an individual who is aware of the "more-than-ness" of his or her consciousness, of the "no-thing-ness" which supports every one of us, of the invisible, infinite, nourishing-ness which surrounds each of us.

In individuals who grasp the extent of their human consciousness,
"fatal" is a "boogey-man" word, a scary word, a childish word.

The problem for me, then, is to be able to define the limitations of such thoughts about diseases of the material world, to get out of that limitation of consciousness.

I want to describe a view of human consciousness which makes clear that what we now regard as disease is more appropriately regarded as dis-ease, that it is a natural part of an on-going balancing process.

I want to make understandable to afflicted individuals that various forms of schizophrenic disease are in no way hopeless; rather, they are dis-eases which contain constructive possibilities.

I want to "clear" an area in consciousness for the balancing process to occur more effectively– the area where fear and terror breed more fear and terror– and lead to psychic paralysis.

I want to provide a theory
a mental construct, a "story"
which is acceptable to so-called patients: constructive, not destructive which is usable by individuals with so-called mental disease, which explains and consoles rather than refutes and negates their extra-ordinary "balancing act".

Food for Thought

I want to provide the barest outlines of a "map" for individuals who leave their familiar worldly "places," who break out of their "containers," and journey into an unfamiliar realm.

I want to make available information about the possibilities for a "re-turn" journey to a new center of consciousness,
a place of Self,
a place of equipoise balance,
a place of peace.

I want to make available information about these things to health care professionals who mis-guidedly take responsibility for the re-balancing of afflicted persons.

I want to contribute to the dawning of a broader appreciation of the scope of human consciousness—of the "more-than-ness" of being human.

These are my aims.

This book concerns
human beings who disconnect from their ordinary waking awareness, and engage in an awesome struggle.

Their struggle is a struggle-in-consciousness.

It is a struggle without an articulated purpose.

Ask them during their struggle and you will find out.

They do not know how to tell you what they are struggling about.

They dis-connect from their personally limiting life situation, with extra-ordinary energy,
and then they are without moorings.

They become ex-plorers searching for another stable reference point in consciousness.

Ordinary waking reality is no longer an acceptable reference point.

Such individuals often wind up being "treated" by well intentioned mental health professionals.

Treatment objective: to re-connect the dis-connected with the reference base of ordinary waking consciousness.

For to dis-connect from ordinary waking consciousness means usually to have a "mental disease".

In psychiatric terms, "full recovery" involves more than this;
"Full recovery" involves dis-covery of a connection to another stable reference base,
the Self,
a personal center of consciousness.

Thesis
Unless dis-covery of the point of self-reference occurs, recovery is limited.
Only with dis-covery of the Self can recovery occur and be sustained.

In the main, modern clinical science interferes with rather than facilitates full recovery.

Dis-covery of the Self has a physical basis as well as a mental basis; is a neurological – biochemical pattern of events as well as an emotional experience; is a spiritual movement in consciousness as well as a mental/physical one;
is essential for balancing one's life.

PROGRAMS AT WESTERBEKE RANCH

This series of programs sponsored by Esalen will be held at the Westerbeke Ranch in Sonoma County, which is about an hour's drive north of San Francisco. These residential workshops will be held in an intimate setting which includes rustic cabins, home cooked meals, a sauna and Japanese tub, a large swimming pool, and beautiful scenery. Weekend workshops begin on Friday evening and end Sunday at noon. Five day workshops begin on Sunday evening and end Friday at noon. A reservation fee of $70 is required for five day programs, and $20 for weekend programs. Reservation fees are not refundable, but with five days notice they can be transferred to other Esalen seminars. Full payment for all Westerbeke workshops is due five days in advance of the beginning of the program. Send all reservations and payments to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

July 20–22

Awakening the Magician Within / Emmett Miller

Whether or not we have as yet learned it, there is a magician within each of us. His magic wand is belief. If we believe we are sick, we are sick; if we believe we are afraid, we are afraid; if we believe we are stuck, we are stuck. But all coins, even magic ones, have two sides. If we believe we are growing stronger every day, we are; if we believe we are free, we discover freedom all around us; if we believe in our creativity, our problems can joyfully solve themselves. In this seminar we will investigate and discover what truth there is in each of these statements for us, individually. Our explorations will be experiential, using methods of deep relaxation, visualization, movement and selective awareness. As we learn to tap the wellsprings of our belief systems we will begin to write our own movie—and to deprogram negative future expectations. $130

July 20–22

Extending Human Capacity
Jim Hickman

In this workshop we will explore a variety of mental and physical conditioning techniques to open dormant capacities of body, mind, spirit. These techniques have been synthesized from numerous body/mind development systems as part of an extensive study of supernormal bodily changes that occur in yoga, sport, psychosis, hypnosis and other kinds of activity. There will be sessions of meditation and running, energy awareness exercises and experiments with "inner seeing" and "inner hearing". Michael Murphy will give a guest lecture presenting his current research into extraordinary human functioning. $130

Gestalt Practice
Richard & Christine Price & The Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c. 2500

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure or accomplishment.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach). $300

July 22–27

Self Re-parenting / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to re-turn to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments will progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and reinfanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-Reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $300

August 5–10

A Psychic Training Program / Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises, Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only to learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $300

August 10–12

Tuning In / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

Many of us are operating as tape recorders. We switch on in the morning at "high" or "low" speed and play our tapes in response to the buttons being pushed by people or events. We are vaguely aware that life seems repetitive, or dull, that time is often something to be gotten through instead of savored, but this awareness is lost in the "noise" and business of day to day living.

This weekend will be devoted to bringing our attention to what we are doing—how we are really acting and feeling. Once we are aware of our feelings, we can go off automatic and begin to enjoy our interactions with one another. We will be using gestalt process, encounter, sensory awareness, and other techniques to tune in to ourselves and each other. $130

The Awakening of Creativity / Michell Cassou

This workshop is designed to develop an experiential understanding of the nature of intuitive action using the tool of creative painting. Emphasis will be put upon making the discrimination between painting from thought or preconception and painting directly from feeling. As the natural movement of the creative process unfolds, the painting experience becomes a powerful tool for exploring deeply into oneself. A sense of interest and trust in spontaneous action is developed that overflows into other aspects of life and relationships.

On the first evening of the workshop there will be a showing of "Eternal Return," an audio-visual presentation of Michell's work depicting the inner process of death and rebirth. $130

August 12–17

The Feeling Process / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feelings from thoughts —sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $300

August 12–17

Symbols of Transformation
Ralph Metzner & Angie Arrien

This seminar is an intensive experiential study of symbols as tools of personal growth. Symbols can expand one's perception of self and others, increase insight and stimulate new areas of self-expression and creativity. We will consider a variety of symbols: psychologically, as archetypes of individuation, and cross-culturally, as universal constants. The symbols to be studied and experienced include: sun and moon, trees, flowers, circles/wheels/mandalas, totem animals, light and fire, the elements, sacred mountains, the body and its parts, the journey/path, and others. Some of the sources of symbolism that we will draw on are astrology, alchemy, the tarot, mythology and folklore of all cultures. Special attention will be given to the uses and significance of symbols in dreams, art and the helping professions. Special symbolic creative projects will be part of the seminar. $300

Programs at Westerbeke Ranch

September 21–23
Couples Workshop for Health Professionals
Hughes Andrus, MD & Mary O'Hara-Devereaux, FNP

This weekend is for couples, one or both of whom are in the health professions. Themes include exploring the stress of working in health care and its impact on our personal lives and intimate relationships. A second theme is the importance of self-reference and self-care as essential to effective career and intimacy experiences. The program is primarily experiential, focusing on various processes to discover self and clarify and enhance relationships. $120 per person

September 21–23
Vision Improvement–Our Willingness to See
Laura DeNuccio

This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and ourselves to see. Utilizing deep, emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the Bates system, nutrition and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience and expand—enabling us to look newly at ourselves and our world in which we live. Limited to ten participants. $120

September 23–28
The Experience of Integration / Jack Downing

As we look at our thoughts and feelings about what is going on in our lives, we will use gestalt and body awareness tools to gain experience in the process of integrating ourselves and our relations with others. $280

October 19–21
Hypnosis & Parapsychology / Lee Pulos

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lectures explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $120

Programs at Burklyn in Vermont

An Educational, Recreational Conference Center

This series of programs is co-sponsored by Esalen and will be held during the Fall foliage in September and October at Burklyn in Vermont. Burklyn is considered to be one of New England's regional treasures. It is the legacy left to the world by Elmer Darling, a hotel executive who, in 1908, completed construction of his 35 room mansion, Burklyn Hall. This magnificent structure crowns a hill which commands a breathtaking 360° view. The 750 acre site includes: the mansion, a New England Inn, a restaurant, conference facilities and stables. There are also hot tubs, sauna, swimming and ski touring. Weekend workshops begin on Friday evening and end Sunday at noon. Five day workshops begin on Sunday evening and end Friday after lunch. A reservation fee of $70 is required for five day programs, and $20 for weekend programs. Reservation fees are not refundable, but with five days notice they can be transferred to other Esalen seminars. Full payment for all Burklyn workshops is due five days in advance of the beginning of the program. Send all reservations and payments to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

September 23–28

Supernormal Transformations of the Body
Michael Murphy & Jim Hickman

In this workshop, Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman will present the results of their research on supernormal bodily changes that occur in yoga, sport, psychosis, hypnosis and other kinds of activity. Questions for discussion are: the relationship of psychokinesis and intentionality to deliberate bodily change; ways in which these changes occur; what a transformed body might look like and how it might function; the ethics of extraordinary powers; the implications of such research for the culture at large; the relationship between internally mediated bodily change, genetic engineering and mind-machine entities (cyborgs).

There will also be sessions of meditation and running, energy awareness exercises, experiments with "inner seeing" and "inner hearing," and yoga exercises that are related to physical transformation. Slide shows illustrating various aspects of these topics will be presented at some of the sessions. $385

September 30–October 5

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

"When sex comes from the physical center, it is a necessity. When it comes from the mental center, it is a fantasy. When sex comes from the heart center, it is a deep, total, and profound experience of our own divinity. Sex is meaningless without the heart."

The purpose of this workshop is to heal the separation between our divinity and our sexuality as it exists in our consciousness, attitudes, and actions. This workshop will include breathing, movement, music, sound and massage meditation. We will come together to dance, to sing, to worship, to cry—to celebrate our vulnerability and our strength, our heights and our depths. Gabrielle will support us in going within ourselves to rediscover the magnitude of our own heart energy, thus infusing our sexuality, and our entire life experience, with depth and purpose. $385

Money and You / Marshall Thurber

The intent of this workshop is to explore your relationship with money. Marshall will share some of the techniques and experiences that have directly contributed to his personal and financial success; these include

- A system for self management
- Creating a context in business
- Lateral thinking
- Creative problem solving
- Certainty in decision making

You will have an opportunity to experience the effectiveness of synergy in a group process and look at your beliefs and attitudes about money. $400

October 12–14

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be
David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics and journal work. $225

Who are we really?

On a "bad day" we approach life feeling anxious, incompetent, unloved, unloving—basically negative and small. At other times we're like a different person—calm, squared away, loving, open. And then there are those extraordinary moments of opening to larger, finer dimensions where we experience the oneness, the totality of our philosophies.

These are shifts of identity, and the shifting process is a natural one. But most of us stumble from identity to identity, getting "stuck" in smaller states and only rarely touching finer ones.

In this workshop we'll experience the shifting process and learn to apply it to our jobs, our relationships, the ordinary and extraordinary times in our lives. We'll use meditation, imagery, centering, and body movement. $130

Self-Reliance and Cooperation: The Ethics and Techniques of Networking / John Vasconcellos and the Staff of Self-Determination

Networking, in its most general sense, is bringing together persons who share values, needs, tasks, goals and/or kinship, through a lateral and mutually-supportive framework or activity. This workshop is devoted to exploring networking: what it is, how it is done, and its potential for transforming cultural assumptions and political systems.

Based upon the practical experience of four-year-old, California-based Self Determination: A Personal-Political Network, the workshop will include discussion of the ethics/values/assumptions of networking vis-a-vis present-day culture as well as experiential awareness of networking and cooperation, and lectures/exercises will explore the practicalities of community networking.

This workshop is especially recommended for persons seriously interested in applying the principles and techniques of networking to their own lives/communities. $130

Live Better Longer / Donald Lindsay, MD

This will be a workshop in holistic medicine emphasizing prevention, nutrition, health maintenance and experiential learning about body-psyche relationships. It is about joyous living and includes body work at the Esalen baths. The student will learn to use new advances in health care. There will be sessions on medical consumerism, on interacting with physicians. Enrollment is limited. Nurses and physicians taking this course will receive 10 hours of continuing education credits. $130

Week of July 1-6

Massage and Movement / Peggy Morrison

This workshop will provide the space for self exploration through massage and movement. Our focus will be on releasing tension and experiencing our aliveness and creativity. There will be time at the hot baths massaging each other, time in structured movement and time celebrating in music and dance. $300

Experiencing Esalen for Health Care Professionals Coordinated by Jay Kaplan, MD

This workshop is designed for health care professionals who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on experiencing a variety of approaches to self awareness and self care. Some of the following experiences will be available: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, rolfing, feldenkrais, yoga, polarity massage and shiatsu. Nurses and physicians will earn continuing education units. $270

Gestalt Practice / Esalen Gestalt Staff

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment. $300

Education: Its Effects on Learning
Janet Lederman, Gregory Bateson, Joan Fiore & David Schiffman

In other words . . .

How do the rules of behavior
from past generations and different tribes,
fit with the more inclusive and flexible
life styles of today . . . spiritually, physically —
the abstract and the concrete

What kinds of confusion are generated?
What kinds of creativity have already emerged in patterns and structures, both legal and extra-legal?

Exploring the conflicting areas and the absorption with form.

How do we communicate information, the sending and receiving, from one decade to the next, one tribe to the other, one system to the next?

. . . and who is WE?

Let Go / Let Be / Betty Fuller

This workshop will include physical and mental stress reduction exercises, guided imagery, simple meditations and body methods, such as feldenkrais, Trager and massage. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual follow up will be presented. The workshop schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths. $130

Centering in Action / Bob Kriegel

The purpose of this workshop is to show that there is nothing mysterious, mystical, or devotional about centering—the process of tuning into that place of inner strength and wisdom from which we experience more of our possibilities and potential.

To experience centering we will play active games of all types, invent new ones, and practice exercises from yoga, aikido, t'ai chi, and sensory awareness.

We will use gestalt awareness, visualization, and psychosynthesis techniques to bring the insights gained in these activities to a more conscious level and to transfer them into our daily lives. $130

Week of July 8-13

Running Home: Recent Developments in the Mind/Body Approach to Running / Mike Spino

In this workshop we will draw on recent developments in sport physiology, preventive medicine, the mental training of athletes in East Germany and the Soviet Union, Eastern philosophy, yoga, and the martial arts as well as research on bodily transformations at the Esalen Sport Center. We will work with gaits and tempos for running, muscle/skeletal exercises, flexibility exercises, training routines, visualization exercises and meditation techniques. $300

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be
David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support, we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics and journal work. $430

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feelings of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact, and nurturing, sensitive giving and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital exploration in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $300

The Cetacean-Human Cyclone / John & Toni Lilly

Spend five days with John and Toni Lilly discussing dolphin research and self programming.

Suggested reading: Man & Dolphin (1961); Mind of the Dolphin (1967); Human Biocomputer (1967); Center of the Cyclone (1972); Simulations of God (1974); Dyadic Cyclone (1976); The Deep Self (1977); Lilly on Dolphins (1975); The Scientist (1978); Origins of Interspecies Communication (1978). $320

The Feeling Process / Janet Sachson Zuckerman

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feelings from thoughts—sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $430

EXPERIENCING ESALEN

Experiencing Esalen Staff
Coordinators: Janet Zuckerman & Betty Fuller

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificance of the Big Sur coast.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls) and Anger and the Rocking Chair (Lederman).

Weekend of July 20-22

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

All the world's a stage and the current production can be a soap opera, musical comedy, tragedy, or three-ring circus. Since we choose our parts, finding new ways to express ourselves can open up a variety of options on how to play our lives. Using gestalt, music, drawing, and video tape in a non-judgmental environment, we will explore getting our "act" together. No special talent or previous group experience is necessary. $130

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

This workshop will include massage and dancing, exploring the rituals of Black disco dancing in contemporary American society. High-low energy, sensual and sexual, rhythm and syncopation, hand clapping, foot stomping, using African drums, we will use our voices and recorded popular Black music. $130

Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

The members of the massage staff, each with their own unique style, will give instruction and help the group to practice basic techniques of massage upon one another: sensory awareness, deep muscular massage, joint articulation, polarity. As we learn to feel with our hands how the body and the life-force within it works, we learn to release tensions in others and to be more fully aware of ourselves.

The group meets daily in the mineral baths. $130

Trager Psychophysical Integration

Trager Psychophysical Integration or simply "Trager Work" is an experiential learning method combining gentle body work, mental imagery and meditation. This holistic movement re-education approach is the innovation of Milton Trager, MD, a physician living in Hawaii. Dr. Trager has been developing his approach for over 50 years and has been training practitioners and instructors since introducing his work at Esalen Institute in 1975.

The purpose of Trager work is to influence deep-seated patterns in spiritbodymind which inhibit, block and/or distort free-flowing movement and full self-expression. Dr. Trager's work provides a context in which the client-student may learn: 1) to recognize and let go of unconscious holding patterns—physical, mental, emotional—and to reduce stress, friction and chronic tension; 2) to increase resiliency, flexibility and mobility by dissolving old, limiting patterns of movement and perceptions of self; 3) to support and expand capacities for vibrant, radiant and appropriate self-expression and 4) to enhance conscious awareness of and holistic integration of body, mind, spirit.

Trager work holds that the attributes of body and mind are holistically interrelated in the whole electro-magnetic force field that is living matter. Thus mental and emotional patterns are intimately related to movement and expression patterns in the physical body. Old, limiting mental images of the self and one's capacities maintain and reinforce tension patterns and rigidities in the body which result in restriction, pain and loss—or impairment—of function. These physical manifestations in turn reinforce the self-limiting mental images in a vicious feedback loop.

These restrictive patterns are the result of out-dated or faulty learnings from past experiences. The process of restriction may be reversed by re-education in an atmosphere of support and trust. This type of learning on the deepest levels of consciousness is exactly the function of Trager work.

Trager work itself consists of a systematic set of gentle shaking, stretching, and rhythmic rocking movements that suggest ever deeper states of letting go, releasing and lengthening. No forceful pressure is ever involved and no oils or lotions are used. The practitioner generally works with the whole body in each Trager learning session, consciously directing each movement and touch to invite the recipient to be aware of and to "taste" new or forgotten possibilities for openness, lightness and liveliness. The atmosphere is light and meditative which allows a close connection on the energetic level between giver and receiver. In this atmosphere, it is the receiver who sets the pace for each learning session by choosing how much he or she will experience and release at the moment.

Mentastics is a dance "exercise" form abstracted from his table work that Dr. Trager created for his trainees and clients to maintain and enhance their new lightness, grace, organization and balance. A profoundly simple approach to consciousness in movement, Mentastics consists of playful, bouncy, gentle motions which may be accomplished successfully by anyone of any age or ability. Mentastics resembles the new warm-up exercises recently adopted by athletic coaches and trainers and may be learned in conjunction with the table work or separately.

The Trager Association and Institute was formed to support the development, teaching and research of Dr. Trager's work. Membership is open to interested persons as well as trainees and practitioners, and includes a quarterly newsletter. For information about trainings, or to arrange demonstrations and trainings in your area, write to Betty Fuller, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

Trager Psychophysical Integration and Mentastics Basic Training / Betty Fuller

In each professional training workshop, participants are instructed in Trager table work, receiving directly from the instructors and giving and receiving from each other under supervision. In addition, participants learn to practice and teach Mentastics, learn basic communication skills, clearing exercises, simple meditations and have time in group to share and process their experience. These trainings are open to professionals in education, body work, holistic health care, counseling, psychology, medicine, chiropractic, sports, performing arts and other disciplines which see movement as a primary means of learning. Applications must specify professional background. $570

Week of July 22-27

On Letting Go / Judyth Weaver

I propose that we are all holding on more than we know. This workshop will use Reichian breathing and movement methods, sensing, meditation, dance, and an ancient form of balance and relaxation, tai chi chuan, to bring us to more understanding of what and how we hold on and how to let go and allow more fully our spontaneous feelings and energy which can lead to a more naturally balanced and enjoyable way of living. $300

Adventures in Self-Exploration
Stanislav Grof & Christina Grof

Focused self-exploration in this workshop will be based on the model of the unconscious that emerged from psychedelic research. It includes not only biographically determined areas but also the dynamics of the death-rebirth process and transpersonal experiences. We will use a combination of music and guided affective imagery, mandala drawing, yoga, massage and individual work when indicated. $300

Self and Beyond / John Zeigler

". . .the key is to open a way whence the imprisoned splendor can escape." —Browning

This will be an occasion to celebrate the restoration of the original you: loveable, capable, trouble-free and unscarred by destructive parental/societal beliefs and indoctrinations that are at the root of most emotional upsets.

The awakening of this serene and perfect inner self can give expression to a natural clarity, aliveness and creativity. We will use a synthesis of intensive body and gestalt work for deep emotional release, supportive group interaction, tai chi, movement, massage and other ancient and modern body/mind/spirit methods. Through it you will have an opportunity to experience conflicts for what they really are; opportunities that can create a spontaneous unconditional love of self, others, and an abundant universe. $300

The emphasis will be on using the methods of herbs, massage, chanting, movement, meditation, and balanced diet for physical cleansing and balancing. We will demonstrate the use of herbs as generators of health and creativity. We will learn how to make special teas, soups, baths, and fomentations using herbs which we will gather. In addition we will use clay and herbal oils to anoint ourselves, helping to free old blocks and tensions. As a rhythmic and melodic complement we will utilize the sounds and chants of nature from the African, East Indian and American Indian traditions with appropriate dance-like movements to give fuller expression to our being. We will take walks together to discover the wild herbs and trees which we can use as food. $300

Weekend of July 27-29

Be Your Own Child—A Movement Journey
Nitza Broide Miller

Discover the child in you—its joy, sadness, fear, excitement, anger, curiosity, wondering, fun, sensuality, loneliness, playfulness.

Reconnect with the child in you so that it is nurtured, loved, cared for and allowed to grow.

In this workshop we'll learn to give the child in ourselves permission to be. Through dance, energy flow, touch, imagery, relaxation and dynamic breathing we shall tap into our hidden and forgotten desires and secret wants and allow them to be expressed. We shall nurture them in loving-caring movement adventure. Touch and movement rituals of self care will be learned and practiced. $130

Experience your own relating: how to better care for yourself in relationships with those you love. Using gestalt, fantasy, breathing and awareness of body stress, we will work with memories and dreams to re-experience past choices and to bring more energy into the present. We will work on contacting our inner self, our central vigor. $130

THE ESALEN WORK-STUDY PROGRAM

In the process of becoming educated, we are taught that it is more important to be involved with the outside world than with our Selves. We are taught to become Ego-involved—involved with manipulating things and people. We are taught to experience our selves primarily in relation to others; we lose touch with our essence.

From this perspective, we offer an opportunity to return to our Selves within the working context of the Esalen community. Our faculty for this program is our environment—staff—community.

Learning/dis-covering the use of your own energy in work . . .
For your SELF.
Living together (close to others) operatively and co-operatively in a unique, high intensity environment.
Contact/communication with the people of Esalen via group work and in day-to-day Esalen happenings.
An opportunity for:
SELF-regulation
SELF-examination
SELF-contemplation
and if you choose
SELF-reevaluation
Facilitated by removal from your ordinary living context.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week at such jobs as gardening, maintenance, office, kitchen duties, etc. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs and work assignments are made according to these requirements. (Flexibility is one of the watchwords of life at Esalen). The Work-Study program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program (emotionally and physically) and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share—contact—play/alone-together.

Accommodations are shared. The program lasts 28 days; four weeks and four weekends at a basic cost of $350. Depending on your work schedule, weekend workshops may be available for an additional fee. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates. Arrangements are made through the office.

It is possible to be in the work-study program up to three months, by invitation, after the first month.

Available dates: June 17—July 15; July 15—August 12; August 12—September 9; September 9—October 7; October 7—November 4; November 4—December 2; December 2—December 30.

If interested, please apply as early as possible to Work Study Program, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. Only a limited number of applicants are accepted. Scholarships are not available for the Work-Study program.

Advanced Massage / Esalen Massage Staff

The soothing release of everyday tensions is really only the beginning of the sensations and revelations possible through massage. The release of chronic energy blocks can produce dramatic results in our physical and emotional well-being; awareness and memories may be triggered which begin a process that goes far beyond the massage itself. We would like to demonstrate and practice together some of our own explorations in massage and manipulation of the energy bodies and to share our experiences of the sometimes surprising results of these techniques. $300

Energy Systems and Gestalt Process / Alan Schwartz

Read the August 5–10 description. This will be a weekend to explore and understand our individual energy systems and their relation to how we both make contact and inhibit contact. One focus will be on integration via energy release techniques. Another will be on the simple task of being present, physiologically and emotionally, being aware that contact refers to our consistent awareness process and the autonomous expression of who we are. $130

Shiatsu Massage—The Full Treatment /Patricia Caldwell

Shiatsu is the oriental art in which the thumbs and hands are used to press certain points over the entire body. A working knowledge of a full shiatsu treatment for personal or professional use will be given. Emphasis will be on seeing and treating people as wholes, centering techniques, and shiatsu as a self-awareness practice and spiritual discipline. Charts will be provided. $300

Gestalt, Bioenergy & Human Contact / Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $300

Weekend of August 10-12

Heal Thy Self: A Workshop for Health Professionals
Hughes Andrus, MD & Mary O'Hara-Devereaux, FNP

This workshop focuses on our behavior as health care practitioners and how this behavior affects our own health as well as the health of our patients. It emphasizes:

Self-responsibility for each practitioners health;
Techniques for enhancing the sensitivity of practitioners in ways which make them more "tuned–in" to each patient-consumer;
Caring and being careful–applying sound judgment and knowledge in relation to patients and simultaneously not taking health-care responsibility away from patients.

We will use methods of self-discovery derived from psychosynthesis, gestalt, meditation and other systems, in addition to lecture and discussion on the several themes surrounding self care. Each participant will have an opportunity to make an assessment of their own health status and consider changes for themselves and changes in their clinical practice styles.

Nurses and physicians will receive 10 hours of continuing education credits. $130

Wilderness Programs

August 11–18
Encountering in the High Sierra
Maurica Anderson & Victor Daniels

During this seven-day workshop we will hike into a campsite by a clear mountain lake off the main trails in the High Sierra. Mules will carry in all of the food, camping equipment, and personal gear. We will camp by the lake for six days, eating outrageously good food (fresh or frozen rather than freeze-dried) and working with body awareness, meditation, yoga, psychodrama, gestalt, and encounter, laughing a lot and getting to know the high country, one another, and ourselves.

Mountaineering experience is not necessary, but applicants should be capable of moderate hiking. A detailed information sheet will be supplied upon request. Participants will meet in the Sierra on August 11. $265

August 18–27
Rites of Passage: A Mountain/River Adventure
Dick Galland & Annie Callaway

This workshop is grounded in the notion that a person's responses to the challenges of the mountain and river reflect their responses to the challenges of daily life. From the very real and immediate lessons of the wilderness, we can come to see ourselves more clearly and thus act with a greater sense of purpose.

As in rock climbing, when we move from balance, through imbalance, into balance again, this program will be an opportunity to pause and take stock, to reflect on where we have been and where we wish to go. It will be a time for relaxation, for stretching limits, for extending ourselves, for seeking a new and revitalized sense of who we are.

For seven days we will explore the remote and spectacular Marble Mountains wilderness in northern California. Carrying everything we need in our packs, we will hike through broad green forests, lush meadows, and camp by crystal mountain lakes. From a base camp in a small alpine basin, we will experience beginning rock climbing and rappelling, ascend a nearby peak, relax in a sweat house, and each spend 24 hours completely alone in reflection and contemplation. We will learn a variety of mountain skills including camp craft, map and compass travel, wilderness medicine, and mountain ecology.

At the end of these seven days we will move to the nearby Klamath River and embark on two days of whitewater rafting. Guiding our twelve foot rubber rafts with paddles, we will each have a chance to captain our boat through the rapids and delight in the exhilaration and timeless grandeur of the river experience.

While this workshop is an adventure in doing, we will use techniques from psychosynthesis, yoga, and meditation, as well as journal writing to help us ground our experiences so we may incorporate them into our daily lives.

No previous experience is required. You should be in reasonably good physical condition. Complete information on clothing, equipment, and travel will be sent to you upon registration. $325

An Integrative Approach to Self-Actualization
Ilana Rubenfeld

The sea always has waves . . . waves are the sea . . . sea and waves are one. To speak of waves apart from the sea is a delusion—so mind and body are one!

The focus in this workshop will be on experiencing one's own body and emotions as a total organism. Emotions and memories are often stored in our bodies, resulting in tension and imbalance. A unique blend of gestalt, Alexander technique and feldenkrais exercises will be used as a gateway to contacting, expressing, and working through deep feelings. Massage staff will be on hand to assist the workshop.

We have the choice to contact ourselves and each other with joy, sadness, compassion, humor, ideas, and with the body —the whole person. $430

Exploring Your Creative Process / Nancy Lunney

Through gestalt, imagery, music, writing, drawing, and videotape, we will investigate aspects of the creative experience, from blocking and stagefright to euphoria. Focus will be on self awareness and on developing the confidence and freedom necessary for the creative journey.

Individual projects can be developed during the workshop based on each person's major interest. This workshop is suitable for non-professionals as well as professionals in the creative performing arts. $130

Living Tao Now—Synthesis and Applications of Ancient Wisdom in Modern Living
Al Chung-liang Huang with Jay Goldfarb

A new China opens her mysterious gate to embrace the West. New possibilities of giving and receiving in global friendship and genuine understanding are available. Al Huang, who grew up in mainland China, will share his insights and visions within his own personal East/West integration with t'ai chi, scholarship classics and the living arts of brush calligraphy, music and dance.

The Ecstasy of Surrender—Tyranny or Liberation
David Schiffman & Richard Price

Every teaching aimed toward actualizing human potential has a dimension of surrender. Surrender yourself to the moment, the guru, the energy, your feelings, and you will be liberated from the constraints of negative conditioning, karma, character armor, etc. The promise is always freedom, the effect can be its opposite. In this seminar we will look into the experience of surrender from an experiential as well as ethical perspective. We will use methods drawn from gestalt, psychosynthesis, bioenergetics, and meditative practices.

Our aim will be to distinguish the teaching from the teacher. The need to liberate from the need to control.

August 19—26

Self Re-Parenting / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to re-turn to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments will progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and re-infanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-Reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $430

Opening the Feelings

RADIX NEO-REICHIAN WORKSHOPS

(formerly Interscience Workshops)

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this series of workshops which employ neo-Reichian techniques of emotional release. The Radix Intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, is practiced by Charles and Erica Kelley and their staff at the Radix Institute. The intensive, like other neo-Reichian techniques used in these workshops, grew from the discovery by Charles Kelley's teacher, Wilhelm Reich, of the way in which feeling is rooted in the flow of energy in the body, and is blocked by chronic muscular contractions which Reich called the muscular armor. Freeing the armor enables the student to open feeling that is buried and to soften and free feeling that is too strong and has been held in for fear of explosion. In these workshops armor is softened by simultaneous work on the character and body, using techniques not only from Reich, but also from bioenergetics, sensory awareness, and other body-oriented approaches. The participant/teacher ratio is kept small, never more than 10/1. Each weekend participant who wishes will receive an Intensive, while 5-day workshop participants receive two. By meeting sometimes in small groups and sometimes together in large groups, Radix combines the intimacy and individual attention of the small group with the energy and dynamism of the large. Grief or pain, fear, and rage that have been held in since childhood emerge in these workshops. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he/she discovers a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience changes profoundly as tender and sexual feelings for the mate intensify and merge.

Weekend of August 24-26

The Many Faces of the Self / Bette Dingman

Within each of us are many other "selves" who demand expression. By not recognizing them we dis-own those qualities that we dis-like about our "self". Using psychosynthesis methods, fantasy imagery, soft body work and gestalt, we will integrate towards the "whole" personality creating vital avenues of expression. $130

Accepting the Many Sounds of Our Miraculous Dancing Body / Nitza Broide Miller

In this adventure of exploration of the natural space and beauty surrounding us as well as the richness of the miracle inside us, we shall tune in and listen to the myriad of sounds, rhythms, voices, and flowing movements expressed in our bodies which make us the miraculous and unique human beings we are.

Through effortless movement and the excitement and magic of dance, we'll experience the sensual flow of our energy with which we connect with ourselves and with others.

We'll use dance, music, sounds, art, dynamic relaxation, imagery and visualization to rediscover the many sounds of our dancing body. $130

Thinking Body / Moving Mind / Understanding Heart Betty Fuller

Movement is a primary means to learning: learning about one's self, one's relationship to others, one's place in the universe. Happy side effects of such learning can include an enriched and enhanced self image and spontaneous and appropriate self expression along with greatly reduced stress, friction, tension, and effort. The workshop includes Trager and feldenkrais body-mind approaches, guided imagery, simple meditations and massage at the baths. Feelings, encounters, understanding, and realizations generated in the workshop may be shared and processed in the group. $130

Tai Chi Chih—A Gift of Life / Catherine Elber

First presented to the public in 1974, tai chi chih is based on ancient movements that were a closely guarded secret of the Chinese emporers and their clansmen for over a thousand years.

Easier than tai chi chuan, these 19 gentle movements are becoming one of the simplest and most effective methods available for realizing within one's self how truly beautiful the gift of life really is.

By adding the principles of these motions to your life, you can experience a continual unfoldment of your potential while providing an enrichment to your life on every level. The effects of these movements enable you to experience the beauty and honor of personal transformation as your body, mind and soul reap the benefits of harmony and balance—physical health and grace, mental peace and clarity, spiritual infinity. $300

Body Politic / From Body Movement to Political Movement Betty Fuller & Milton Friedman

Esalen offers a new concept to those who sense that the breakdown of society can mean breakthrough—nationally and individually. As we face economic and political crises, a new vision of humanity can evolve. For the first time, a former White House official joins with a leading humanist counselor to present an experiential approach to national evolution through inner awareness. Using body movement, gestalt, dreams and other approaches to create a transpersonal community, the workshop will explore emerging lifestyles, values, and alternatives as we make new choices about how to be with ourselves, others, our community, nation, and universe. We will explore world transformation beginning with personal choices and changes. The workshop will use individual, dyadic, and group processes to offer a higher vision of human unity and tools you can utilize to make a difference. $300

August 26–September 2

Cycles / Gabrielle Roth

This is a seven day Moving Center ritual designed to inspire and channel the religious, sexual and creative aspects of life energy into unity and expression. Through movement, sound, music and writing meditations, we will explore and present our unique experiences of life's waves, rhythms and cycles. Life is theater and we will dance both as we stretch to our full beauty and power in a safe, comfortable and challenging atmosphere. $430

Weekend of August 31-September 2

Running Home: Recent Developments in the Mind/Body Approach to Running / Mike Spino

In this workshop styles of motion, gaits and tempos practiced by world class runners will be taught. Breathing patterns and relaxation methods will be used to ease body fatigue and strain. Also included will be yoga-based stretching exercises and muscle/skeletal exercises that reduce risk of injury and increase performance. Meditation and visualizations will be explored to increase running performance. Sport physiology, cardiovascular research, and nutrition will be discussed in relation to running. $130

Open Psychodrama Encounter / Walt & Maurica Anderson

This workshop is a flexible weekend's work and play using a variety of encounter, gestalt, and body-movement approaches, with emphasis on psychodrama—the enactment of improvised life scenes as a way of expressing feelings, gaining insight, working through interpersonal conflicts, developing more openness and spontaneity, and having fun. The degree of active involvement is up to the individual. $130

Self-Awareness & Health Practices For Professionals Janet Mentink & Phil Mac

This workshop for health care professionals will include both didactic and experiential aspects emphasizing experiential learning about body/mind relationships, body awareness and self awareness. Massage, centering, and visual imagery will be included so that the group can experience enthusiasm and support for change and self growth.

The workshop will allow "helpers" to explore previous decisions and concepts about themselves as a helping professional, and in the areas of health and dis-ease and self care. Aspects of self awareness and redecisioning may be used to enhance personal and professional well being. $130

Week of September 2-7

The Radix Experience: A Neo-Reichian Workshop Charles Kelley, Merri Goldenson, Joel Dweck, Anne Ruderman, & Shaffia Richards

The Radix experience is a direct body approach to deep emotional release, rooted in the work of Wilhelm Reich and his students. By concentrating on breaking patterns of breathing and muscular tension, feeling which has been blocked by chronic unconscious patterns of muscular tension called "muscular armor" is freed. As the armor softens and the student allows emotions—fear, anger, pain—to emerge, he realizes a new capacity for trust, love, and joy.

Half of the workshop sessions will be in a large group with Chuck Kelley, who will present Radix group techniques. Chuck will also describe the concepts which underlie Radix and give an in-depth description of his training program. The other half of the sessions will be in small groups, and will include two individual Radix intensive sessions for each participant. $310

Personal Integrity / Exploring Self Esteem David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge Schiffman

In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical and mental potentials and how they affect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others. $280

September 2–9

Trager Psychophysical Integration and Mentastics Basic Training / Betty Fuller

For workshop description see July 22–29. $570

Weekend of September 7-9

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

For workshop description see July 20–22. $120

Exploring Self-Acceptance David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self-concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter methods, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $120

Gestalt Practice / Richard & Christine Price & the Esalen Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
and used—is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c 2500 BC

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, and growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment. The second half of this program will have participants working primarily with each other, relating whatever is being learned (or unlearned) to the development of their own styles. Thus this program might be especially useful to those wishing to utilize a gestalt approach in their professions (e.g. counselors, teachers, ministers, mothers, doctors and nurses).

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J C Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach). $450

Weekend of September 14-16

Energy Awareness & the Crystalline State / George Leonard

In the crystalline state, there is no expectation nor any prejudgment. Concentration on the past and future gives way to primary focus on the present. Action taken while in the crystalline state is not considered action but rather appropriate action. When fully achieved, this state permits you to experience the harmony and connectedness of all existence. This energy awareness workshop will emphasize the crystalline state as described in George Leonard's latest book, The Silent Pulse: A Search for the Perfect Rhythm that Exists in Each of Us, and will also involve centering, balancing and stress reduction. $120

The Lawyer—A New Perspective
A Weekend for Lawyers Presented by the Humanistic Law Institute

"Like mounds in a sandy desert, intellectual knowledge is mounting up without provision for the expression of the heart."
—Meher Baba

As lawyers we were trained to use our heads and not our hearts—to make choices and decisions based upon "reason," "principles," and "issues" and not to trust feelings, intuition or compassion—often with less than satisfying results in our "professional" and/or "private" lives.

During this weekend we will explore and share with other lawyers, in the peaceful, reflective, nourishing, and evocative setting of Esalen, ways of using and integrating all aspects of ourselves—our bodies, our minds, our feelings, our "hearts"—to see if we can make our work and our "private" lives more effective and more integrated, flowing, meaningful, and enjoyable.

The program will be conducted by a lawyer member of the HLI staff and another experienced group leader and will be largely experiential, using approaches and methods of gestalt awareness, psychosynthesis, massage, meditation, and bioenergetics. $120

The Creative Journal: A Path to Personal Integrity & Enthusiasm / Dee Mundschenk

This workshop will focus on a journal-keeping process for searching out and honoring our singular strengths and individual capabilities. With a personal journal we have an instrument to use in our search for balance, harmony and growth. It aids in formulating insights into visible, useful expressions; releasing powerful emotions creatively; strengthening personal integrity; and illuminating the body/mind processes.

In non-analytical, non-coercive, non-judgmental modes drawn from Eastern and Western practices for self-realization, we will begin developing the discipline and perspectives useful in honoring our vast mental, physical, and emotional prowess. Whether participants are devoted seekers or occasional explorers in the realm of personal integrity, this journal workshop will be of sufficient scope to provide extensive individual insights into personal power, compassion, humor, and new directions.

Please bring loose leaf notebooks with dividers, if possible, favorite pens, a small mirror, an open mind, and good and playful will for yourself. $280

Concentrated Radix Feeling Work
Clair Killen & Merri Goldenson

Under the sponsorship of the Radix Institute this workshop will provide an environment for deep feeling work. We will work as a group to experience the connection between our body armor, the ways we block our feelings and how we control our lives. As we become aware of how we control our feelings and our lives, we can consider letting go of control that stands in the way of greater experience of love, pleasure and trust. Each participant will receive four individual intensives. The enrollment will be limited to twelve participants who have experienced at least a previous five day Radix workshop. $310

Weekend of September 21-23

Steps to an Ecology of Mind / Gregory Bateson

In the last twenty years, the theoretical advances in cybernetics and advances in the study of personal interaction have led to new ways of looking at the living world, including everything from biology to poetry and politics. The workshop will explore these ways of perceiving and thinking. $120

Religious Values in Awareness
Donald Sandner & Stephen Schoen

In this workshop we are concerned with increased awareness through religious experience; our own conviction, in fact, is that the two are the same. The workshop is organized in sequences of meditation, dream work, and interpersonal response within the group. We shall look at all these processes in both Jungian and gestalt perspectives. The aim of our work together is the perennial spiritual goal: that we as individuals be at one with our experience. $120

We'll use the Japanese art of aikido to experience centering and energy awareness. This form will help make tangible, through physical movement, our relationship with the energy available to us and give direction for its use in daily life. Wear loose clothing. $120

Core Dynamics—Body Energetics / Hector Prestera

Using body release methods, body reading, color reading and psychic intuition, each participant will have an opportunity to contact areas of body armoring which prevent the core self from spontaneous release. Freeing the "core self" is the object of this weekend.

Suggested reading: Kurtz & Prestera, The Body Reveals (Bantam and Harper & Row). $120

Group Counseling: The Existential Model / Galvin Jackson

The existential model is based on a philosophical rather than a psychological view of man. Each person is seen as existing with no "givens" and his/her task is to define himself/herself through his/her creations (actions).

Each group member makes statements about himself or herself through interfacing with others as authentically as possible. The leader will return consistently to the existent moment, will reflect both feelings and ideas, will link, clarify, make risk-taking statements which center risk in himself and constantly share himself with group members.

The group leader will make frequent use of confrontation, but will not attack. He attempts to help members clarify alternatives which pave the way for action choices outside the group. He uses interaction methods to generate immediate, productive experiences for group members.

The group members' goals are to clarify self-definitions to expand potentials and to extent abilities to sustain intimacy. $120

Energy: Physical, Emotional and Spiritual
Stanislav & Christina Grof

A four-week interdisciplinary program for professionals and students in the areas of psychiatry, psychology, general medicine, anthropology, physics, philosophy, and religion. This workshop will focus on various manifestations of energy and on techniques of channeling them for the purpose of self-exploration and spiritual growth. Special attention will be paid to the problems of interrelations between consciousness, energy and matter. The program will cover three thematic areas:

1. Ancient Spiritual Systems and Techniques of Dealing With Energy.
We will explore, theoretically and practically, Tantric art and ritual, the Tibetan vajrayana, kundalini yoga, Agni yoga, Basque mysticism, astrology and alchemy.

2. Consciousness Research and Modern Physics.
We will focus on revolutionary findings from experiential psychotherapy, psychedelic research, parapsychology, anthropology and modern physics. The controversies about the pioneering research of Wilhelm Reich will be reviewed by his prominent former co-worker, Bernard Grad. Special sessions will be dedicated to the striking convergence between mysticism, consciousness research, and modern physics.

3. Self-Exploration and Group Process
The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with personal experience. Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators of an ongoing process of intrapsychic and interpersonal exploration of the participants throughout the program. In this context, we will use gestalt practice, encounter, neo-Reichian approaches, dance, fantasy exercises with music, mandala drawing, psychosynthesis, and different forms of body work.

From Stress to High Level Wellness
Preventing Burn-Out in the Helping Professions
John W Travis, MD, Joy Holloway & Barbara McNeill

An experiential approach to high level wellness. Learn what high level wellness is about. We will assist you in developing skills in the areas of self-responsibility, stress control, nutrition and physical activity, and in promoting the excellence and vitality which are synonymous with optimum health. We will create our own wellness plans and, through personal experience, learn the importance of self-responsibility in active health and well-being. We will also encourage the shifting of beliefs towards a new paradigm—one in which we are no longer rescuing patients, clients, friends from dis-ease, but rather teaching self-responsibility by our personal examples. $120

Five Days with Jack Rosenberg

My current focus is on enjoying life to the fullest and bringing the clearest expression of my self to each moment. Many people describe what I do as gestalt body work with a transpersonal bend.

During the workshop we will cover many aspects of my energetic approach to sexuality as well as working with the body energy field and the belief system which keeps us locked in obsolete behavior patterns. Where you are is where we will start. $280

Music, Dance, Trance & Celebration / Emmett Miller

In cultures less dominated by technology than ours, music, dance and celebration are not spectator sports, but are used together with "trance" states by everyone present, for physical, emotional and spiritual health, for release of tension from mind and body, for enjoyment and ecstasy, and for interpersonal and transpersonal communication.

We will leave the "cultural trance" and develop our own, explore it in stillness and in movement, in silence and in sound. Chanting, music, massage, singing, drumming and sharing; a time of joy, celebration and sharing. $120

Carl Jung once stated that astrology contained within its teachings the sum total of the psychological knowledge of the ancients. The point of this workshop will be to show the validity of this statement expressed in modern terms.

Many people have tried to make astrology fit into various systems of modern psychology. Here we will explore the extent to which astrology is, in itself, a complete system of psychology, which makes its own statements about human nature, and which suggests rather surprising consequences for ideas of human life and behavior.

Little or no previous knowledge of astrology will be required in this workshop. We will be concerned largely with the symbolism and its psychological import, not especially with the techniques of horoscope analysis. Any material of a technical nature that is needed in the workshop will be introduced as we go along. $120

Being Together, Being Ourselves / Paul Rebillot

". . . Let there be spaces in your togetherness and let the winds of the heavens dance between you."

—Kahlil Gibran, The Prophet

Laughing and crying, dancing and touching, we will come together for a weekend of improvisation and play. Gestalt process and theater games will help us to open doors to new ways of being together while being ourselves. We will explore the delicate balance of communication and separateness, of closeness and distance in our relationships with one another. $120

Week of October 14-19

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop

Family Circles / Paul Rebillot

"If you get rid of the pain before you have answered its questions, you get rid of the self along with it."

—C.G. Jung

In order to survive and win approval in our childhood situations, most of us had to develop an "act"—a set of acceptable behaviors that required the painful suppression of our own spontaneous energies. The first step toward recovery of the authentic self is to purge ourselves of the inhibiting programs delivered to us in childhood. Family Circles offers a safe, supportive environment in which to answer the questions of our childhood inhibitions and finally destroy them through dramatic ritual action. Through a process of reparenting by ideal parents, psychodynamically enacted, we then create for ourselves the childhood of our heart's desire. $280

Symbols of Transformation
Ralph Metzner & Angie Arrien

This seminar is an intensive experiential study of symbols as tools of personal growth. Symbols can expand one's perception of self and others, increase insight and stimulate new areas of self-expression and creativity. We will consider a variety of symbols: psychologically, as archetypes of individuation, and cross-culturally, as universal constants. The symbols to be studied and experienced include: sun and moon, trees, flowers, circles/wheels/mandalas, totem animals, light and fire, the elements, sacred mountains, the body and its parts, the journey/path, and others. Some of the sources of symbolism that we will draw on are astrology, alchemy, the tarot, mythology and folklore of all cultures. Special attention will be given to the uses and significance of symbols in dreams, art and the helping professions. Special symbolic creative projects will be part of the seminar. $280

Inner Road to Health: A Weekend Primer on Alternative Health Systems / Al Drucker

This workshop is intended as a first short introduction to some of the approaches of holistic health, which are currently gaining favor as natural alternatives to the more orthodox medical practices dominating the health field in this country. Included will be such diverse topics as herbs, flowers, acupuncture, iridology, homeopathy, rolfing, diet, etc. Early morning sessions will be devoted to chanting and meditation followed by yoga or tai chi. We will also schedule an afternoon massage session with herbal bath for which we pick our own herbs. Meals will be largely organic and natural, much of the produce coming from our own garden. $120

Dream Discovery / Joyce Frazee

"A dream that is not understood is like a letter that is not opened."

—Talmud

Each night we receive brilliant, insightful, creative communiques disguised in poetic imagery. In this workshop we will explore how to use our dreams for personal growth, insight, creativity, and problem solving. Participants will discover that any dream, however fragmentary or prosaic, can offer entry to a new world of insight. Methods for dream discovery will include exercises in dream recall, Senoi dream practices, mandala drawing, gestalt dream work and psychosynthesis. $120

Week of October 21-26

Dream Consciousness and the Experience of Death: Ancient and Modern Approaches
Tarab Tulku Rinpoche & Léo Matos

In this seminar we will explore a variety of approaches to the phenomena encountered in dreams and their relationship to the experience of death. The methods used in the Tibetan Tantric tradition will be complemented by and compared with the dream work developed by the Senoi of Malaysia, North American Indians and Western depth psychology (Freud's psychoanalysis, Jung's analytical psychology, and Fritz Perls' gestalt practice). We will also use experiential techniques developed by the two of us for examining various levels of dream consciousness and their relationship to the experience of death, and the death-rebirth process. Special attention will be paid to the importance of these areas for the practice of meditation. $280

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

"When sex comes from the physical center, it is a necessity. When it comes from the mental center, it is a fantasy. When sex comes from the heart center, it is a deep, total, and profound experience of our own divinity. Sex is meaningless without the heart."

The purpose of this workshop is to heal the separation between our divinity and our sexuality as it exists in our consciousness, attitudes, and actions. This weekend will include breathing, movement, music, sound, and massage meditation. We will come together to dance, to sing, to worship, to cry—to celebrate our vulnerability and our strength, our heights and our depths. Gabrielle will support us in going within ourselves to rediscover the magnitude of our own heart energy, thus infusing our sexuality, and our entire life experience, with depth and purpose. $120

The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples / David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge Schiffman

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery as well as gestalt awareness techniques. $120 per person.

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth (A four week internship program for personal & professional growth) David Schiffman, Elisa Lodge Schiffman & Ian Baker with the Esalen Staff

Over the years Esalen has functioned as a major clearing house for a wide variety of approaches and means for facilitating personal evolution and expression. One's journey could begin with any realm—mental, physical, emotional, or transpersonal—each path serving to create a wealth of information and energetic access.

What are the common experiential and conceptual threads that underlie each of these paths? How can these threads of experience be best woven together to create a fabric whose qualities are simultaneously exquisite in their delicacy while still remaining strong enough to sustain the wear and tear of worldly existence? And how best might this very personal process of self-discovery and integration be taught and shared with others?

The exploration and resolution of these and other basic questions pertaining to the process of change and growth will serve as the basis of our work together during this month long institute program.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own ability, style, and artfulness both as individual guide and group facilitator, as well as to do in-depth personal work and training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthetic techniques, Jungian and archetypal psychologies, and the meditative arts.

The program will be structured to include: intensive individual work, supervised observations, practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills, video feedback, illustrated lectures and didactic theoretical sessions. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective linking human potential practices with traditional psychological and counseling modalities.

Thot, Egyptian god of magic and of medical secrets.

DEFINITIONS

PSYCHOSYNTHESIS

Psychosynthesis is a psychological and educational approach for recognizing and harmonizing the many, often conflicting, elements of our inner lives. It is a developmental process based on a positive conception of man/woman within an evolving universe. Starting with each person's existential situation as he or she perceives it, personal growth is organized into a process aiming at the integration of personality and the emergence of an effective unifying center of being and awareness, the Self. The practical work of psychosynthesis chooses in each situation the appropriate progressive activities among many techniques and methods available. Some of these are: guided imagery, movement, self-identification, creativity, gestalt, meditation, training of the will, symbolic art work, journal keeping, ideal models, and development of intuition. The emphasis is on fostering an ongoing process of growth that can gain momentum and bring about a more joyful, balanced actualization of one's life.

MASSAGE

Massage is practiced to help the body relax, to release tensions, to balance the energy flow, and to soothe the being with gentle caring. Massages are given individually; workshops, classes, and private lessons are available.

T'AI CHI CHUAN

T'ai Chi Chuan is an ancient Chinese exercise discipline practised for health, meditation, energy flow, and self-defense. The slow, flowing movements of the "shadow boxing" comprise the oldest and "softest" of the Asian martial arts. Developed from the Chinese practice of nei kung, or inner exercise, it is part of the system of Taoist yoga. The term t'ai chi can be translated as "grand ultimate" and is expressed by the familiar symbol of yang and yin. It is thus rooted in the Chinese philosophy of change as expressed in the I Ching.

STRUCTURAL INTEGRATION (ROLFING

Structural Integration or Rolfing is a method of deep manipulation of the musculo-skeletal system that aims at balancing the major segments of the body. We have learned that connective tissue (fascia, tendons, ligaments) can be lengthened by palpation and a second principle: posture is behavior. Humans are psychophysical organisms: one cannot divorce their physical from their change the function.

ENCOUNTER

The ground rules of encounter are that participants be open and honest in a group setting, that they avoid mere theorizing and instead talk about their feelings and perceptions. There is often an emphasis on eliciting emotions which lead to positive or negative confrontations rather than away from them. The focus of encounter is to explore interpersonal relations. Over the past years encounter, as practised at Esalen, has evolved into a direct approach incorporating several related disciplines to achieve its aims. Techniques and insights gained from gestalt, sensory awareness, bioenergetics, massage, movement, and structural integration are all part of Esalen's encounter groups today.

GESTALT

Gestalt Awareness Training is a theory and approach to personality integration first developed by Fritz and Laura Perls, though new styles and methods are being developed by other leaders. The goal of the training is to assist the participants to utilize excitement and awareness and to develop responsibility. Excitement—to have life energy freely available and flowing, not blocked. Awareness—to be conscious of my energy as and where it flows; to have action accessible to consciousness, not happening mechanically. Responsibility— to know and act on the principle that I am the one who acts, thinks, and feels whatever it may be that I act, think, or feel. No one else or no event influences me except with my consent. At times, everyone in the workshop may work simultaneously with some awareness exercise, or in interaction with each other. More traditionally, a fair amount of time will be spent with participants working individually with the leader. The starting point for such individual work is whatever is here and now of most involving concern for the organism; a fantasy or dream, an interaction with another person, a memory, or a physical posture. "Problems" are welcome as starting points, if they are truly present and not merely verbally presented. In keeping with the gestalt emphasis on personal responsibility, the leader usually leaves the initiative for such work with the participants. The assumption is made that participants are not "patients" but are persons responsible for their own life decisions.

BIOENERGETIC ANALYSIS

Bioenergetic analysis attempts to understand the life of the body through its expression of vitality, gesture, emotion, feeling, and relationship. The body is viewed as an energetic process that participates as the world in the world of instinctual, social, imaginative and creative realms. Bioenergetics seeks to develop an individual's range of expression by working through this process.

SHIATSU MASSAGE

Shiatsu massage is the oriental art in which the hands are used to apply pressure to acupuncture points over the entire body, allowing the springs of life to flow.

Unless otherwise indicated, all programs listed in this brochure are residential programs in Big Sur. Send reservations for all programs to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920.

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute—By Reservation Only.

Fee Information: We require a reservation fee of $20 for weekend groups, $70 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs. Please mail all reservations to Esalen/Big Sur. Balance of payment is due on arrival. Esalen accepts Mastercharge, Bankamericard, and American Express. U S currency only, please.

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for a long term Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation (allow at least 3 weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—August 31 programs or for weekend programs.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has limited child care facilities. If you are interested in bringing a child while you are attending a workshop of five days or longer, contact the office well in advance for information on availability of child space. Esalen does not supply babysitters.

We ask workshop participants not to have guests. Please do not bring pets.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5–5:30 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying, or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Esalen's Energy Path: Toward the Utilization of Renewable Resources

Leon Trice

The world is in the grip of an energy crisis, a crisis that has come into being because the energy sources we depend upon are limited in that they cannot be renewed. Recently in California we have been experiencing the first results of this crisis in the shortage of gasoline/oil supplies needed to power our transportation vehicles. Cheap and accessible supplies of oil and natural gas meeting a large majority of our energy demands are running out and, as these non-renewable sources of fuel become more scarce, the cost of producing them continues to rise exponentially. This continuing process is obviously highly inflationary, with ominous economic ramifications. Yet, if we look at this crisis as an opportunity for change, an alternative path emerges from the present course of rapid depletion of non-replaceable sources of energy, i.e., oil, natural gas, coal, and uranium. Rather than continuing in the present dependent way of thinking about non-renewable energy and our addictive way of using it in a high production and consumption oriented way of life, we can turn to a path of utilizing those energy resources that are renewable. Following such a course means tapping those energy flows that are always here whether we use them or not, such as the sun, wind, and vegetation. This "soft" and sane technological approach can work as a simple replacement for those "hard" and environmentally disruptive technologies centered around the use of nuclear power and the massive consumption of fossil fuels. The result: a less wasteful, more rational, and more humane future; a future certainly sustainable and more profoundly satisfying in human terms than the present course of depleting our fuel supplies.

Food for Thought

In 1979, the Esalen Board of Directors allocated funds supporting a program creating a path of energy conservation geared toward the utilization of our Esalen/Big Sur resources. In formulating this program, Julian Silverman stated, "Instead of considering the energy problem piecemeal, we propose a gestalt (wholistic) viewpoint. It is based on what Fritz Perls termed the movement 'from outside support to self support'—a concept applicable not only to our personal lives, but also to the way we utilize our energy resources. In this context, energy conservation as a total way of life is simply the intelligent utilization of all our natural resources—personal, psychological, and material." Given such an energy path, and given Esalen's unique geographical location in relation to both abundant and renewable resources, we are making the transition from a fossil fuel age to a new age energy consciousness.

Located at a northern latitude of 36°, with the Pacific Ocean on one side and California's Los Padres mountains on the other, Esalen is fortunate to have access to several sources of energy. This energy is available in the form of sunlight and solar radiation, and in the potentials of Esalen's creek, the hot springs, and the ocean.

Use of the sun's energy to meet both space and hot water heating requirements of Esalen's buildings will considerably lower our dependence on outside fuel/energy supplies. Esalen experiences first hand the results of utilizing this solar power-potential in the design and construction of the new laundry building. Architect Richard Stratman designed the laundry as an underground structure to maximize the earth's capacity to insulate the building and to minimize its visual impact on the environment. Water used by the laundry is first pre-heated by 400 square feet of solar panels located on an adjacent building and stored in a 500 gallon tank in the laundry. With this system, less butane is required to raise the temperature of the solar-heated water to the required 140 degrees necessary for washing; consequently, there is reduced fuel consumption and less reliance on a non-renewable source of energy. Such successful use of the sun as an energy source gives impetus to continue developing our potential solar capacity. Whether the sun is used in meeting energy demands of newly-constructed buildings or is adapted to alleviate the fuel consumption in existing structures, the result is the same: we recognize, identify, and make good use of part of the spectrum of our renewable potential—solar energy.

Water-energy potential from our creek is one of the purest forms of energy available to Esalen. Converting the potential power of water to electrical energy is almost pollution free; the generation of electricity produces no waste products and is relatively easy to control. Such conversion of potential water energy to electrical power has from 80-90 percent efficiency—high compared to the 25-45 percent efficiency of solar, chemical, and thermal energy systems. With this readily available potential, we are studying the feasibility of a small, electrical, generating hydro-power system. Under the guidance of Richard

Lee, a mechanical engineer, Esalen is looking at possible designs and their environmental effects on the Hot Springs Canyon's ecology. If the long-term ecological balance of the stream is not infringed upon, the worth of a hydro-power system is immeasurable; we can provide electricity to meet Esalen's minimum energy requirements and at the same time take another step towards utilizing those available resources which are renewable.

Esalen's hot springs supply water of 117 degrees to the baths and have long been known for therapeutic potential. Recently they have been recognized as a possible available energy source. José Mozic, a physicist in residence at Esalen, has developed a system utilizing hot springs heat to provide the necessary B.T.U.s to heat the swimming pool. This system, quite simple in theory, takes water downhill from the pool to a heat exchanger at the baths. At this point the heat from the hot springs water is transferred by convection to the swimming pool water, which then returns up the path and back into the pool. With the implementation of this unique design, Esalen's dependence on outside fuel supplies has again been lessened. Now that hot springs geothermal potential is indeed a reality, a second phase utilizing the same heat-exchanger principle is being developed. This next step will provide hot water to showers at the baths, preheat hot water used in the kitchen, and provide shower and tap hot water for the motel-row living units. In these ways, we are taking new steps toward reducing our overall fuel consumption.

Wind is created by the reaction between our atmosphere and incoming solar energy. Given the unpredictability of wind, we have chosen not to pursue wind energy as a possible power source at this time.

The use of vegetation or biofuels as an energy source offers another alternative to our present path. Biofuels differ from fossil fuels in that they ultimately derive from living things, such as plants which take the sun's energy and convert it to chemical energy by the process of photosynthesis. This chemical energy is then available to us, for example, in the food we eat, and then is passed as a waste product back into the energy cycle. In this sense, plant, animal, and fish life and their by-products and wastes are all storehouses of solar energy.

Biofuels are readily available to the Esalen community and can be categorized under the headings of agriculture, wood, methane systems, and aquaculture. Steve Beck is investigating agriculture as a means of harnessing solar energy to meet our food needs, and thus increase Esalen's capacity as a self-sustaining community. He has also initiated a program of supplementing our conventional heating methods with heat supplied by wood burning stoves. These wood fueled units burn firewood gathered and cut from our neighboring Los Padres National Forest by Esalen community members. This renewed interest in wood as a fuel gives us an added energy source and another means by which we, as a community, can become more self-sufficient.

Methane systems and aquacultures are ideas which involve the use of abundant and readily available resources. The most promising source of methane for Esalen is ocean-grown seaweed. Kelp collected from the Pacific can be used to power a methane generator producing electricity; it can also be used as a special food supplement, providing a healthy salt and natural iodine substitute. Culturing fish for food is a centuries-old tradition in Asian countries. Making fish ponds, using simple materials, ecological techniques, and local resources such as kitchen scraps to feed the fish, offers Esalen an alternative source of food protein and another way to provide for our own community.

Channelling the sun's energy as a source of power is not a new notion. Evidence exists that ancient civilizations knew much more about the sun's potential than we presently do. The Mayans oriented their temples and ziggurats in such a way that we cannot help but suppose that they had access to a knowledge of the solar system and its relationship to the earth that enabled them to develop such a highly evolved culture. Given the tremendous scientific and technological developments of the twentieth century, it is ironic that we as a culture are just beginning to realize the potential available from the most basic and primeval creator of life—the sun. In a very archetypal sense we are indeed returning to a way of being that not only connects us to the very source of our existence, but also integrates us with our environment and moves us toward a more harmonious relationship with the universe.

What Physicians Should Know About Nuclear Power

Helen Caldicott, MD

Dr. Caldicott is President of Physicians for Social Responsibility. The following article was published in the March 1979 Physician East.

The fuel cycle of nuclear power plants is complex, but not too difficult to understand. It has many biological and medical implications which must be understood by physician and patient, as well as by the politicians who make most important decisions for society. In this article, I will describe the fuel cycle step-by-step and explain the medical dangers arising from each step.

Mining

When uranium—the fuel for atomic reactors—is mined from the ground it emits the radioactive gas called radon. Often inhaled into the lungs of miners, after four days radon converts to lead 210 which remains radioactive for more than 100 years. Because radiation in the body is carcinogenic, it has been discovered in the United States that up to 20 percent of uranium miners die of lung cancer over a 20-year period of mining.

Milling

After the uranium ore is mined, it is then milled and refined. Thousands of tons of waste ore (tailings) are discarded and left lying in huge heaps on the ground. The gas radon is continually emitted from the waste uranium in the tailings. The tailings generated to provide uranium for nuclear power in the United States over the next twenty-four years may produce, through the causative agent radon, 45 cases of lung cancer in the world per year for tens of thousands of years.

Enrichment and Fuel Fabrication

The uranium is then enriched and fabricated into fuel rods which are transported to the nuclear reactor and placed in the reactor core. A typical 1,000 megawatt reactor contains 526 bundles, each bundle consisting of 12 rods. The radioactive uranium produces heat by fission which is utilized to generate electricity. But during this process uranium is converted to many radioactive by-products which are the ashes or wastes of nuclear power. Once a year one-quarter of the rods are removed from the reactor core because their generating life has ceased. The rods are both thermally and radioactively very hot and must be stored on racks in cooling ponds containing water. They now contain a very large number of biologically dangerous radioactive materials including strontium 90, iodine 131, cesium 137 and plutonium. Eventually it is hoped that these rods will be transported in caskets to a reprocessing plant where they will be dissolved in nitric acid.

Reprocessing

The plutonium is purified and removed from the solution in powder form as plutonium dioxide. It will then be used as either fuel for atomic bombs or fuel for "breeder nuclear reactors" (reactors which breed plutonium). It is at this point in the fuel cycle that the greatest dangers arise once the plutonium is separated.

Plutonium is an extremely potent cancer-producing material, appropriately named after Pluto, the God of the dead and ruler of the underworld. It enters the body by inhalation of contaminated air which is deposited in the lung. Because of its potent cancer-producing properties, the acceptable body dose has been set at less than 1 millionth of a gram (an invisible particle). There is some evidence this level has been set too high. Cancer will not appear until 15 to 20 years after inhalation. By extrapolation, 1 lb. of plutonium, universally dispersed, would be adequate to kill every man, woman and child on earth.

Most of the plutonium manufactured in the fuel cycle will be in powdered form and by the year 2,020 in the United States the industry will have produced 30,000 tons of plutonium and there will be 100,000 shipments of material annually on American highways. Because plutonium is the basic material of atomic bombs, it is more valuable than heroin on the black market, therefore vulnerable to theft by terrorists, racketeers, non-nuclear nations and deranged individuals.

Reactor grade plutonium makes inefficient but dirty bombs. It also has a curious physical property of igniting spontaneously when exposed to air, thereby producing tiny aerosolised particles which are dispersed by wind currents and available for inhalation by humans and animals. One could envisage disastrous consequences if a truck were to crash and discharge some of its deadly contents. Plutonium must be transported very carefully, packed in small quantities in separate containers because only 10 lbs. is "critical mass" which means that a spontaneous atomic explosion could occur if 10 lbs. or more were compacted together in a finite space.

The most awesome property of plutonium is its half life of 24,400 years, (half life of a radioactive substance being the period of time for half of a given quantity to decay, and a similar period for half of the remaining radioactivity to decay, ad infinitum.) Therefore radiation from man-made plutonium will exist on earth for at least half a million years. To illustrate the enormous medical problems arising from the physical properties of plutonium, if an individual dies of lung cancer engendered by plutonium, his body will return to dust, but the plutonium lives on to produce cancer in another human being.

Although it will be used as "fuel" in breeder reactors, more plutonium will be produced than will be utilized. So there will be a continual net increase in plutonium manufactured. The nuclear industry has not yet decided what to do with all this plutonium—there are no safe methods of disposal and storage available at this point in time.

Waste Storage

After the plutonium is extracted from the radioactive waste, very dangerous biological elements remain, which have no further use and are pure waste products. This remaining solution contains some plutonium, radioactive iodine, strontium 90, cesium and many other highly toxic radio-nuclides. Because it is extremely hot, it must be stored in tanks which are cooled continuously for years. Every month numerous leaks of radioactive wastes are reported in the United States in quantities from several gallons to 200,000 gallons. When this dangerous fluid leaks it will inevitably contaminate the water system of the planet, and the various elements will be taken up by the food cycle. Radioactive iodine, strontium 90, and cesium are absorbed by roots of grass and vegetables and are further concentrated in the flesh and milk of animals when they eat the grass.

Iodine 131, strontium 90 and plutonium are concentrated in both human and animal milk. Cesium is concentrated in muscle (meat) and plutonium is also concentrated 1,000 times in fish compared to the background water concentration. These substances are invisible, because they are tasteless and odorless and it is impossible to know when one is eating or drinking or inhaling radioactive elements.

Biological Properties of Radioactive Waste

Genes are changed by radioactive particles. Cells and genes which are actively dividing (as in fetuses, babies and young children) are most susceptible to the effects of radiation. If a gene which controls the rate of cell division is altered by radiation, the cell may divide in an uncontrolled fashion to produce cancer and leukemia. It may take from 15-30 years before cancer appears after the cell is exposed to radiation. If a gene in the sperm or egg is altered by a radioactive particle, the young may be born either with an inherited disease, or the baby may appear normal but will transmit the damaged gene to future generations, to become manifest in later years.

Radioactive iodine is absorbed through the bowel wall, and migrates in the blood to the thyroid gland where it may produce thyroid cancer.

Strontium 90 is also absorbed through the bowel after being ingested in contaminated milk, and is incorporated in bone because it chemically resembles calcium. This element causes osteogenic sarcoma—a highly malignant, lethal bone tumour, and leukemia. The blood cells formed in the bone marrow are subjected to the effects of radiation from strontium 90 in the adjacent bone.

Physicians for Social Responsibility

Howard Kornfeld, MD

The following letter is from a physician who has spent several months at Esalen in the last few years.

April 20, 1979

Dear Friends,

It has become evident to me that unless radioactive and chemical pollution is brought under control in the near future, we face an epidemic of cancer and genetic disease unrivaled in human history. If the governments of the world continue developing, manufacturing, and storing more nuclear weapons, this ultimate destiny will come to pass. My involvement with the human potential and holistic movement has impressed me with the joy and fulfillment inherent in human life. I feel now it is time to act to preserve the chance for our children and all future generations to share this possibility. We must now join together to nurture the current non-violent environmental movement sweeping this and other countries, and with all our skills and perspectives contribute to the goal of the clean and safe planet in which true growth is possible.

Sincerely,
Howard Kornfeld, M.D.

Dr. Kornfeld is a member of a newly formed group (PSR) who present themselves as follows:

PHYSICIANS FOR SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

As physicians in a complex technological society, we feel a deep responsibility to educate the public about the prevention of disease and the promotion of health. One serious health hazard is environmental pollution by radioactive substances. The proliferation of nuclear power plants and nuclear weaponry presents an unparalleled threat to human survival.

The purpose of Physicians for Social Responsibility is to educate physicians and health care providers about the medical dangers of nuclear radiation, so that they might in turn educate their patients and the public at large. Our goal is the realization of the following recommendations:

1. A moratorium on building nuclear power plants and the phasing out of existing ones
2. Termination of our policy of exporting nuclear technology to other countries
3. Extensive studies of populations exposed to nuclear radiation
4. Nuclear weapons disarmament
5. The development of conservation policies and renewable energy resources

We intend to distribute relevant information and to create a number of educational events for physicians and health care providers. Your support is crucial to the success of this effort.

The Future of Bodily Transformation

Michael Murphy and James L. Hickman

One of the central themes of *Jacob Atabet: A Speculative Fiction is that a coming stage of human evolution may involve purposeful bodily transformation through an integration of spiritual and physical disciplines. One of the book's protagonists, Darwin Fall, hypothesizes that this evolutionary frontier is foreshadowed in various bodily events which have been described for centuries in diverse fields. Though Jacob Atabet is largely a work of fiction, we believe that a significant frontier is revealed by the kinds of supernormal functioning it describes. To explore this possibility we have established a research project within Esalen Institute to examine the nature of extraordinary bodily capacities. We are gathering anecdotes and research material from every field of human experience that seems fertile in this regard. To date we have collected several thousand examples of supernormal bodily change—some of it spontaneous, some of it consciously self-directed—from the lore of yoga and contemplative practice the world over; from work with hypnosis, autogenic training and Russian psychical self-regulation; from sport and athletic training; from research with hallucinogenic drugs; from spiritual or "mind-assisted" healing; from the reports of artists; and from many other fields. As far as we know, this is the first systematic attempt to collect evidence from a variety of fields for the human capacity to achieve extraordinary bodily function.

From this data base we are developing an analysis of the basic, universal elements involved in such high level change. Those elements include the natural talents, belief systems, personality structures and environmental conditions of the people involved; they also include certain fundamental processes that often accompany a breakthrough to new levels of physical function. While training, for example, some athletes have images of internal organs like lungs or bursting capillaries. Some of them believe that such experience helps mediate awareness of their body's functioning. "Inner seeing" of this kind closely resembles powers described in various yogic and Buddhist scriptures; we speculate that athletes sometimes stumble inadvertently onto such capacities in the course of their training. Evidence for this proposition is presented in The Psychic Side of Sports. Other little known processes accompany high level physical functioning frequently enough for us to study them systematically. From that analysis we are developing a list of "transformational modalities," consisting of phenomena like "inner seeing." Such an inventory might contribute to the development of more efficient disciplines for awareness and performance in many fields. If "inner seeing," for example, contributes to an athlete's self-awareness, it might be cultivated in his or her training. Indeed, some athletes working with visualization techniques have told us that our research along these lines has helped illuminate their practice. In the years to come, we believe, there will be more research like ours and more programs to incorporate these discoveries.

The Near Future

What might we expect in the next ten or twenty years if more efforts are made in these directions? Part of the answer is already forming around us. Pollster George Gallup says that the physical fitness boom of the last five or six years is "one of the most dramatic changes in lifestyle" he has ever measured in the American public. This enthusiastic movement may have contributed already to a decline in the incidence of heart disease in the United States. And it has its heroes and heroines to inspire the reluctant. Walt Stack, at 71, has become a legend for his daily seventeen-mile runs and morning swims in San Francisco Bay. Since he started running in his fifties, he has completed over 70 marathons and at least two runs of a hundred miles. Mavis Lindgren, also running marathons in her seventies, now appears in ads for Blue Cross as an example of someone who is eliminating the need for medical care. Such stories are multiplying. Thomas Pagan of Hillsboro, Florida, completed his first marathon at the age of 80, having taken up running just two years before after finding that he had serious heart and lung disease. People like these are inspiring thousands more to venture into the terra incognita of high level fitness, not only through running but in swimming, cycling, cross-country skiing and many other sports.

Breakthroughs in performance that open the way for many to follow is an old story in athletics; witness the effect of Roger Bannister's four-minute mile or John Thomas' first high jump over seven feet. A recent Scientific American article presents data on the performance of male amateur runners who set world records at distances of from 100 yards to thirty kilometers over the past fifty years. The rate of improvement has averaged about .75 meter per minute per year. The authors of this article maintain that continued improvement in performance is likely to continue for an indefinite number of years.

We can expect a similar process for many kinds of bodily self-surpassing. Within the next ten or twenty years, we predict, some man over forty will come close to a four-minute mile, and someone in their forties will do exceptionally well in the Olympics. (Jack Foster of New Zealand has already run a two-hour and eleven minute marathon—one of the best times ever—when he was 41.) More prodigies like Walt Stack and Mavis Lindgren will amaze us. And the continuing effect of the physical fitness boom will contribute to further declines in heart disease, thus increasing the average American life expectancy.

During the next two decades, athletes and coaches in the United States and Europe will incorporate mental disciplines into their training as the Russians and the East Germans are doing now. The influence of such methods will inevitably spread to colleges and high schools and will cause recreational sport to become more oriented toward spiritual values.

But contagious effects like these will not be limited to athletics. The current interest in biofeedback, meditation for health, and various methods of self-suggestion will continue to grow, contributing to the alleviation of pain and sickness. These methods of self-control will be taught in more clinics, hospitals, schools, churches and independent learning centers. Methods to enhance relaxation, increase sensory awareness and stimulate imaginative thinking will be taught and practiced in homes and recreational centers. Interest in humanistic psychology and holistic health will develop as it has for the last fifteen years, under increasingly diverse rubrics. Rigorous explorations into the further reaches of human capacities, through pioneering projects like Robert Masters' Psychenaut Program, will provide knowledge and methods of education that will expand our understanding of supernormal functioning. All of these trends will inevitably lead to: (1) a growing interest in psychophysical transformation; (2) more research and dissemination of information in these fields; (3) increasingly imaginative proposals for programs to develop these leadings, including novels, paintings, works of science fiction and television documentaries that dramatize adventures in high level change; (4) more exemplars of healing and surpassing performance; (5) more surprising and compelling exploration into the uncharted realms of supernormal experience. Such developments are possible in part because physical excellence so easily captures our imagination. Because we all have been sick, new ways toward health will attract us. Because we have eyes for physical beauty, we will notice programs that show ways to increase it. Because an increase in physical capacity of any kind is so rewarding, we will always be vulnerable to methods that bring it about.

The More Distant Future

In fifty or a hundred years from now, when meditation, physical fitness, spiritual healing and voluntary control of our autonomic systems are commonly taught and practiced—when millions of us recognize the frontiers that exist in the further reaches of our minds and bodies, there will be many groups working to achieve the seemingly miraculous capacities we catch sight of in the stories of certain saints and yogis. By then we will have mounted several projects of this kind that in their scope and enterprise will resemble the explorations of space. There will be organizations and networks to exchange information concerning the complexities of such high level change (indeed, the Associations of Humanistic and Transpersonal Psychology and centers like Esalen Institute serve in this

Underground houses carved into ancient silt plains in China

There are a variety of ways to experience Esalen, ranging from a visit to the hot springs on a week-night to a long-term stay as a student or resident. The week-end and five-day workshops described throughout the catalog are the standard route for coming to Esalen and learning the various methods of personal growth and self-exploration that are available here. The Experiencing Esalen workshops are particularly valuable as a kind of smorgasbord introduction to some of these many practices (such as gestalt, massage, sensory awareness, etc.); from such a sampling, the participant can then choose that approach which feels most appropriate, and then pursue it in subsequent seminars. For those who wish an extended stay of a month or more, the Ongoing Residence Program is ideal and is described on page 38. Other long-term programs include the "month-longs" coordinated by individuals such as Stan Grof, Al Drucker, and David Schiffman, which frequently involve didactic seminars as well as experiential workshops, and can be particularly useful for professionals and graduate students.

WAYS OF BEING AT ESALEN

A very popular way of being at Esalen and one that allows a much greater involvement with the place and its community at a lower expense is the Work-Study Program, which entails working with the Esalen staff as well as participating in an on-going workshop designed specifically for that program. See page 13 for more information and an application form.

In addition, besides all the catalog programs, there are a large number of other events which enrich life at Esalen. There is a regular Tuesday Night Forum where various writers and thinkers, both visiting and resident, share their ideas with the community. On Wednesday nights, there are films, dance performances, choirs, puppet shows, boogies, and other forms of creative entertainment. Finally, there is a Community Workshop program which goes on daily, and provides many opportunities for engaging in personal self-exploration or learning new approaches to human growth.

THE ESALEN WORK-STUDY PROGRAM

In the process of becoming educated, we are taught that it is more important to be involved with the outside world than with our Selves. We are taught to become Ego-involved—involved with manipulating things and people. We are taught to experience our selves primarily in relation to others; we lose touch with our essence.

From this perspective, we offer an opportunity to return to our Selves within the working context of the Esalen community. Our faculty for this program is our environment — staff — community.

— Learning/dis-covering the use of your own energy in work . . . for your SELF.
— Living together (close to others) operatively and co-operatively in a unique, high intensity environment.
— Contact/communication with the people of Esalen via group work and in day-to-day Esalen happenings.

An opportunity for:
— SELF-regulation
— SELF-examination
— SELF-contemplation

and if you choose
— SELF-reevaluation
— Facilitated by removal from your ordinary living context.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week at such jobs as gardening, maintenance, office, kitchen duties, etc. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs and work assignments are made according to these requirements. The Work-Study program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program, emotionally and physically, and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share—contact—play/alone-together. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates. Arrangements are made through the office.

Accommodations are shared, with up to three people to a room, at South Coast Center, a staff living complex which is 1½ miles north of Esalen. The Work-Study Program, lasting 28 days, is a full time workshop in itself. The work commitment to the community, group process work, and teaching seminars make up a busy schedule for participants. Enrolling in the Esalen catalog workshops is therefore discouraged, since the extra involvements tend to interfere with the fulfillment of the Work-Study Program.

Available dates: October 7-November 4; November 4-December 2; December 2-30; December 30-January 27; January 27-February 24; February 24-March 23; March 23-April 20; April 20-May 18; May 18-June 15.

NOTE: This application is not a registration in the program. Registration is made only after approval of application and upon receipt of deposit. Please return this form with $150 deposit to:

Stress: Harnessing Its Energy for Health

Keynote Scholars: Hans Selye, MD &
Meyer Friedman, MD

Program Leaders
Hughes Andrus, MD
Philip Mac, MD
Janet Mentink, FNP
Robert Nadeau
Mary O'Hara-Devereaux, FNP, PhD
Julian Silverman, PhD

A conference on improving the quality of care of your patients—AND you.

Co-sponsored by The Foundation for Comprehensive Health Services and Esalen Institute

This conference, led by two internationally known experts on stress and a group of highly skilled health professional program leaders, presents an educational emphasis on how we health care providers can better handle stress and how that might directly affect both us and our patients. The program combines a series of technical scholarly presentations on aspects of stress management with a unique experiential learning format, developed by a team of health care educators at Stanford University and the University of California/Davis Medical School's Department of Family Medicine.

Program topics to covered by the conference faculty include:
— Learning to utilize stress to facilitate self-composure
— Teaching specifics of self-care and stress tolerance
— Attitudes, belief systems, and stress tolerance
— Who's responsible for patients' health? — Re-educating patients and health professionals
— Iatrogenic disease: causes, treatments, cures
— Body awareness, bio-feedback, and attention
— Personality types and stress tolerance: do we have control over whether we are type A or type B?
— Re-viewing the physiology of stress — general effects, individual differences
— The brain and human values: cause and effect
— Stress and identity.

Nurses and physicians will receive 30 hours of continuing education credit. $550

Required deposit: $150.
For scholarship information write to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920, or phone (408) 667-2335.

September 30 - October 26

Energy: Physical, Emotional and Spiritual
Stanislav & Christina Grof

A four-week interdisciplinary program for professionals and students in the areas of psychiatry, psychology, general medicine, anthropology, physics, philosophy, and religion. This workshop will focus on various manifestations of energy and on techniques of channeling them for the purpose of self-exploration and spiritual growth. Special attention will be paid to the problems of interrelations between consciousness, energy and matter. The program will cover three thematic areas:

1. Ancient Spiritual Systems and Techniques of Dealing with Energy. We will explore, theoretically and practically, Tantric art and ritual, the Tibetan vajrayana, kundalini yoga, Agni yoga, Basque mysticism, astrology and alchemy.

2. Consciousness Research and Modern Physics. We will focus on revolutionary findings from experiential psycho-therapy, psychedelic research, parapsychology, anthropology and modern physics. The controversies about the pioneering research of Wilhelm Reich will be reviewed by his prominent former co-worker, Bernard Grad. Special sessions will be dedicated to the striking convergence between mysticism, consciousness research, and modern physics.

3. Self-Exploration and Group Process. The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with personal experience. Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators of an ongoing process of intrapsychic and interpersonal exploration of the participants throughout the program. In this context, we will use gestalt practice, encounter, neo-reichian approaches, dance, fantasy exercises with music, mandala drawing, psychosynthesis, and different forms of body work. $1200

Thinking Body/Moving Mind/Understanding Heart
Betty Fuller

Movement is a primary means to learning: learning about one's self, one's relationship to others, one's place in the universe. Happy side effects of such learning can include an enriched and enhanced self image and spontaneous and appropriate self expression along with greatly reduced stress, friction, tension, and effort. The workshop includes trager and feldenkrais body-mind approaches, guided imagery, simple meditations, and massage at the baths. Feelings, encounters, understanding, and realizations generated in the workshop may be shared and processed in the group. $280

Autumn Changes / Deborah Medow

From Stress to High Level Wellness
Preventing Burn-Out in the Helping Professions
John Travis, Joy Holloway & Barbara McNeill

An experiential approach to high level wellness. Learn what high level wellness is about. We will assist you in developing skills in the areas of self-responsibility, stress control, nutrition and physical activity, and in promoting the excellence and vitality which are synonymous with optimum health. We will create our own wellness plans and, through personal experience, learn the importance of self-responsibility in active health and well-being. We will also encourage the shifting of beliefs towards a new paradigm—one in which we are no longer rescuing patients, clients, friends from disease, but rather teaching self-responsibility by our personal examples. $120

The Gazebo: An Alternative Education
Janet Lederman

The Gazebo is a model for restructuring educational systems, both physically and philosophically. It is a new concept of "school," involving the inviting of children back into society, the integration of generations, and the re-introduction of life into the content of learning.

The workshop will be both didactic and experiential. We will investigate alternative ways of financing education and plan ways to revitalize neighborhoods as viable teaching resources by generating community involvement. The form, structure, and activities of the Gazebo will be available to participants. So far our youngest student is 9 months old and our oldest is 75. Esalen's Gazebo is more than an idea. It is an actuality. Limited to 12 participants. $120

Week of October 7-12

Five Days with Jack Rosenberg

My current focus in on enjoying life to the fullest and bringing the clearest expression of my self to each moment. Many people describe what I do as gestalt body work with a transpersonal bend.

During the workshop we will cover many aspects of my energetic approach to sexuality as well as working with the body energy field and the belief system which keeps us locked in obsolete behavior patterns. Where you are is where we will start. $280

Hughes Andrus & Mary O'Hara-Devereaux

This workshop focuses on our behavior as health care practitioners and how this behavior affects our own health as well as the health of our patients. It emphasizes:

Self-responsibility for each practioner's health;

Techniques for enhancing the sensitivity of practitioners in ways which make them more "tuned-in" to each patient-consumer;

Caring and being careful—applying sound judgment and knowledge in relation to patients and simultaneously not taking health-care responsibility away from patients.

We will use methods of self-discovery derived from psychosynthesis, gestalt, meditation, and other systems, in addition to lecture and discussion on the several themes surrounding self care. Each participant will have an opportunity to make an assessment of their own health status and consider changes for themselves and changes in their clinical practice styles.

Nurses and physicians will receive 30 hours of continuing education credits. $280

The Feeling Process / Janet Zuckerman

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feelings from thoughts—sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $280

Weekend of October 12-14

Music, Dance & Celebration / Emmett Miller

In cultures less dominated by technology than ours, music, dance, and celebration are not spectator sports, but are used together with "trance" states by everyone present, for physical, emotional and spiritual health, for release of tension from mind and body, for enjoyment and ecstasy, and for interpersonal and transpersonal communication.

We will leave the "cultural trance" and develop our own, explore it in stillness and in movement, in silence and in sound. Chanting, music, massage, singing, and drumming; a time of joy, celebration and sharing. $120

Astrology: A Map of the Psyche / Robert Hand

Carl Jung once stated that astrology contained within its teachings the sum total of the psychological knowledge of the ancients. The point of this workshop will be to show the validity of this statement expressed in modern terms.

Many people have tried to make astrology fit into various systems of modern psychology. Here we will explore the extent to which astrology is, in itself, a complete system of psychology, which makes its own statements about human nature, and which suggests rather surprising consequences for ideas of human life and behavior.

Little or no previous knowledge of astrology will be required in this workshop. We will be concerned largely with the symbolism and its psychological import, not especially with the techniques of horoscope analysis. Any material of a technical nature that is needed in the workshop will be introduced as we go along. $120

Being Together, Being Ourselves / Paul Rebillot

". . . Let there be spaces in your togetherness and let the winds of the heavens dance between you."

—Kahlil Gibran, The Prophet

Laughing and crying, dancing and touching, we will come together for a weekend of improvisation and play. Gestalt process and theater games will help us to open doors to new ways of being together while being ourselves. We will explore the delicate balance of communication and separateness, of closeness and distance in our relationships with one another. $120

EXPERIENCING ESALEN

Experiencing Esalen Staff
Coordinated by Janet Zuckerman & Joan Fiore

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificence of the Big Sur coast.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls) and Anger and the Rocking Chair (Lederman).

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop
Dale Cummings, Siri Mishler & Merri Goldenson

For workshop description see page 23. $310

Family Circles / Paul Rebillot

"If you get rid of the pain before you have answered its questions, you get rid of the self along with it."

—C. G. Jung

In order to survive and win approval in our childhood situations, most of us had to develop an "act"—a set of acceptable behaviors that required the painful suppression of our own spontaneous energies. The first step toward recovery of the authentic self is to purge ourselves of the inhibiting programs delivered to us in childhood. Family Circles offers a safe, supportive environment in which to answer the questions of our childhood inhibitions and finally destroy them through dramatic ritual action. Through a process of reparenting by ideal parents, psychodynamically enacted, we then create for ourselves the childhood of our heart's desire. $280

Symbols of Transformation
Ralph Metzner & Angie Arrien

This seminar is an intensive experiential study of symbols as tools of personal growth. Symbols can expand one's perception of self and others, increase insight, and stimulate new areas of self-expression and creativity. We will consider a variety of symbols: psychologically, as archetypes of individuation, and cross-culturally, as universal constants. The symbols to be studied and experienced include: sun and moon, trees, flowers, circles/wheels/mandalas, totem animals, light and fire, the elements, sacred mountains, the body and its parts, the journey/path, and others. Some of the sources of symbolism that we will draw on are astrology, alchemy, the tarot, mythology, and folklore of all cultures. Special attention will be given to the uses and significance of symbols in dreams, art, and the helping professions. Special symbolic creative projects will be part of the seminar. $280

Weekend of October 19-21

Inner Road to Health: A Weekend Primer on Alternative Health Systems
Al Drucker

This workshop is intended as a first short introduction to some of the approaches of holistic health, which are currently gaining favor as natural alternatives to the more orthodox medical practices dominating the health field in this country. Included will be such diverse topics as herbs, flowers, acupuncture, iridology, homeopathy, rolfing, diet, etc. Early morning sessions will be devoted to chanting and meditation followed by yoga or tai chi. We will also schedule an afternoon massage session with herbal bath for which we pick our own herbs. Meals will be largely organic and natural, much of the produce coming from our own garden. $120

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 17. $110

Dream Discovery / Joyce Frazee

"A dream that is not understood is like a letter that is not opened."
—Talmud

Each night we receive brilliant, insightful, creative communiques disguised in poetic imagery. In this workshop we will explore how to use our dreams for personal growth, insight, creativity, and problem solving. Participants will discover that any dream, however fragmentary or prosaic, can offer entry to a new world of insight. Methods for dream discovery will include exercises in dream recall, Senoi dream practices, mandala drawing, gestalt dream work, and psychosynthesis. $120

Westerbeke Ranch Program

October 19-21

Hypnosis & Parapsychology / Lee Pulos

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lectures explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $120

This program sponsored by Esalen will be held at the Westerbeke Ranch in Sonoma County, an hour's drive north of San Francisco. Full payment is due five days in advance of the beginning of the program. Send reservation and payment direct to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

Week of October 21-26

Dream Consciousness and the Experience of Death: Ancient and Modern Approaches
Tarab Tulku Rinpoche & Leo Matos

In this seminar we will explore a variety of approaches to the phenomena encountered in dreams and their relationship to the experience of death. The methods used in the Tibetan Tantric tradition will be complemented by and compared with the dream work developed by the Senoi of Malaysia, North American Indians, and Western depth psychology (Freud's psychoanalysis, Jung's analytical psychology, and Fritz Perls' gestalt practice). We will also use experiential techniques developed by the two of us for examining various levels of dream consciousness and their relationship to the experience of death and the death-rebirth process. Special attention will be paid to the importance of these areas for the practice of meditation. $280

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be
David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $280

Gestalt Practice
Christine Price & the Esalen Gestalt Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear–
And used–is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c. 2500

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Paricipants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is enfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure or accomplishment.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J. C. Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach). $280

Weekend of October 26-28

God, Sexual Energy & Your Body / Gabrielle Roth

"When sex comes from the physical center, it is a necessity. When it comes from the mental center, it is a fantasy. When sex comes from the heart center, it is a deep, total, and profound experience of our own divinity. Sex is meaningless without the heart."

The purpose of this workshop is to heal the separation between our divinity and our sexuality as it exists in our consciousness, attitudes, and actions. This weekend will include breathing, movement, music, sound, and massage meditation. We will come together to dance, to sing, to worship, to cry—to celebrate our vulnerability and our strength, our heights and our depths. Gabrielle will support us in going within ourselves to rediscover the magnitude of our own heart energy, thus infusing our sexuality, and our entire life experience, with depth and purpose. $120

The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples
David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery as well as gestalt awareness techniques. $120 per person.

Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

The members of the massage staff, each with their own unique style, will give instruction and help the group to practice basic techniques of massage upon one another: sensory awareness, deep muscular massage, joint articulation, polarity. As we learn to feel with our hands how the body and the life-force within it works, we learn to release tensions in others and to be more fully aware of ourselves.

The group meets daily in the mineral baths. $120

October 28—November 23

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth

(A four-week internship program for personal & professional growth)

David Schiffman, Elisa Lodge & Esalen Staff

Over the years Esalen has functioned as a major clearing house for a wide variety of approaches and means for facilitating personal evolution and expression. One's journey could begin with any realm—mental, physical, emotional, or transpersonal—each path serving to create a wealth of information and energetic access.

What are the common experiential and conceptual threads that underlie each of these paths? How can these threads of experience be best woven together to create a fabric whose qualities are simultaneously exquisite in their delicacy while still remaining strong enough to sustain the wear and tear of worldly existence? And how best might this very personal process of self-discovery and integration be taught and shared with others?

The exploration and resolution of these and other basic questions pertaining to the process of change and growth will serve as the basis of our work together during this month long institute program.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own ability, style, and artfulness both as individual guide and group facilitator, as well as to do in-depth personal work and training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthetic techniques, and the meditative arts.

The program will be structured to include: intensive individual work, supervised observations, practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills, video feedback, illustrated lectures and didactic theoretical sessions. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective linking human potential practices with traditional psychological and counseling modalities. $1200

Week of October 28-November 2

A Psychic Training Program / Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $280

Cycles / Gabrielle Roth

This is a five day moving center ritual designed to inspire and channel the religious, sexual and creative aspects of life energy into unity and expression. Through movement, sound, music, and writing meditations, we will explore and present our unique experiences of life's waves, rhythms and cycles. The moving center tools are designed to release our gifts, talents, and potentials to be the most of who we are. $280

Weekend of November 2-4

Heal Thy Self: A Workshop for Health Professionals
Hughes Andrus & Mary O'Hara-Devereaux

For workshop description see October 7-12. $120

Experiencing Esalen / Experience Esalen Staff

Bodymind Health, Fitness, and Wellbeing
Ken Dychtwald

The converging fields of holistic health, psychotherapy, human potential research, and physical fitness have given birth to a variety of practices and philosophies that suggest a new image of the human bodymind and its developmental potentials. Inherent in this approach to well-being and personal growth is a deep appreciation for the unity of mind and body, an emphasis on preventive education and health care, and the realization that growth, exercise, self-awareness, and meaningful interpersonal involvement are necessary ingredients in the healthy lifestyle.

In this workshop, using lecture, demonstration, massage instruction, and a variety of bodymind awareness exercises, special emphasis will be placed on learning how to understand the many ways in which the body and mind interact. Recommended reading prior to workshop: Bodymind by Ken Dychtwald. $120

Week of November 4-9

A Movement Approach to Individual Growth and Group Process / Mangrove

Mangrove is a community and performance collective of seven men from San Francisco. We work in an improvisational life process originating in organic movement flow.

We begin with our most basic dances of lying, sitting, standing, walking, and running. Each person explores the dynamics of his moving/thinking body in relation to balance, momentum, and gravity. We use the tools of nonverbal communication: the dynamics of pressure, immediate responsiveness, and the give and take of weight. To play with each other in the present moment, we let go of expectations, projections, and static images of ourselves.

This everchanging dance constantly asks for our presence and support, physically, emotionally, and spiritually. We dance alone, in pairs, and as a group, and we use voice and music to support and extend the contact improvisation. $280

Un-Covering Creative Energy / Myrtle Franklin

As children we were closer to the source of our creativity and were free enough to express it informally. Over the years we gradually found barriers to inhibit it. Now, through various awareness exercises, we can un-cover and express this energy through whatever medium is naturally our own: sound, color, writing, movement. We will focus on the process of expression-appreciation. $280

The Feeling Process / Janet Zuckerman

For workshop description see October 7-12 $280

Weekend of November 9-11

Aikido Weekend / Robert Nadeau

We'll use the Japanese art of aikido to experience centering and energy awareness. This form will help make tangible, through physical movement, our relationship with the energy available to us and give direction for its use in daily life. Wear loose clothing. $120

Reichian Gestalt: A Workshop for Contact & Release
Laura DeNuccio

This weekend provides a safe environment to consciously experience our rhythm and expression through our own unfolding process—physically, emotionally, and energetically. There will be opportunities to contact how little or how much we hold ourselves back or let ourselves go. Through the awareness continuum we can witness our process and contact what is in each of us.

Utilizing reichian emotional release, gestalt practice, bioenergetics, feldenkrais, massage, reflexology, dance, meditation, and various other bodymind approaches, we can move toward expanding our capacity for trust and fulfillment. $120

Massage and Health Practice
Esalen Massage Staff & Guest Teachers

Esalen's massage staff is offering this workshop in order to share various health practices centering around and embellishing the work we do. The focus is on you and on helping you to develop a good, solid home health program while you are with us.

We will work experientially with tools that will help you to develop your own personal health awareness, maintenance, and enrichment, and which will offer you a sense of how to share this work when you return home.

We will be exploring different forms of diet, body work, meditation, exercise programs, yoga, use of herbs indigenous to the area, polarity, energy balancing, acupressure, and the use of movement as a way to free and express vital life energies. Please feel free to bring musical instruments. $120

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

This workshop will include massage and dancing, exploring the rituals of Black disco dancing in contemporary American society. High-low energy, sensual and sexual, rhythm and syncopation, hand clapping, foot stomping, using African drums, we will use our voices and recorded popular Black music. $120

Knowing Thyself: An Existential Self-Esteem Workshop
Galvin Jackson & John Alston

We will focus on learning positive ways of thinking about ourselves and practice communicating more openly, spontaneously, and genuinely, from a position of strength and self-acceptance. We will experiment with alternative ways of presenting ourselves to the world, letting go of self-defeating behavior patterns. Exercises will be introduced to help us to experience ourselves and others in a more positive light. One group session will be a massage class. $120

Exorcising the Demon "Should" / Paul Rebillot

Within each of us there lives a demon—our own personalized critic whose greatest joy seems to be to criticize, denigrate, and destroy every experience we have. We're either too fat or too thin, and when we fall in love we're never good enough. This demon who commands us to be who we aren't in order to satisfy someone we can never satisfy is the demon that we will seek to exorcise during this weekend.

What if you actually tried to be everything you think you should be? We will build up that image, helped along by our own sense of humor, and then act it out as fully as we possibly can. We'll contrast that with the experience of ourselves as we are spontaneously, simply allowing whatever happens in similar situations.

With the help of this experience in contrasts, we will explore our possibilities of movement between the two, and in this way open up our options to the full range of our own authentic being. $120

Week of November 11-16

Experiencing the Esalen Garden
Sherry Ackerson, Steven Harper, & the Esalen Garden

The focus of this workshop will be the experience of nurturing and being nurtured by the earth and her plant life. During the day, specific methods for gardening, including plantings, bed preparations, and composting, will be taught. We will also learn the healing aspects of herbs, and enjoy an herbal bath. Our evenings will include guided fantasy, meditation, drawings, and movement. Come and celebrate the gentle dance of earth, air, sunlight, water, and our bodies in our year-round organic vegetable garden.

Since much emphasis is on experiencing what we learn, make sure to bring overalls and workboots. $280

Five-day Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

An introduction to the language of the body, this course will attempt to view the human interior through various windows: yoga, feldenkrais, movement, demonstration and work sessions, and evening lectures and discussions. Every major portion of the body will be given detailed attention, and your instructors will acquaint you with their individualized styles. In the morning and afternoon practice sessions the focus will be on your integrating this information in your own manner and evolving your own style of working with the body. Our intent is not to teach you to imitate, but to help you learn to become effective; the rest you will teach yourselves. $280

Opening the Feelings: A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop
Renan Sercarz, Joe Freeman, & Merri Goldenson

For workshop description see page 23. $310

Week of November 18-23

Death and Resurrection / Paul Rebillot

This workshop offers the opportunity to experience, rather than avoid, one of life's most real situations and its only inevitability: your own death. On a wider scale, it explores ways to move creatively through life's many transitions, letting go of the old and welcoming the new.

We will prepare to experience our deaths by reviewing our lives, completing unfinished business, writing wills. We will plan and celebrate our own funerals. Attachments to persons, things, and self-images are gradually severed until, surrendering all to the ultimate unknown, we are able to experience the birth of the truly new. Reborn, we can begin to create a new life the way we want it. $280

Body-Feelings-Consciousness / Clair Killen

This will be a full participation, experiential week. It is based on Clair Killen's extensive radix group work. The workshop will be limited to 12 individuals joining in a non-confrontive program of movement and body work, and allowing opening of deep feelings. Each time we witness and experience what is real for us about our bodies, our self-esteem, and the ways we control our lives, we extend our consciousness. $280

Weekend of November 23-25

Health Practices for the New Age
Polly Kirby with Julian Silverman

This workshop will give an overview of the new age health practices, including alternative healing modes, that are presently being integrated into the Western medical model. An atmosphere where participants can examine their own healing modes and discover new alternatives for themselves and others will be created. The workshop will focus on connecting with oneself and others and using this connection in one's own health care work. Nurses and physicians will receive 10 hours of continuing education credit. $120

Let Go/Let Be / Betty Fuller

This workshop will include physical and mental clearing, communication and stress reduction exercises, guided imagery, simple meditations, and body methods such as feldenkrais, trager, and massage. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual follows-up will be presented. The workshop schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths. $120

The Feeling Process / Janet Zuckerman

For workshop description see November 4-9. $120

Week of November 25-30

Esalen Staff Week.

We will have no public programs during this period.

Weekend of November 30-December 2

Awakening the Magician Within / Emmett Miller

Whether or not we have as yet learned it, there is a magician within each of us. His magic wand is belief. If we believe we are sick, we are sick; if we believe we are stuck, we are stuck. But all coins, even magic ones, have two sides. If we believe we are growing stronger every day, we are; if we believe in our creativity, our problems joyfully solve themselves. In this seminar we will investigate experientially and discover what truth there is in each of these statements for us, individually. Our explorations will be experiential, using deep relaxation, visualization, music, movement, and selective awareness. $120

Going Beyond Jogging / Mike Spino

This workshop will expand your running ability and pleasure. In it you will be introduced to various gaits and tempos and styles of motion practiced by world class runners, breathing patterns and relaxation techniques that remove body fatigue and strain, yoga-based stretching exercises and muscle/skeletal exercises that reduce chances of injury and increase performance, meditation techniques, Eastern philosophy and energy systems, visualization utilizing images which enhance physical abilities and increase running performance, sports physiology including preventive health approaches, the latest cardiovascular research, and nutrition. $120

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 17. $110

The Integrated Mind / Janet Lederman

Learning and attention contract, as does the ability to deal with frustration and struggle, when the environment threatens the nervous system. Through the Gazebo experience it is possible to be present for content learning in a way that doesn't occur in the usual educational environment. Within the context of this workshop you can increase and expand your intelligence beyond the crisis of your education, through a balanced and spontaneous use of stereophonic brain power. This is an experiential workshop. $120

(formerly Interscience Workshops)

Opening the Feelings

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this series of workshops which employ neo-reichian techniques of emotional release. The Radix Intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, is practiced by Charles and Erica Kelley and their staff at the Radix Institute. The intensive, like other neo-reichian techniques used in these workshops, grew from the discovery by Charles Kelley's teacher, Wilhelm Reich, of the way in which feeling is rooted in the flow of energy in the body, and is blocked by chronic muscular contractions which Reich called the muscular armor. Freeing the armor enables the student to open feeling that is buried and to soften and free feeling that is too strong and has been held in for fear of explosion. In these workshops armor is softened by simultaneous work on the character and body, using techniques not only from Reich, but also from bioenergetics, sensory awareness, and other body-oriented approaches. The participant/teacher ratio is kept small, never more than 10/1. Each weekend participant who wishes will receive an Intensive, while 5-day workshop participants receive two. By meeting sometimes in small groups and sometimes together in large groups, Radix combines the intimacy and individual attention of the small group with the energy and dynamism of the large. Grief or pain, fear, and rage that have been held in since childhood emerge in these workshops. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he/she discovers a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience changes profoundly as tender and sexual feelings for the mate intensify and merge.

SCHEDULE:

October 14-19 — Dale Cummings, Siri Mishler, & Merri Goldenson

November 11-16 — Renan Sercarz, Joe Freeman, & Merri Goldenson

December 9-14 — Merri Goldenson, David Silverstein, & Laura Kay

Week of December 2-7

Positive Resistance / Beverly Silverman

In the human potential movement we have come to think of resistance as a negative quality, something to do something about—get rid of. Resistance for most of us has served a useful protective purpose and also balanced physical resistance is a way of experiencing positive energy in the system. Learn to contact your resistance and salute it. If it is obsolete and gets in your way you can say goodbye to it. If it serves a useful purpose you can learn how to use it. $280

Coming Home: An Invitation to Remember Your Self
Laura DeNuccio & Daniel Bianchetta

Providing a safe environment for you to be holy/wholly who you are, we will begin with deep emotional release work, continuing then to the subtler realms of energy and intuitive awareness, exploring, experiencing, and expanding Self. Our complementary approaches:

neo-reichian work	intuitive awareness movement	meditation
gestalt	play
t'ai chi	aikido

massage

$280

The Spiritual Path: Promises and Pitfalls
Stanislav & Christina Grof

We will combine observations from modern consciousness research and from various traditional practices to explore the process of spiritual awakening. The participants will have the opportunity to confront transpersonal areas within themselves in various experiential exercises, combining evocative slide-shows, music, controlled breathing, mandala drawing, and individual work if appropriate. Special attention will be paid to the understanding of and approach to "spiritual emergencies" which can occur in the context of the kundalini process and other forms of personal evolution. $280

Mike Spino's Mind/Body Running Program

This workshop is designed for individual development of a mind/body practice focused on the running experience. It will include and integrate the practices mentioned in Going Beyond Jogging, November 30 - December 2, into a holistic personal program. Each person will leave with a 6 week training program for distance running excellence, designed for beginners or recreational runners at all levels of fitness. The book Mike Spino's Mind/Body Running Program, by Mike Spino and Jeffrey Earl Warren, is recommended reading. $280

Week of December 9-14

Opening the Feelings:
A Neo-Reichian Radix Workshop
Merri Goldenson, David Silverstein, & Laura Kay

For workshop description see this page. $310

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom To Be
David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

For workshop description see October 21-26. $280

DECEMBER 9-21

Gestalt Practice / Christine Price, Joan Fiore & the Esalen Gestalt Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear–
and used–is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu c 2500 BC

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, and growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment. The second half of this program will have participants working primarily with each other, relating whatever is being learned (or unlearned) to the development of their own styles. Thus this program might be especially useful to those wishing to utilize a gestalt approach in their professions (e.g. counselors, teachers, ministers, mothers, doctors and nurses).

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J. C. Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach). $680

Weekend of December 7-9

Energy Awareness & the Crystalline State
George Leonard

In the crystalline state, there is no expectation nor any prejudgment. Concentration on the past and future gives way to primary focus on the present. Action taken while in the crystalline state is not considered action but rather appropriate action. When fully achieved, this state permits you to experience the harmony and connectedness of all existence. This energy awareness workshop will emphasize the crystalline state as described in George Leonard's latest book, The Silent Pulse: A Search for the Perfect Rhythm that Exists in Each of Us, and will also involve centering, balancing, and stress reduction. $120

Exploring Self-Acceptance
David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self-concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter methods, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $120

From Stress to High Level Wellness
Preventing Burn-Out in the Helping Professions
John Travis, Joy Holloway, & Barbara McNeill

For workshop description see October 5-7. $120

Weekend of December 14-16

States of Awareness, Shifts of Identity
Robert Nadeau

Who are we really?

On a "bad day" we approach life feeling anxious, incompetent, unloved, unloving—basically negative and small. At other times we're like a different person—calm, squared away, loving, open. And then there are those extraordinary moments of opening to larger, finer dimensions where we experience the oneness, the totality of our philosophies.

These are shifts of identity, and the shifting process is a natural one. But most of us stumble from identity to identity, getting "stuck" in smaller states and only rarely touching finer ones.

In this workshop we'll experience the shifting process and learn to apply it to our jobs, our relationships, the ordinary and extraordinary times in our lives. We'll use meditation, imagery, centering, and body movement. $120

Weekend Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

We will assist you in acquiring the basic tools you will need to begin to explore massage. By demonstrating for you and practicing with you it is our intent to introduce you to the major muscle sets of the body and to help you to establish a sense of an effective beginning, development, and closing of a full-body massage. Emphases will be on our own grounding and internal awareness, on learning to recognize the areas in ourselves and others that need relief, and on learning to be aware of the quality of our own touch. $120

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 17. $110

Week of December 16-21

Awareness & Freedom Through Feldenkrais Method & Dance
Ruthy Alon & Nitza Broide Miller

This workshop is for people who are willing to expand their patterns of movement and dance for improving their feeling of well being in body and spirit.

The group will experience many feldenkrais processes that are like the grammar of spontaneity. In meditative exploration through various options, you will have an opportunity to restore organic motions, coordination, and grace.

A natural flow of motion will facilitate relaxation and images. Through effortless movement and dance we'll let our images be restored and create a dance, allowing our body to free itself gently from old patterns. We'll learn to release tensions through movement and change postures that were created as a result of inhibited expressions within our environment.

We'll relearn the natural fluency, reviewing the primal evolution of the developing baby—enjoying its body sensations and pleasures, and its relationships to others through dance. $280

Gestalt Workshop / Marty Fromm

This workshop is designed for professionals who are interested in further personal growth and professional training in the practice of gestalt, as well as for others who are simply interested in their own personal growth through gestalt. While the sessions will be mostly experiential, ample time will be provided for didactic sessions of theory and practice.

The focus is on awareness: the discovery of what is, rather than on what was, might be, or should be. We will concentrate on "how and now" rather than on "why and because" of past and future, and will attend to body language and feelings. $280

Esalen Massage Staff and Guest Teachers

For workshop description see November 9-11. $280.

Weekend of December 21-23

"Seeing" the World / Benj Langdon

"Drink liquid lightning from the sacred river while it is before you. Don't miss a drop. No one sees it twice."
—Minor White

"We don't know who discovered water, but we're certain it wasn't a fish."
—John Culkin

The natural state of man is ecstatic wonder. We all experienced the perceptual innocence of childhood and its joyful unity with the world. Then, as we learned to name and manipulate concepts of things "out there," we erected verbal barriers between ourselves and direct experience.

In this workshop, we will play with ways of letting go of the verbal chatter and tensions that impoverish our perceptions, through breathing, movement, massage, and visual meditations to rediscover the paradise that surrounds us. $120

The winter solstice is a time for restful introspection as the earth's outer darkness allows the inner sun of the soul to regenerate and find expression. Traditional cultures the world over have rested, fasted, and feasted during this time of the year in celebration of the turning point, the cyclic return.

We will join together to create our own ritual and pageant. Using a variety of practices, such as gestalt, guided fantasy, movement, massage, and more, we will integrate our personal rituals into a group presentation. $120

Thinking Body/Moving Mind/Understanding Heart
Betty Fuller

For workshop description see September 30-October 5. $120

Week of December 23-28

Re-New You / Deborah Medow

The old year dies;
a new one is born.
The old patterns break;
new ones are formed.
A time of change and growth,
A time for renewal. yoga massage theatre dance rhythms flowing moving trance.
$280

Christmas Present / Paul Rebillot & Richard Horan

"It is not pots we are forming but ourselves."
—M. C. Richards, The Crossing Point

Following the process of the ancient art of raku pottery we will create raku sculptures as the unifying symbol of the workshop. Each afternoon we will meet with Richard Horan in the barn at Esalen. As we shape, dry, glaze, fire, and use our sculptures, we will, through gestalt and other disciplines, experience these same processes in relation to our own personal transformation. How do we form ourselves? How do we cleanse ourselves, rid ourselves of excess moisture—tears and other emotions, especially around Christmas? How do we decorate ourselves? What risks are we willing to take? And how does the fire of our being influence that form we've made of ourselves?

Our raku pieces will symbolize the present we are making of ourselves and for ourselves for Christmas. In our sculptures, as in ourselves, we will seek to complete the business of the closing year by giving it a form that will also serve to focus and direct our energies into the new year. $280

'Tis the seaon for year-end accounting—body, mind and spirit; for weeding self-negating weed beliefs and planting self expanding and self enhancing seed beliefs; for awareness through feldenkrais, trager, gestalt, and massage; for clearing emotional log jams to give free rein to choice and self-response-ability; for balance and energy in the fine-tuning of bodymind to the power of "the Force" through guided imagery, meditation, music, dance and laughter. Rejoice! Bring musical instruments. $280

December 28-January 4

Gestalt Synergy: An Integrative Approach to Self Actualization
Ilana Rubenfeld

The sea always has waves . . . waves are the sea . . . sea and waves are one. To speak of waves apart from the sea is a delusion–so mind and body are one!

The focus in this workshop will be on experiencing one's own body and emotions as a total organism. Emotions and memories are often stored in our bodies, resulting in tension and imbalance. A unique blend of gestalt, alexander technique, and feldenkrais exercises will be used as a gateway to contacting, expressing, and working through deep feelings. Massage staff will be on hand to assist the workshop.

We have the choice to contact ourselves and each other with joy, sadness, compassion, humor, ideas, and with the body—the whole person. $400

Weekend of December 28-30

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body / Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact, and nurturing, sensitive giving and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean, and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $120

Your Human Energy System / Alan Schwartz

Read the weeklong description (December 30-January 4). This will be a weekend to explore and understand our individual energy systems and their relation to how we both make contact and inhibit contact. One focus will be on integration via energy release techniques. Another will be on the simple task of being present, physiologically and emotionally, being aware that contact refers to our consistent awareness process and the autonomous expression of who we are. $120

Risking Close Encounters at the Eleventh Hour: An Experiment in Meeting & Contacting Other Human Beings / Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

In these last hours of 1979, this workshop provides an opportunity for you to pay attention to the quality of your interpersonal contact, particularly to your willingness to take risks and to your ability to stay true to your own feelings while meeting and contacting others.

You may discover your own rhythm of contact and withdrawal; you may discover how you sabotage yourself from having more satisfying relationships; you may discover you're getting exactly what you want from your relationships. You may discover anything; you may discover nothing. You may discover how to give yourself a happy new year. You may even discover that you're in charge. $120

Week of December 30-January 4

Gestalt, Bioenergy & Human Contact
Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $280

Shamanism & Survival in the Twentieth Century
Joan Halifax & Prem Das

For five days we will explore the potentials of ancient healing practices and their value for people living in the transindustrial age; the world wide context of shamanism; rituals, ceremonies, and belief systems of shamanic peoples; and the holistic approach of visionary healers in relation to contemporary health care. We will work with chants and resonances, the body in relation to nature, herbs, power objects, natural power spots, dream techniques, and astrology. On the 31st of December, the last day of the year, there will be a gentle ceremony to celebrate cosmic and personal renewals. Recommended reading: Shamanic Voices (E. P. Dutton) by Joan Halifax. $280

Clearing the Slate for a New Decade: A Reichian/Gestalt Intensive
Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

In this five-day period in which 1979 comes to an end and the 1980's begin, this workshop provides the time and the space to take stock of the past decade(s)—its bitters and its sweets—to indulge in nostalgia and to finally come to terms with our business of the past and to release the energy we've locked there, so that we can move on, truly new, to the new years ahead. We'll take some time to explore how our fantasies for our futures might actually affect our futures, some time to celebrate, some time to re-create, some time to charge and discharge, and lots of time to contact ourselves and each other. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. $280

Weekend of January 4-6

Getting Your Act Together / Nancy Lunney

All the world's a stage and the current production can be a soap opera, musical comedy, tragedy, or three-ring circus. Since we choose our parts, finding new ways to express ourselves can open up a variety of options on how to play our lives. Using gestalt, music, drawing, and movement in a non-judgmental environment, we will explore getting our "act" together. No special talent or previous group experience is necessary. $120

Self-Awareness & Health Practices For Professionals
Janet Mentink & Philip Mac

This workshop for health care professionals will include both didactic and experiential aspects emphasizing experiential learning about body/mind relationships, body awareness, and self awareness. Massage, centering, and visual imagery will be included so that the group can experience enthusiasm and support for change and self growth.

The workshop will allow "helpers" to explore previous decisions and concepts, about themselves as helping professionals, and in the areas of health and dis-ease and self care. Aspects of self awareness and re-decisioning may be used to enhance personal and professional well being. $120

In this experiential workshop you will participate in guided processes of organic motions from the feldenkrais method, awareness through movement.

In a supportive space, free of rightness or effort, you will explore a variety of alternative movement options, meditate on their inner qualities, and nurture your body intelligence to choose more gratifying ways of day to day functioning, like enjoying lightness and grace in your moving, tuning into your personal rhythm, coordinating your organism to avoid pain, and allowing sex to flow effortlessly.

In the early mornings, a special out of doors experience will be extended to link the grammar of explorations with your spontaneity, through a ritual of 12 swinging natural motions inspired by the need to move and celebrate liveliness in the fresh Esalen air overlooking the ocean. $120

Shamanism and the Mystic Quest / Joan Halifax

"It is one, it is a unity, it is ourselves."
—Ramon Medina Silva

The archaic sacred traditions that have given access to the body, mind, and spirit—the totality of the human organism in relation to the cosmos—need to be recognized, remembered, and reconciled within our psyche and present culture in order to bring about an abundant lifeway of the future. We will explore ancient and contemporary rituals and mythologies through maps of proto-historical transformative rites, the poetry and art of mystics and visionaries, and religious traditions from shamanism to Buddhism. There will be slide-illustrated lectures, films, and direct experiential work to facilitate our exploration.

Experiencing Esalen for Health Care Professionals
Coordinated by Jay Kaplan, MD

This workshop is designed for health care professionals who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on experiencing a variety of approaches to self awareness and self care. Some of the following experiences will be available: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, rolfing, feldenkrais, yoga, polarity massage and shiatsu. Nurses and physicians will earn continuing education units. $280

Giant Dancing Steps Toward an Ecology of Body/Mind and Nature
Gregory Bateson & Al Huang

Gregory and Al Chung-liang wish to share the joy and excitement that they have been exploring in transforming "mental process" into dancing motifs ("the pattern which connects" as in t'ai chi) and back to the process of organic unity of Body/Mind and Nature. $310

The Feeling Process / Janet Zuckerman

Transformative Science:
A 3-Weekend Series integrated by Saul-Paul Sirag, David Deamer & Michael Murphy

Science is the process of testing the limits of the unknown and pushing those boundaries back. As a result, scientific knowledge transforms us—not only by providing new techniques for getting things done (or generating new problems), but, more importantly, by transforming our view of ourselves in the world.

The purpose of these programs is to experience something of the fundamental work being done in three different areas having great potential for human transformation.

Weekend of January 11-13
Physics: The nature of reality as clarified by Bell's theorem.

Weekend of January 18-20
Social History: The nature of social organization as influenced by scientific and cultural paradigm shifts.

Weekend of January 25-27
Psychology: The nature of human ability as it is extended by transformative practices.

These quite different forces for change can readily provide grounds for speculation on the future of human development, and thus afford the opportunity for an integration of this information with whatever knowledge and wisdom the participant possesses.

In addition to these public seminars, there will be working sessions involving physicists, biochemists, social historians, psychologists, and other scientists who will explore these subjects during the month of January. These private sessions are part of a new program at Esalen Institute to facilitate interdisciplinary discussions and research in areas of emerging significance. Saul-Paul Sirag will be available for tutoring those who participate in the entire series.

Please refer to the dates listed above for further information on the individual weekends.

Weekend of January 11-13

Music, Dance, Trance & Celebration / Nitza Miller

In cultures which are less dominated by technology and industry, music, dance, and celebration are not spectator sports. These activities, along with "trance" states such as meditation, deep relaxation, and hypnosis have been traditionally initiated cross-culturally for physical and emotional balance—release of tension, clearing of the mind, joy and ecstasy, and for interpersonal and transpersonal communication; and everyone participates!

This will be an experiential weekend where participants will be invited to share several deep relaxation ("trance") experiences to help intensify sound and movement and the natural body rhythms.

The lovely sounds of the keyboard, the stirring flute, and the passion of drums will facilitate spontaneous movement to stimulate the evolution of your own body rhythms towards freedom, pleasure, and joy. $120

The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples
David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery as well as gestalt awareness methods. $120 per person

Physics Weekend: Bell's Theorem and the Nature of Reality
Nick Herbert & Saul-Paul Sirag

Quantum theory is universally successful in describing nature at all levels accessible to experiment. However, this comprehensive practical success is accompanied by an unprecedented disagreement as to what quantum theory actually means, and a corresponding confusion as to what sort of reality supports the phenomenal world.

Controversy over the nature of deep reality has been sharpened by Bell's theorem, which proves that any conceivable objective reality underlying the facts of experience must be independent of space and time. Thus either there is no ultimate objective reality, or this reality is more peculiar than we have been led (by ordinary physics) to believe. The impact of Bell's theorem is just beginning to be felt in the world of physics, but it is rather like the situation of the Michelson-Morley experiment, which led to Einstein's theory of relativity. Just what this current controversy in the foundations of physics will lead to is not yet clear, but the various possibilities will be explored in this weekend presentation. $120

For workshop description see page 17. $110

Week of January 13-18

Integrity / David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will, and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength, and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical, and mental potentials and how they affect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others. $280

The Spiritual Path: Promises & Pitfalls
Stanislav & Christina Grof

For workshop description see December 2-7. $280

Living Tao: Ancient Wisdom-Modern Living with Al Chung-liang Huang & Lee Chih-chang

Movement meditation, t'ai chi dancing, philosophical discourse, brush calligraphy, music, and laughter with Al and his mother. $280

Weekend of January 18-20

Personal & Cultural Transformation in the 1980's
Theodore Roszak, William Irwin Thompson & Michael Murphy

This seminar will explore some of the crises and opportunities that face us in the 1980's. Topics for discussion will include: the fundamental connections between lifestyle and consciousness on the one hand and the energy, pollution, and monetary crises; the relationships between personal and social transformation; the excesses (and hopeful new beginnings) of the 1960's and 70's; and contemporary examples of cultural innovation we can learn from. $120

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash

For workshop description see November 16-18. $120

Vision Improvement—Our Willingness to See
Laura DeNuccio

This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and our selves to see. Utilizing reichian deep emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the bates system, nutrition and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience and expand—enabling us to look newly at our selves and our world in which we live. Limited to 12 participants. $120

Week of January 20-25

Gestalt Practice Plus
Christine Price & the Esalen Staff

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure or accomplishment.

Although the major body of this workshop will be gestalt practice, other experiences such as massage and improvisational theatre will be included to encourage inner contact and allow playful forms of expression.

The Tamalpais Experience
Richard Heckler, George Leonard, & Wendy Palmer

Aikido is the most sophisticated of the major martial arts. It is also a means for reducing stress, a guide to solving problems of everyday life, and a way of being in the world. Richard Heckler, George Leonard and Wendy Palmer will present the unique approach to aikido and energy awareness they have developed at their Marin County school, Aikido of Tamalpais. No previous training is needed to experience the essence of the art. $280

Advanced Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

Whether your massage experience is professional or avocational, our aims in this course are to take you deeper into your own work and to provide whatever instruction we can to add to your understanding of the body and to your repertoire of techniques. In addition to morning and afternoon practice sessions with various instructors, we will use yoga, movement, evening lectures and discussions, and demonstrations of specific practices to stimulate ourselves out of our old patterns of working and increase the range of conditions with which we can deal effectively.

The following concerns will receive emphasis: how to sustain your energy through a day of treatments, how to clear yourself of the negative energy released by your client, how to use weight and leverage to your advantage, and so on. As we reach more and more deeply into one another, emotional changes are triggered by the unravelling of blocked muscular energy. As these emotions present themselves, they will provide us with some first-hand practice in productive ways of moving through them.

The format and pace of this course will presume some previous massage experience—at least an introductory five-day intensive or its equivalent in your own practice. $280

The Healing Power of Music & Movement
Emmett Miller

Music has been used for untold centuries by races and cultures throughout the world. It has been used to quicken men's pulses and calm them, to help bring them into the world, and to help deliver them from it; it has been used to promote war and promote love. Life is a dance of body, mind, and emotion seeking spirit. After learning the fundamentals of selective awareness, we will experience the relaxing, healing, and energizing influence of music in the deeply relaxed state of selective awareness and in movement. Tapes will be available for continued work following the weekend. Musicians are invited to bring their instruments. $120

Evolutionary Relationships Between Mind & Body
Michael Murphy, James L. Hickman, & Saul-Paul Sirag

Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman are gathering examples of extraordinary bodily transformations from various fields—from the yogic and contemplative literature, psychiatric records, hypnosis and drug research, sport, the arts, and everyday life—in an attempt to learn more about the range of such changes and the ways in which they happen. In this seminar they will present their work to date and speculate with the participants about the implications of their findings. Two questions for discussion are: (1) Do these bodily changes reveal an evolutionary possibility? (2) How do they relate to notions of "enlightenment"?

Saul-Paul Sirag will discuss the implications of recent work in physics for this research. His discussions will include the relationship of Bell's theorem and David Bohm's explicate-implicate order to certain facts of extraordinary human functioning. $120

Future Workshop Announcements

Workshops of more than one week require special planning for participants. Whenever possible we will announce such workshops well in advance. More detailed descriptions–and any changes– will appear in the catalog covering the period in which the workshop is scheduled.

March, April, and May, 1980

Healing Practices for the New Age Health Practitioner

Al Drucker & Polly Kirby

This workshop will be a three month residential training program for 6-10 health practitioners (nurses, physicians, and other interested parties). Classes will meet 3 days a week and a work commitment of 2 days within the Esalen Community will be required.

The focus will be on holistic models where mind, body, and spirit are treated as one entity. A variety of healing systems will be covered during the program including traditional Chinese acupuncture theory, deep tissue massage, Bach flower remedies, nutrition, herbology, homeopathy, and various other systems of health enhancement. Gestalt and other intrapsychic and interpersonal process work will be available as part of community scheduled sessions.

The goal of this workshop is to give participants tools that they can take out into the world and use in their own health practices.

A principal emphasis throughout the program will be on discovering and awakening inner resources through spiritual practice. Meditation, chanting, yoga, t'ai chi, massage, and other quieting methods will be used to help still the mind and relax the body, permitting new sensitivities to emerge.

Cost for the 3 month program, including tuition, room, and board, is $1800. To register for the program, please send a $200 deposit with a short description of your interests to Al Drucker, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920. The deposit is refundable.

Who's Responsible at Esalen?

We have long regarded Esalen Institute as an educational laboratory. Our evolving philosophical and operational positions reflect this regard. Underlying it all is a baseline ethic of "self-awareness and self-responsibility." However represented and operationalized in the past, by us or by others, this ethic continues to be the basis for our world view, and following from this, our educational approach. The self-awareness/self-responsibility ethic has grown and stabilized out of at least two generations of weighty disillusioning social and political events—all connected by a common reminder:

Give away your personal faculties of discernment, of evaluation, of self-reference, and you lose your integrity (your wholeness). "Take responsibility for your every thought, your every feeling, your every action," said our beloved friend and teacher, Fritz Perls.

We view the implications of this position as being social as well as personal. They concern the ways we relate to ourselves and others.

In our position as educators, we invite people to take responsibility for their whole life situation while at Esalen. This includes taking responsibility for who they select as their teachers, their leaders, their gurus, their authority figures, and so on, and to be aware, whenever possible, of what effect this has on them. We, of necessity, are setting up a situation for our seminarians to learn the practice of self-responsibility from the time they consider selecting a workshop, not just during the workshop. In effect, we are asking that this self-responsibility attitude be present in the initial contact with Esalen. Ideally, the same attitude will pervade after a workshop when our seminarians go back to the community and seek out others—physicians, teachers, counselors, mental health professionals, etc.

As we have become more thoughtful and self-critical about the overall direction of Esalen we have begun to concentrate on enhancing our basic offering: the Esalen environment and life style. Our primary emphasis is not on teaching particular truths or personal and interpersonal techniques for daily life. Our primary concern is with a particular consciousness and developing an environment to support the evolution of that consciousness: the consciousness of self-awareness/self-responsibility.

Food for Thought

Future of Bodily Transformation

way already). Countless private groups—circles of friends study projects in schools and churches, funded research centers—will be venturing forth in many ways to achieve physical and spiritual excellence. As in the natural sciences during the past four hundred years, there will be a culture-wide transmission of knowledge about the possibilities, dangers and hidden byways of such enterprises. There will be an ever-growing cooperation between the natural sciences and this kind of exploration, a joining of biology and physics with the subjective arts of transformation. Biofeedback has helped show us the way in this regard, and we can expect more combinations of instrumentally mediated with organismically mediated ways toward self-awareness and control. (In the novel, Jacob Atabet, the protagonist joins the insights he gains through "inner seeing" with images of his own body provided by the electron microscope.)

Because these frontiers will have caught the public's imagination in the coming decades, there will be financial support for groups that want to develop the ecstatic and luminous states which often accompany supernormal functioning. Certain gifted individuals may have broken through into states in which they can partially control entropy, gravity and aging; and from their new mastery, they will be able to bring others along with them. We believe that there will be two movements in the culture at large in respect to these leadings then: one to disseminate knowledge and practical applications to more and more people, and another to move further into uncharted spaces.

In the far-distant future there may appear several paths of transformation. We can imagine that some will learn to form the subtle luminous body suggested in various Neo-platonic, Islamic, Buddhist, Taoist and Hindu scripture. The concluding verses of the Taittriya Upanishad describe the liberated soul "going up and down the worlds of existence, assuming any form he desires and chanting: Oh Wonderful! Oh Wonderful! Oh Wonderful!"

Cesium 137 is deposited in muscles of the body where it can produce malignant changes.

Plutonium is one of the most carcinogenic substances known. It is not absorbed through the bowel wall, except in infants in the first four weeks of life when it is ingested in milk. As previously described, infants are extremely sensitive to the toxic effects of radiation. The route of entry of plutonium is by inhalation of contaminated air into the lungs. Small particles of plutonium are deposited deep in the respiratory passages, where they tend to remain for years. It is accepted that one millionth of 1 gram of plutonium is sufficient to produce lung cancer 15-30 years after initial inhalation of the element. Plutonium is also absorbed from the lungs into the blood stream where it is carried to the liver (to produce a very malignant liver cancer), to bone (where like strontium 90, it causes osteogenic sarcoma and leukemia), and it is selectively taken up from the circulation by the testes and ovaries where, because of its incredible gene-changing properties, it may cause an increased incidence of deformed and diseased babies, both now and in future generations.

Plutonium also crosses the placenta, from the mother's blood into the blood of the fetus, where it may kill a cell responsible for development of part of an organ, e.g. heart, brain, etc., causing gross deformities to occur in the developing fetus. Production of fetal deformities is different from the deformities caused by genetic mutation in the egg or sperm, because although the basic gene structure of the cells of the fetus is normal, an important cell in the developing fetus has been killed leading to a localized deformity. (Similar to the action of the drug thalidomide.)

Massive quantities of radioactive wastes are being and will be produced in the future. The safe storage of waste is unsolved, and even if there were a present-day solution, we could not predict a stable society or world for half a million years. We could not guarantee incorruptible guards or moral politicians and we certainly can not prevent earthquakes, cyclones or even wars. As waste is leaking now, so inevitably will it leak in the future. We could therefore predict epidemics of cancer and leukemia in children and young adults, and an increased incidence of inherited disease (there are 2,000 described inherited diseases). It is also inevitable that plutonium will be stolen and utilized for atomic weapon production; 2 tons of plutonium are presently unaccounted for in the United States.

It has been claimed that 80-90% of all cancers may be caused by environmental pollutants. There was a 5% increase in cancer in the United States in the first seven months of 1975, and a total 3% rise in 1975.

Governments spend millions of dollars researching the causes of cancer, leukemia and inherited disease, but simultaneously spend billions of dollars in an industry that will directly propagate these diseases.

As a doctor, I appeal to my fellow medical colleagues to investigate this enormous present and potential threat to our patients, and to urgently initiate programs of prophylactic medicine.

FRIENDS OF ESALEN

FRIENDS OF ESALEN provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available to a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to the knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

Registration Information

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute-By Reservation Only.

Reservation Information: In order to reserve a space in any workshop, we require a reservation fee of $20 for weekend groups, $70 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups, payable in U.S. currency only. Balance of payment is due on arrival. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs.

Wednesday: 9 am to 12 noon
Sunday: 12 noon to 5 pm

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation (allow at least three weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—September 30 programs or for weekend programs.

Ongoing Residence Program: Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $1100 per 26-day period.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has limited child care facilities. If you are interested in bringing a child while you are attending a workshop of five days or longer, contact the office well in advance for information on availability of child space. Esalen does not supply babysitters.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pick-ups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen. Esalen limousine service is not available after 5 pm.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff, usually in the kitchen. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Accreditation: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs.

Contributions to Esalen Institute are tax-deductible.

The expenses of attending Esalen, including travel, are deductible for federal income tax purposes as an educational expense if incurred to maintain or improve professional or work skills. (See Income Tax Regulation 1.162-5.)

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Esalen

Esalen is a state of consciousness as much as it is a physical place. It is a pagan monastery, where seekers of every description come to find light. Breaking out of the crumbling structures of their past, they come to find themselves. At this poignant moment in their lives, Esalen stands like the Temple at Delphi, where paths inward are offered, where they come to discover again their bodies, their feelings, their pain, their knowledge, their happiness at being alive. For many, Esalen is where the tide turns in their private revolution against the inner tyrants of their past.

But Esalen is Hell as much as Paradise. It is a climate only for those who are both vigorous and capable of total defeat. The air is rarefied, the energy from the mountains, the creek, the ocean is powerful and prone to dramatic shifts. Underneath Esalen's sign at the top of the hill is an unwritten dictum: Give up hope all ye who enter here. For here your nightmares must come true in order to fulfill your dreams. Here you are forced to fall flat on your face before you can drink the cool, sweet waters of joy. Many do not enjoy too long a stay, for here is where the mirror is ruthlessly turned around to face inward: the demons, flushed to the surface, are no longer "out there." The pace of karma quickens and comes home.

The ocean at its feet, extending immensely into the distance, lets us breathe, expands our inspiration, absorbs our poisons, promises the infinite. The mountains and cliffs converge to form a tightrope for our existence — it is a land of the warrior. And at the heart of this temple of Nature, the springs pour forth warmth from the womb of the earth; in this sanctuary, our bodies and souls are nourished, made supple and young, healed after the armorings of the cities. The baths are literally a Fountain of Youth.

Esalen is a Renaissance Court, with its geniuses and fools, its royalty and peasants, its knights and ladies, its musicians and scholars, its astrologers and ministers, its rogues and lovers. Here, at this Westernmost frontier of the continent (and therefore both outlaw country and yet closest to the East) lies a center of learning, of culture, of energy. A threshold for change, it is both an incarnation of the ancient and a gateway for the yet unsung.

Esalen is where the archetypal realm breathes itself more visibly — somehow the magnificence of its beauty draws out the full power of the human spirit. Esalen is a Kingdom of Death and Rebirth. It is a place inside each of us.

Esalen

Looking back on Esalen's seventeen years, I am pleased with some of the things that have happened here, disappointed and occasionally horrified by others. That we have stayed open to diverse ideas and approaches, however, maintaining a forum for exploration rather than a dogmatic teaching school, is especially satisfying. In 1961, when Dick Price and I conceived the place, we wanted to avoid the university's fear of the Mysteries on the one hand and the rigidity of many gurus and esoteric circles. We have mainly succeeded in this regard though our own parochialisms develop from time to time. Experiments have been tried here that couldn't have been tried in many other places. Some of these were failures. We hosted certain programs in the late sixties I wouldn't get anywhere near again, some of them featuring hard confrontation for its own sake — a kind of macho, Wild West approach to insight in which you could practice your abilities as a bully and verbal gunslinger. We have tried others that were just plain silly, some of which turn up in current schedules. I wince when I see them listed but have to concede that if you're going to keep the place open, such experiments wcll be considered worthwhileee them listed but have to concede that if you're going to keep the place open, such experiments will be considered worthwhile by someone in the Esalen orbit. If we are going to entertain diversity, some of the programs will diverge from what I consider valuable.

Because we were more interested in experiment than management in the sixties, we ran up debts that almost sank us. For a while we thought about closing down the whole operation. But in 1971 we began to re-organize. Though we did not raise prices for five years, we paid off most of our debts, improved the facilities and increased the efficiency of our operation. Some of these changes have been dramatic. There have been some heroes at Esalen in this regard during the past eight years, among them Julian Silverman, Janet Thurston and Neil Dunlop. But our chief teacher in the skills of management has been a man named Andy Gagarin; without him the place would have floundered. Why he worked so hard in what often seemed an impossible situation — with little praise and no pay — is amazing to me. Because of him and the people he worked with, we are in good shape for the years ahead.

Esalen seems to go by decades. If the sixties were mainly innovation and experiment and the seventies largely a time for community and re-organization, Esalen is blossoming now in several directions. Our programs in physics and biology (see pages 17, 18, 19 & 36) are more ambitious than ever and will continue to develop; there are many fertile connections between awareness disciplines and the natural sciences, and we are intent to explore them. Another new series — on social and political concerns — begins in 1980, with seminar leaders from the U.S. Congress, State Assembly, business, and networks like Self-Determination. From the beginning it has been apparent to us that Esalen's concerns with awareness, responsibility, and innovation had social and political consequences. In these programs, we will explore those connections more systematically than we have before. (see pages 11, 23 & 27)

While these and other programs develop, our Big Sur center is going through important changes. People can join our work-scholar program for several months at a time to learn about awareness and community. We have built a solar-powered laundry and heat exchange systems between swimming pool, hot springs and showers as part of an ongoing program to develop alternate energies. The Gazebo school — Janet Lederman's creation — is our first major program for children. And pioneering scholars like Stan Grof and Gregory Bateson continue to take up residence. It is a privilege to support their work.

All in all, the 1980's look to be Esalen's most fruitful decade yet.

The Gazebo

A school without classrooms? A pony that is a teacher? Classes in "Carrots" and "Flowers"?

It sounds like a make-believe school but it really exists. Called the Gazebo, it is a pre-school and day care center that has been operating for about two years at Esalen Institute in Big Sur.

Designed and directed by former elementary school teacher Janet Lederman, who is also a director and member of the board of trustees at Esalen, the school offers children a place to learn as well as have fun.

Janet is proud of the low cost of the school, which has been carefully designed to offer children "a little secrecy and a little danger. In addition to lots of fresh air, dirt, water, and living things — flowers, decorative plants, a garden, a pony, and people of all ages.

There are about 12 children, between 9 months and 5 years old, who attend the school on a regular basis. This summer, a grassy area was added for crawling infants, and the program was expanded to include children up to 14. Their parents are Esalen staff members or seminar participants, and Big Sur neighbors.

The main structure of the school is the gazebo, basically a deck and loft, joined by thick beams. The wood for the gazebo was taken from an old redwood wine barrel that Janet bought for $2,000. Books, toys and musical instruments are stored in the gazebo. Older children climb up to the loft when they want to be alone.

The school started with only the gazebo and a sandbox but has expanded into an educational fantasyland which includes a teepee, boat, castle, raceway, treehouse, al fresco dining area, several swings, and a mini solar-heated shower. ("We're adding a little hot tub soon.") It is spread across a hillside overlooking the Pacific and shaded by eucalyptus trees.

Designed to offer the children a variety of experiences, primarily dealing with the elements of water, dirt and air, as well as people and animals, the emphasis is on learning by doing.

"One of our best teachers is Karina," said Janet, pointing to a small pony inside a split-rail corral. Karina came from a divorcing family and cost only $50. The children not only ride the pony during the day, but they are responsible for feeding her, brushing her, and keeping her corral clean. Nearby, in a little shed, brushes, bridles and other pony-paraphernalia are kept, each in its own labeled spot.

"The children learn about personal hygiene by taking care of Karina," explained Janet. "They also learn to put things where they belong and how to deal with this energy that is larger than they are."

The children have helped to clear the ground for each new area as the school has expanded. They also prepared the soil and planted a small vegetable garden which they maintain — and harvest.

"Carrots are our best crop; next time we'll plant more," Janet pointed out. "They grow well, and they can be picked anytime, whether they are two inches or ten inches long — and they always taste good."

Flowers and small shrubs are growing around the gazebo and the children, depending on their age, help to care for them.

"The little ones love to play in the water, so they water the plants — and usually themselves, too," Janet explained.

"Some of the older children are spending the summer working on our 'living classroom'," she continued. "We bought an old fishing boat in Monterey for $1,000. It cost $2,000 and lots of muscle to get it back here on the hillside. The children are helping a boat builder restore the boat, almost rebuilding it piece by piece. They started out just handing him tools, but now he lets them use the tools themselves. When it is finished it will provide an indoor structure to use on damp and chilly days."

Just as these older children are learning skills by watching a craftsman, the younger children learn new skills by watching the older kids. One example, Janet points out, is the "two holer," the decoratively carved miniature outhouse a few steps from the gazebo.

"The toddlers don't wear diapers while they are here during the day. They see the older children using the outhouse, and pretty soon, they want to use it too — it's a very natural lesson in toilet training."

The ideas for the gazebo were developed by Janet after teaching school in Los Angeles for 14 years. "Normal" schools which "keep kids inside, and don't teach children to relate to themselves" don't appeal to her. Nursery schools and kindergartens intrude on children's learning, she feels, by forcing them to follow rigid schedules; telling them when to eat, when to sleep and what to play with.

The gazebo, on the other hand, ideally involves members of the community, particularly older members who share their knowledge with the younger members. Children are allowed to learn at their own pace, primarily by an apprenticeship or learning by doing method.

In addition to a core of three teachers, there are usually about six or more volunteers around to watch and help the children.

Janet, who has presented this innovative educational plan to professional groups, is eager to see similar schools start in other communities. There are six people now in a work-study training program at the gazebo learning how they can start others.

She stresses the low cost of the school and the flexibility of the plan. The children could raise chickens, have a bigger garden, or even a greenhouse. "It could happen on a donated lot," she said, "or a farm, or even in a city."

Looking at a photograph of school children playing on an asphalt playground between a brick building and a chain link fence, Janet admits that one of her goals is to start a gazebo in New York City. "There's no reason why a school has to be like a prison," she said.

Hydroelectric Energy, A Future Direction

Esalen has long been known for its unusual relationship with the environment of Big Sur. The fact that we are blessed with an abundance of natural resources increases our responsibility to utilize those energy sources with an awareness equal to the environment.

We are presently exploring the Hot Springs Canyon, which offers us an opportunity to meet our minimum electrical requirements by the utilization of the creek's hydro-potential. The electricity generated by a small hydroelectric generator can supply the power necessary to run a minimum food storage facility and can provide the power needed within the shop and laundry buildings. With the implementation of such a system Esalen will be assured of a constant source of power to those buildings which provide basic support services in the daily operation of the facility.

Our approach is one of generating energy to meet our minimum needs. The ecological balance of the canyon is just as vital to us as the potential electricity generated from the creek. The ultimate success of this hydroelectric system depends not only on the availability of the creek as an energy source, but also on the awareness and respect with which we continue to maintain the ecosystem of the canyon.

An Era of Limits, An Era of Possibilities

In March, Esalen will inaugurate an ongoing series of seminars on social and political transformation. The series will focus on the emerging synthesis of personal and planetary concerns manifesting in diverse quarters: among sixties radicals who now speak of a "crisis on the left"; among conservatives in search of authentic models for decentralization; among economists of all persuasions who see new convergences beyond the constraints of traditional ideologies; and in magazines and journals exploring themes more subtle and profound than those caricatured in the East versus West Coast "paradigm wars."

When Esalen was founded in 1961, no one foresaw the convergence of ideas and practice in education, comparative religion, psychology, and the behavioral sciences which came into view in the 1960's and 70's. Twenty years later, no single thinker or system has a firm grasp on the complexities of political, economic, ecological, and social issues, yet there are ideas and visions afoot which point toward more comprehensive understanding. We believe that the broadest shape of things to come can be seen in the dialectic of the decades just passed: the outward expansion of consciousness in the sixties represented by the free speech, anti-war, civil rights, women's and gay liberation movements, with a complementary turn toward inner experience evidenced by the interest in psychedelics, Eastern religion, and esoteric psychologies; followed by a movement toward solidity of practice in the seventies, a consolidation into form with an emphasis on creating social contexts to support new insights. The central theme of these workshops is the meeting of these two tendencies — individual development and social change, self-realization and social justice, personal quest and political action.

We are not trying to create an easy synthesis out of complex variables nor some safe middle ground; we seek rather to encourage a wide range of expression of often contradictory ideas and beliefs, bearing in mind the aberrations which can stem from the idee fixe — the obsessional pursuit of some part-truth regarded as if it were the whole truth. We begin this series uncommitted to any single doctrine, be it "small is beautiful" or "sing the praises of productivity," but to the sense of complex discourse and understandings toward which these insights point.

We will be conducting both public seminars (March 7-9, March 28-30, April 4-6, May 2-4, June 6-8) and private working sessions for various groups interested in these issues.

Keith Thompson
Coordinator of Seminar Series on Political and Social Concerns

New Political Alliances
April 4-6

This workshop features three individuals — Charlie Rose, Milton Friedman, and Stan Commons — whose political efforts aim at a convergence of individual inner awareness with the concerns of action-at-large in social and political processes. They will join with workshop participants to track developments which point to the emergence of new coalitions and alliances for social, economic, political, and personal transformation in the 1980's.

Rep. Charlie Rose, Democrat from North Carolina, is founder of the Congressional Clearing House on the Future, an informal caucus of U.S. senators and representatives which familiarizes members of Congress with ideas and works pointing to alternative national values and potentials. The Clearing House has sponsored lectures for members of Congress and the Executive Branch featuring Moshe Feldenkrais, Buckminster Fuller, and E.F. Schumacher, among others. Rose has been an advocate for public hearings to explore the degree to which psychic powers are being studied for intelligence purposes by both the United States and the Soviet Union.

Milton Friedman, presently a member of the Senior Professional Staff of Congress, served as special assistant to President Gerald Ford and has worked as a consultant for both the Democratic and Republican parties. He lectures widely on the development of new paradigms which link individual and national transformation.

Stan Commons is co-founder and director of Self-Determination, a grass-roots California organization based on developing relationships between personal awareness and interpersonal/community/political involvement.

Questions for discussion are: What are the "patterns that connect" the disparate movements of the 60's and 70's: civil rights, New Left, anti-war, women's issues, gay rights, environmental appropriate technology, human potential, voluntary simplicity, and new-conservative? Can we see the shape of new alliances for personal and political change? How do we stay open to multiple scenarios of the future? How do we deal with the downside of societal breakdown — fear, selfishness, despair, impasse — and use these qualities to break through into new options and possibilities? Can we develop alternatives to top-down, patriarchal social forms, not only in government but in the very processes for change in which we engage ourselves?

Marin Solar Village
June 6-8

The proposed Marin Solar Village at the sight of Hamilton Air Force Base in Novato, California represents the assemblage in one place of a variety of concepts which have been tried and proved elsewhere, ranging from homes heated and cooled by the sun to intensive gardening, fish farming, and the recycling of water and sewage. As the first modern community in the world designed specifically for ecological stability and energy balance, the key concept of Solar Village is sustainability, which can be achieved be designing life support systems to use renewable forms of energy; by restoring and maintaining the health of natural ecosystems; and through social and economic diversity.

In recent months Marin Solar Village has moved from the idea stage to a project underway at many levels. Planning subcommittees are at work on numerous Village components, including a community truck farm, community gardens, solar thermal electric generator, sewage conversion plant, small business and research complex, commercial aquaculture ponds, and sports and recreation center. Solar Village represents the integration of practical, economic technologies into a place where work, home, and play are rejoined, where a diversity of ages, races, and incomes will share in community life. Perhaps most important, Solar Village is a leading example of new models which combine a realization of future energy and economic scarcity with a sense of the possible: out of new limitations can come new visions of life on the planet.

Planning and design director Sim Van der Ryn will join community activist Lillie Leonard and others in a comprehensive review of community participation in the planning process, including an update of the project's status, and explore a wide range of issues relating to creating urban villages.

Ways of Being at Esalen

There are a variety of ways to experience Esalen, ranging from a visit to the hot springs on a week-night to a long-term stay as a student or resident. The week-end and five-day workshops described throughout the catalog are the standard route for coming to Esalen and learning the various methods of personal growth and self-exploration that are available here. The Experiencing Esalen workshops are particularly valuable as a kind of smorgasbord introduction to some of these many practices (such as gestalt, massage, sensory awareness, etc.): from such a sampling, the participant can then choose that approach which feels most appropriate, and then pursue it in subsequent seminars. For those who wish an extended stay of a month or more, the Ongoing Residence Program is ideal. Other long-term programs include the "month-longs" coordinated by individuals such as Stan Grof, Al Drucker, and David Schiffman, which frequently involve didactic seminars as well as experiential workshops, and can be particularly useful for professionals and graduate students.

A very popular way of being at Esalen and one that allows a much greater involvement with the place and its community at a lower expense is the Work-Study Program, which entails working with the Esalen staff as well as participating in an on-going workshop designed specifically for that program. See page 14 for more information and an application form.

In addition, besides all the catalog programs, there are a large number of other events which enrich life at Esalen. There is a regular Tuesday Night Forum where various writers and thinkers, both visiting and resident, share their ideas with the community. On Wednesday nights, there are films, dance performances, choirs, puppet shows, boogies, and other forms of creative entertainment. Bodywork of various kinds is available by appointment with individual practitioners, including massage, deep-tissue, polarity, and rolfing. Individual sessions are also available for various types of process work, including gestalt, neo-reichian emotional release, vision-improvement, music gestalt, etc. Finally, there is a Community Workshop program which goes on daily, and provides many opportunities for engaging in personal self-exploration or learning new approaches to human growth.

The Work-Study Program

In the process of becoming educated, we are taught that it is more important to be involved with the outside world than with our Selves. We are taught to become Ego-involved—involved with manipulating things and people. We are taught to experience our selves primarily in relation to others; we lose touch with our essence.

From this perspective, we offer an opportunity to return to our Selves within the working context of the Esalen community. Our faculty for this program is our environment — staff — community.

— Learning/dis-covering the use of your own energy in work . . . for your SELF.
— Living together (close to others) operatively and cooperatively in a unique, high intensity environment.
— Contact/communication with the people of Esalen via group work and in day-to-day Esalen happenings.

An opportunity for:
— SELF-regulation
— SELF-examination
— SELF-contemplation
and if you choose
— SELF-reevaluation
— Facilitated by removal from your ordinary living context.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week at such jobs as gardening, maintenance, office, kitchen duties, etc. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs and work assignments are made according to these requirements. The Work-Study program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program, emotionally and physically, and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share—contact—play/alone-together. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates.

Accommodations are shared, with up to three people to a room, at South Coast Center, a staff living complex which is 1½ miles north of Esalen. The Work-Study Program, lasting 28 days, is a full time workshop in itself. The work commitment to the community, group process work, and teaching seminars make up a busy schedule for participants. Enrolling in the Esalen catalog workshops is therefore discouraged, since the extra involvements tend to interfere with the fulfillment of the Work-Study Program.

Available dates: December 2-30; December 30-January 27; January 27-February 24; February 24-March 23; March 23-April 20; April 20-May 18; May 18-June 15; June 15-July 13; July 13-August 10; August 10-September 7.

Experiencing Esalen Staff
Coordinated by Janet Zuckerman & Joan Fiore

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificence of the Big Sur coast.

And used–is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is enfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment.

Getting Your Act Together

Nancy Kaye Lunney

All the world's a stage and the current production can be a soap opera, musical comedy, tragedy, or three-ring circus. Since we choose our parts, finding new ways to express ourselves can open up a variety of options on how to play our lives. Using gestalt, music, drawing, and movement in a non-judgmental environment, we will explore getting our "act" together. Individual work in a supportive group setting will be stressed. No special talent or previous group experience is necessary. $120

Self Awareness & Health Practices for Professionals

Janet Mentink & Phillip Mac

This workshop for health care professionals will include both didactic and experiential aspects emphasizing experiential learning about body/mind relationships, body awareness, and self awareness. Massage, centering, and visual imagery will be included so that the group can experience enthusiasm and support for change and self growth.

The workshop will allow "helpers" to explore previous decisions and concepts about themselves as helping professionals, and in the areas of health and disease and self care. Aspects of self awareness and re-decisioning may be used to enhance personal and professional well being $120

Shamanism and the Mystic Quest

"It is one, it is a unity, it is ourselves."—Ramon Medina Silva

Joan Halifax

The archaic sacred traditions that have given access to the body, mind, and spirit—the totality of the human organism in relation to the cosmos—need to be recognized, remembered, and reconciled within our psyche and present culture in order to bring about an abundant lifeway of the future. We will explore ancient and contemporary rituals and mythologies through maps of proto-historical transformative rites, the poetry and art of mystics and visionaries, and religious traditions from shamanism to Buddhism. There will be slide-illustrated lectures, films, and direct experiential work to facilitate our exploration.

Is Your Neck the Bottleneck of Your Energy?

Ruthy Alon

We introduce processes of mindful movements from the feldenkrais method that nurture the body intelligence and make available choices and qualities of coordination that are obscured from us in our culture of pressures and demands.

We re-educate the function of the neck by exploring the relationships of movement patterns throughout the whole body. In its process of ever-needing to adjust, the neck may lose its freedom, compensating for and absorbing tensions and expressions from toe to head. The healing of the neck takes place when a family therapy of the toal organism clarifies its interactions in order to bring relief to the sensitive member.

You will experiment with many practical ideas to take home that will support you on a self-care path of gratifying ways of using your body so that your neck may work for you and not against you. $120

Experiencing Esalen for Health Care Professionals

Coordinated by Jay Kaplan, MD

This workshop is designed for health care professionals who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on experiencing a variety of approaches to self awareness and self care. Some of the following experiences will be available: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bio-energetics, rolfing, feldenkrais, yoga, polarity massage and shiatsu. Nurses and physicians will earn continuing education units. $280

Giant Dancing Steps Toward an Ecology of Body/Mind and Nature

Gregory Bateson
Al Huang

Gregory and Al Chung-liang wish to share the joy and excitement that they have been exploring in transforming "mental process" into dancing motifs ("the pattern which connects" as in t'ai chi) and back to the process of organic unity of Body/Mind and Nature. $310

The Feeling Process

Janet Zuckerman

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feeling from thoughts—sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $280

Weekend of January 11-13

Music, Dance, Trance & Celebration

Nitza Broide Miller

In cultures which are less dominated by technology and industry, music, dance, and celebration are not spectator sports. These activities, along with "trance" states such as meditation, deep relaxation, and hypnosis have been traditionally initiated cross-culturally for physical and emotional balance—release of tension, clearing of the mind, joy and ecstasy, and for interpersonal and transpersonal communication; and everyone participates!

This will be an experiential weekend where participants will be invited to share several deep relaxation ("trance") experiences to help intensify sound and movement and the natural body rhythms.

The lovely sounds of the keyboard, the stirring flute, and the passion of drums will facilitate spontaneous movement to stimulate the evolution of your own body rhythms towards freedom, pleasure, and joy. $120

The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples

David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery as well as gestalt awareness methods. $120 per person

Physics Weekend: Bell's Theorem and the Nature of Reality

Nick Herbert
Saul-Paul Sirag

Quantum theory is universally successful in describing nature at all levels accessible to experiment. However, this comprehensive practical success is accompanied by an unprecedented disagreement as to what quantum theory actually means, and a corresponding confusion as to what sort of reality supports the phenomenal world.

Controversy over the nature of deep reality has been sharpened by Bell's theorem, which proves that any conceivable objective reality underlying the facts of experience must be independent of space and time. Thus either there is no ultimate objective reality, or this reality is more peculiar than we have been led (by ordinary physics) to believe. The impact of Bell's theorem is just beginning to be felt in the world of physics, but it is rather like the situation of the Michelson-Morley experiment, which led to Einstein's theory of relativity. Just what this current controversy in the foundations of physics will lead to is not yet clear, but the various possibilities will be explored in this weekend presentation. $120

Integrity David Schiffman

In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will, and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength, and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical, and mental potentials and how they affect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others. $280

The Spiritual Path: Promises and Pitfalls
Stanislav & Christina Grof

We will combine observations from modern consciousness research and from various traditional practices to explore the process of spiritual awakening. The participants will have the opportunity to confront transpersonal areas within themselves in various experiential exercises, combining evocative slide-shows, music, controlled breathing, mandala drawing, and individual work if appropriate. Special attention will be paid to the understanding of and approach to "spiritual emergencies" which can occur in the context of the kundalini process and other forms of personal evolution. $280

Personal & Cultural Transformation in the 1980's
Theodore Roszak, William Irwin Thompson & Michael Murphy

This seminar will explore some of the crises and opportunities that face us in the 1980's. Topics for discussion will include: the fundamental connections between lifestyle and consciousness on the one hand and the energy, pollution, and monetary crises; the relationships between personal and social transformation; the excess (and hopeful new beginings) of the 1960's and 70's; and contemporary examples of cultural innovation we can learn from. $120

Black Dance
James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash-Lutes

This workshop will include massage and dancing, exploring the rituals of Black disco dancing in contemporary American society. High-low energy, sensual and sexual, rhythm and syncopation, hand clapping, foot stomping, using African drums, we will use our voices and recorded popular Black music. $120

Vision Improvement—Our Willingness to See
Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita)

This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and our selves to see. Utilizing reichian deep emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the bates system, nutrition, and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience and expand—enabling us to look newly at our selves and our world in which we live. Limited to 12 participants. $120

The Tamalpais Experience
Richard Heckler, George Leonard & Wendy Palmer

Aikido is the most sophisticated of the major martial arts. It is also a means for reducing stress, a guide to solving problems of everyday life, and a way of being in the world. Richard Heckler, George Leonard and Wendy Palmer will present the unique approach to aikido and energy awareness they have developd at their Marin County school, Aikido of Tamalpais. No previous training is needed to experience the essence of the art. $280

Advanced Massage Intensive
Esalen Massage Staff

Whether your massage experience is professional or avocational, our aims in this course are to take you deeper into your own work and to provide whatever instruction we can to add to your understanding of the body and to your repertoire of techniques. In addition to morning and afternoon practice sessions with various instructors, we will use yoga, movement, evening lectures and discussions, and demonstrations of specific practices to stimulate ourselves out of our old patterns of working and increase the range of conditions with which we can deal effectively.

The following concerns will receive emphasis: how to sustain your energy through a day of treatments, how to clear yourself of the negative energy released by your client, how to use weight and leverage to your advantage, and so on. As we reach more and more deeply into one another, emotional changes are triggered by the unravelling of blocked muscular energy. As these emotions present themselves, they will provide us with some first-hand practice in productive ways of moving through them.

The format and pace of this course will presume some previous massage experience—at least an introductory five-day intensive or its equivalent in your own practice. $280

Evolutionary Relationships Between Mind & Body

Michael Murphy, James Hickman & Saul-Paul Sirag

Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman are gathering examples of extraordinary bodily transformations from various fields—from the yogic and contemplative literature, psychiatric records, hypnosis and drug research, sport, the arts, and everyday life—in an attempt to learn more about the range of such changes and the ways in which they happen. In this seminar they will present their work to date and speculate with the participants about the implications of their findings. Two questions for discussion are: (1) Do these bodily changes reveal an evolutionary possibility? (2) How do they relate to notions of "enlightenment"?

Saul-Paul Sirag will discuss the implications of recent work in physics for this research. His discussions will include the relationship of Bell's theorem and David Bohm's explicate-implicate order to certain facts of extraordinary human functioning. $120

Emmett Miller

Music has been used for untold centuries by races and cultures throughout the world. It has been used to quicken men's pulses and calm them; to help bring them into the world, and to help deliver them from it; it has been used to promote war and promote love. Life is a dance of body, mind, and emotion seeking spirit. After learning the fundamentals of selective awareness, we will experience the relaxing, healing, and energizing influence of music in the deeply relaxed state of selective awareness and in movement. Tapes will be available for continued work following the weekend. Musicians are invited to bring their instruments. $120

The Gazebo*: An Alternative Education

Janet Lederman

The Gazebo is a model for restructuring educational systems, both physically and philosophically. It is a new concept of "school," involving the inviting of children back into society, the integration of generations, and the re-introduction of life into the content of learning.

The workshop will be both didactic and experiential. We will investigate alternative ways of financing education and plan ways to revitalize neighborhoods as viable teaching resources by generating community involvement. The form, structure, and activities of the Gazebo will be available to participants. So far our youngest student is 9 months old and our oldest is 75. Esalen's Gazebo is more than an idea. It is an actuality. Limited to 12 participants. $120

A Psychic Training Program

Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $280

Tai Chi Chih—A Gift of Life

Catherine Elber

First presented to the public in 1974, tai chi chih is based on ancient movements that were a closely guarded secret of the Chinese emperors and their clansmen for over a thousand years.

Easier than tai chi chuan, these 19 gentle movements are becoming one of the simplest and most effective methods available for realizing within one's self how truly beautiful the gift of life really is.

By adding the principles of these motions to your life, you can experience a continual unfoldment of your potential while providing an enrichment to your life on every level. The effects of these movements enable you to experience the beauty and honor of personal transformation as your body, mind, and soul reap the benefits of harmony and balance—physical health and grace, mental peace and clarity, spiritual infinity. $330

Approaches to Birth, Sex & Death

Stanislav & Christina Grof

In this workshop we will explore the implications of modern consciousness research for the understanding of the three basic aspects of human existence and their mutual interrelations; their significance for mental health and illness. We will focus on such issues as the relevance of the birth trauma for psychiatry and psychotherapy; new understandings of emotional, sexual, and psychosomatic disturbances; the kundalini syndrome; revolutionary approaches to psychotherapy; and insights into the experience of clinical death. The format of the workshop combines slide illustrated discussions, guided fantasy with music, mandala drawing, an audiovisual experiential slide show, and individual work if indicated. The participants will have an opportunity to explore their experiences and feelings in the above three areas. $330

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body

Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact, and nurturing, sensitive giving, and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean, and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $330

Reichian/Gestalt Intensive

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop combines neo-reichian breath and body work, to facilitate physical/emotional release, with gestalt work, to facilitate contact, integration, and self-responsibility.

We provide the time, the space, the opportunity to move at your own pace from dis-ease to ease, from fragmented to whole, from self-discounting to self-validating, from role-playing to authentic self-expression, from helpless victim to active participant in your personal destiny, or from wherever you happen to be coming to wherever you're growing. You might explore your dreams, your tensions, your madness, or your options; take room to breathe or to explode, soak in nurture or exorcise demons, finish past unfinished business, or examine present concerns.

First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to experiment with the quality of interpersonal contact through group interactions. $330

Opening the Feelings

Renan Sercarz, Ron Andes & Julie Wright

The aim of this neo-reichian workshop is to free the body's capacity for feeling expression and aliveness. As deeply held emotions of pain, anger, and fear are experienced and expressed, chronic unconscious patterns of tension can soften and the participant can allow deeper contact with his own aliveness and with others. This can bring a new capacity for love, trust, and joy. We mainly work with the breathing, asking the student to accept and allow whatever comes up. We will work with no more than ten students to one teacher, and each participant will receive two intensive sessions. $330

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom to Be
David Schiffman Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $330

Living in Balance
Phyllis Shankman Living is a creative, ever-changing, cyclic experience. As we acknowledge the basic principles and rhythms of this universal process, we realize that the most obvious principle is polarity—the yin and yang, light and dark, open and closed, falling and rising, feminine and masculine. The art of living can then be viewed as keeping the two forces in balance, because there cannot be one without the other; they are mutually supportive and generative.

In this workshop we will use meditation and breathing, gestalt process work, massage, movement, music, and art to experience our selves in balance and off, in stillness and motion, touching and withdrawing, working and playing, crying and laughing. We will support each other at every stage of the cycle and move together toward a full awareness of our one-ness with the universe. $330

The Emergent Paradigm
Jay Ogilvy & Peter Schwartz

How do you filter the information you need to live? Like contact lenses you can't take off, a paradigm effects the way you see—and the way you think and feel. More universal than a model, less conscious than an explicit worldview, a paradigm colors one's entire experience of self and world. We believe our culture is undergoing a shift of paradigms. Traditional patterns of meaning and order are crumbling. We have been exploring common patterns of change across thirteen different disciplines from art to chemistry, philosophy to biology. We see a new pattern emerging, one that makes sense and gives coherence to apparently fragmented lives. Chemical and biological systems generate higher order from apparent disorder. Political and religious systems sometimes function better with several centers. We will summarize evidence for a polycentric paradigm, then explore its meaning for relationships, for work, for play, for the business of being human. $150

Put Your Memories, Fantasies & Dreams to Work for You—A Reichian/Gestalt Approach to Energy Release

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

"To understand is to tremble. To recollect is to reenter and to be riven."—Harold Brodkey

This workshop focuses on releasing the energy locked in our memories, fantasies, and dreams so that this energy can be made available for present relationships and life situations in a way that makes our existence in the present less encumbered by unfinished business of the past as well as self-programmed, self-fulfilling prophecies of doom for the future. First priority is on intensive intrapersonal work in a supportive group setting. There will also be opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $330

Five-day Massage Intensive

Esalen Massage Staff

An introduction to the language of the body, this course will attempt to view the human interior through various windows: yoga, feldenkrais, movement, demonstration and work sessions, and evening lectures and discussions. Every major portion of the body will be given detailed attention, and your instructors will acquaint you with their individualized styles. In the morning and afternoon practice sessions the focus will be on your integrating this information in your own manner and evolving your own style of working with the body. Our intent is not to teach you to imitate, but to help you learn to become effective: the rest you will teach yourselves. $330

Energy Awareness & The Crystalline State

George Leonard

In the crystalline state, there is no expectation nor any prejudgment. Concentration on the past and future gives way to primary focus on the present. Action taken while in the crystalline state is not considered action but rather appropriate action. When fully achieved, this state permits you to experience the harmony and connectedness of all existence. This energy awareness workshop will emphasize the crystalline state as described in George Leonard's latest book, The Silent Pulse: A Search for the Perfect Rhythm that Exists in Each of Us, and will also involve centering, balancing and stress reduction. $150

From Stress to High Level Wellness—Preventing Burn-Out in the Helping Professions

John Travis, Joy Holloway, Barbara McNeill & Skip Andrew

An experiential approach to high level wellness. Learn what high level wellness is about. We will assist you in developing skills in the areas of self-responsibility, stress control, nutrition and physical activity, and in promoting the excellence and vitality which are synonymous with optimum health. We will create our own wellness plans and, through personal experience, learn the importance of self-responsibility in active health and well-being. We will also encourage the shifting of beliefs towards a new paradigm—one in which we are no longer rescuing patients, clients, friends from disease, but rather teaching self-responsibility by our personal examples. $150

Androgyny

Ralph Metzner & Angie Arrien

An intensive exploration of the meaning and value of blending and harmonizing the male and female energies with the psyche. Ancient mythic symbolism of androgyny will be presented—e.g., the taoist yin/yang, the tantric siva/sakti, the alchemical sol/luna, the Basque sun/moon. Various traditional and modern experiential methods will be demonstrated and practiced. Emphasis is on the application of the androgyny process to personal growth, creativity, and interpersonal relationship balance. $150

Inner Game/Outer Game: A Trial Practice Intensive

Skip (aka Francis E.) Andrew & Dawn Nelson

While lawyers often emphasize the cerebral, react as computers, and depend on rationality, jurors decide cases based on their experiences and emotions in the courtroom. Unpersuasive counsel rely only on lawyertalk (e.g., form, foundation, objections, decorum, logic). We will introduce you to your own unique energy, excitement, spontaneity, and confidence. You can suffocate and stifle that energy with fear and preconception, or you can learn to use your inner game to persuade jurors in the outer game. In the context of trial practice exercises, we will use theatre games, gestalt, video, imagery, and play to enable each of us to discover our own unique power to persuade by creating experience and emotion in the trial setting. $330

Health, Ecology, and Consciousness in the Nuclear Age
Howard Kornfeld & Carol Wolman The need has arisen for those in the holistic health and human potential movements to bring their unique experience and knowledge into a greater political context by joining with other organized movements to overcome the great problems and danger to man and the earth posed by environmental pollution, nuclear arms proliferation, and oppressive political structures throughout the world. In this workshop we will explore how we can individually and collectively begin working towards this synthesis. Both experiential and didactic sessions will be included. $150

Meditation and Prayer Workshop

Daniel O'Hanlon

This workshop provides introductory instruction and guidance in a variety of practices, drawn from the Christian traditions of East and West, from Hindu and Buddhist disciplines, and from the recent explorations of the human potential movement.

The workshop will encourage and assist each participant to discover his or her own path. The work will move in two states:

1) Guided experience in a variety of ways of deepening contemplation: breathing awareness, breath as gesture of prayer, body awareness meditations, mantras, the Jesus prayer, chanting, hatha yoga, visualization and fantasy, etc.

2) Under personal direction, more intense work with that practice or those practices most suited to each individual.

Suggested reading: New Seeds of Contemplation (Merton), and Zen Mind, Beginner's Mind (Suzuki). $330

The Moving Center
Gabrielle Roth

An American shamanic ritual using music, poetry, sacred dance, and ritual theatre experiences to mirror the mind, catalyze the heart, and open the body as a channel for creative energies. Through collective rituals which ground us in our sameness we explore our individual dreams and visions and learn to share our differences. $150

Birthing: A Weekend with the Midwives
Raven Lang, Honey Rose, Peggy Morrison & Jane Miletich

This workshop is about birth in our society today. Some of the topics for discussion will be home birth, hospital birth, the physical and spiritual aspects of the birth ritual, bonding, and the family. Parents, prospective parents, grandparents, health professionals, and all interested in birth are welcome. Bring your feelings, thoughts, and concerns. The style of this workshop will be an open forum, a place to exchange information and ideas. $150

The Politics of Healing: The Resurrection of the Body Politic
Sam Keen & Rick Carlson

Questions for discussion: To what extent was the creation of the modern medical care system in the early 1900's more a function of political and economic rather than therapeutic considerations? To what extent does economic necessity—the requirement that new pathologies be found to keep providers busy—preclude approaches that would contribute significantly to the health of the population?

We will also focus on recent breakthroughs in biology and their implications for health and healing, and consider the social and economic impact of the growing preventive medicine/holistic health movement. The larger issues are these: What political visions and economic value choices shape our notions of disease and technologies of healing? How do we create a more healthy body politic? $150

Mind and Nature, Heart and Soul
Gregory Bateson & Gabrielle Roth

Creating rituals of unity for dancing minds, Gabrielle catalyzes the creative energies of the imagination, intuition, and inspiration into physical form, while Gregory moves the mind through "patterns which connect" as they both explore the living world of change. We will experience the mind moving the body and the body dancing the mind toward a revelation of the poetry of the heart. $350

Be Your Own Child—A Movement Journey
Nitza Broide Miller

Discover the child in you—its joy, sadness, fear, excitement, anger, curiosity, wondering, fun, sensuality, loneliness, playfulness.

Reconnect with the child in you so that it is nurtured, loved, cared for and allowed to grow.

In this workshop we'll learn to give the child in ourselves permission to be. Through dance, energy flow, touch, imagery, relaxation, and dynamic breathing we shall tap into our hidden and forgotten desires and secret wants and allow them to be expressed. We shall nurture them in loving-caring movement adventure. Touch and movement rituals of self care will be learned and practiced. $150

Death and Resurrection
Paul Rebillot

This workshop offers the opportunity to experience, rather than avoid, one of life's most real situations and its only inevitability: your own death. On a wider scale, it explores ways to move creatively through life's many transitions, letting go of the old and welcoming the new.

We will prepare to experience our deaths by reviewing our lives, completing unfinished business, writing wills. We will plan and celebrate our own funerals. Attachments to persons, things, and self-images are gradually severed until, surrendering all to the ultimate unknown, we are able to experience the birth of the truly new. Reborn, we can begin to create a new life the way we want it. $150

Heal Thy Self: A Workshop for Health Professionals

Hughes Andrus, Mary O'Hara-Devereaux & Cynthia Rogers

This workshop focuses on our behavior as health care practitioners and how this behavior affects our own health as well as the health of our patients. It emphasizes:

Self-responsibility for each practitioner's health;

Techniques for enhancing the sensitivity of practitioners in ways which make them more "tuned-in" to each patient-consumer;

Applying sound judgment and knowledge in relation to patients and simultaneously not taking health-care responsibility away from patients.

We will use methods of self-discovery derived from psychosynthesis, gestalt, meditation, and other systems, in addition to lecture and discussion on the several themes surrounding self care. Each participant will have an opportunity to make an assessment of their own health status and consider changes for themselves and changes in their clinical practice styles. $330

Body-Feelings-Consciousness

Clair Killen

This will be a full participation, experiential week. It is based on Clair Killen's extensive neo-reichian group work. The workshop will be limited to 12 individuals joining in a non-confrontive program of movement and body work, and allowing opening of deep feelings. Each time we witness and experience what is real for us about our bodies, our self-esteem, and the ways we control our lives, we extend our consciousness. $330

The Eighties: Time to Expand Your Experience

Frank Rubenfeld & Mari Krieger

From me-centeredness to social and cosmic consciousness; from left-brain linearity to right-brain body experiencing; from gender typing to androgyny. In this workshop we will use social gestalt and body therapy to facilitate a fuller participation in both inner and outer experience. $330

Towards a More Sensitive Relating

Charlotte Selver & Charles Brooks

An introduction to sensing, for more meaningful contact with our own nature and with the world around us.

How we relate to our deep inner needs, to other people, or to different tasks and situations depends on how we perceive them and how we trust our own findings. When perception is clear and full, we cannot make mistakes. Our whole organism is geared to respond appropriately. We have come, however, to see through a fog of preconceptions, a bewildering fabric of the ideas and judgments of others. Our own experience has been belittled; our perceptive faculties have lost their edge. The true I and the true you no longer meet. Both life and death have become often threatening fantasies.

Sensory awareness is a practice for rediscovering and reviving full sensory functioning. Through the gradual quieting of premature and inappropriate intellectual activity, it directs our attention both inwards and outwards to the actuality of the present moment. As perceptivity revives, true relationship becomes possible. Each everyday occasion in living gains its own freshness, its own uniqueness. We can become content again, like healthy children, as quality begins to make quantity unimportant.

The few hours of a weekend workshop may, and often do, permit a glimpse of something so exciting, so enriching, that a person may wish to change his life in order to follow it up. $150

Massage and Movement

Esalen Massage Staff

This week we will enlarge the scope of our massage workshop format and explore our own structural moods and movements. We add basic t'ai chi exercises to ground our energies, and movement sessions with video playback to explore our rhythm and flow in space and to give us a firsthand look at those unspoken messages our bodies broadcast with every gesture we make and every step we take.

We will evolve different, more responsive ways of contacting each other which reflect our developing awareness of being at home in our bodies, an awareness which is naturally heightened by relaxing massage sessions in the mineral hot spring baths, led by senior members of the massage staff.

As we develop each individual's approach to working with another's body, we will share our favorite methods—the relaxation process and how to work within it, pressure points, structural movement within the massage, the deeper body. $330

Reichian Gestalt: A Workshop for Contact and Release

Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita)

This workshop provides a safe environment to experience consciously the process of our own unfolding—physically, emotionally, energetically, sexually, spiritually.

As we become aware of the ways we hold back our self-expression (flow of life energy) we then have the choice to let go. By contacting tension (stuck, accumulated energy) and allowing emotions which have been locked and frozen in our bodies, often since early infancy, we then have the opportunity to open ourselves to the creative flow of life energy within each of us. As we contact and allow our hurts and pain, we can then increase our capacity for pleasure and joy. As we allow our expression of anger, which is a powerfully expansive, outward directed energy, we can open and deepen our capacity for love and compassion. As we contact and allow our expression of fear, we can then move toward expanding our capacity for trusting—ourselves and others. Learning to trust our bodies, our responsiveness and movement, is a liberating experience.

Utilizing reichian emotional release, gestalt practice, bioenergetics, feldenkrais, massage, reflexology, dance, meditation, and various other bodymind approaches, we can move toward expanding our capacity for trust and fulfillment. $330

A Workshop in Creative Movement
Anna Halprin & Daria Halprin
"The fact that there has always been dance compels us to accept it as an old, deeply rooted human activity whose foundations reside in the nature of human beings. It will continue as long as the rhythmic flow of energy operates, and until man/woman ceases to respond to the forces of life and the universe. As long as there is life, there will be dance."—Margaret H. Doubler

This workshop is designed to inspire and guide an exploration through movement and dance of one's own life resources and themes. The learning process will be aimed at integrating emotional and physical expression, utilizing dance and also incorporating gestalt principles and visualization exercises. Mind/body relationships will be a primary focus. The development and expansion of personal and group creativity as a way of promoting health, increasing communication skills, and facilitating change is the intention of this workshop. $330

Massage, Yoga, and Movement
Deborah Medow
Massage: a way for aware individuals to share with and heal each other.

Meditation and yoga: vehicles for focusing the mind inward, allowing us to more fully experience, expand, and harmonize our inner/outer limits.

Movement: reflections of who we are and how we experience our body/-minds in action.

This week through massage, meditation and yoga, creative moving, and sound we will explore and expand our self-expression, our life experience. $330

Experiencing Astrology
Robert Hand
The basis of astrological symbols lies within the psyche, and every symbol in astrology can be experienced in terms of feelings and sensations. Being in touch with the symbols of astrology at this level gives one knowledge of what the horoscope means at much more than an intellectual level.

The workshop is aimed at persons who have anywhere from a minimal to an advanced level of astrological knowledge. The object of the workshop will be to get an inner experience of the symbolism of one's individual horoscope through guided meditation exercises. In these the participant will gain, through visions and fantasies, a non-intellectual knowledge of the symbolism in his or her own chart, and what it signifies.

The only requirement for this workshop is that the individual know his or her own birthdate, and, if at all possible, time and place as well. Each individual will be working with his or her own horoscope as well as sharing the horoscopes of others.

When applying, please send the office your birth date, and time and place, if possible, well in advance of the workshop dates so that your chart may be cast before the workshop. $330

Thinking Body/Moving Mind/Understanding Heart
Betty Fuller Movement is a primary means to learning: learning about one's self, one's relationship to others, one's place in the universe. Happy side effects of such learning can include an enriched and enhanced self image and spontaneous and appropriate self expression along with greatly reduced stress, friction, tension, and effort. The workshop includes trager and feldenkrais body-mind approaches, guided imagery, simple meditations and massage at the baths. Feelings, encounters, understanding, and realizations generated in the workshop may be shared and processed in the group. $150

Visions and Economics
George Leonard & Paul Hawken With conventional social policies in disarray, new approaches to national and international problems are urgently needed, and it now appears that ideas that have come out of the human potential movement over the past 15 years are becoming highly relevant. During this weekend, George Leonard, a long-time human potential activist and visionary, will lead participants in proposing transformational approaches to the challenges of the day; Paul Hawken, an economist and writer, will discuss their economic, political, and social costs.

How do specific visionary alternatives in such areas as energy, health care, tax reform, economic planning, and education relate to realities of the existing political climate, economic structures, and matrix of social consensus? We will explore the dynamic interplay between a variety of new age ideas and their practical applications in a number of fields. $150

Exploring Your Creative Process
Nancy Kaye Lunney Through gestalt, imagery, music, writing, drawing, videotape and spontaneity we will investigate aspects of the creative experience, from blocking and stagefright to euphoria. Focus will be on self awareness and on developing the confidence and freedom necessary for the creative journey. Individual projects can be developed during the workshop based on each person's major interest, and individual work in a supportive group setting will be stressed. Please bring whatever special materials you think you might want to play with. Piano accompaniment will be available. This workshop is suitable for non-professionals as well as professionals in the creative and performing arts. $330

Health, Longevity, and Optimal Well-Being
Ken Dychtwald In this workshop, a comprehensive "six point" program for health, longevity, and optimal well-being will be presented. Drawing from the latest information and techniques from the holistic health, physical fitness, and human potential fields, this innovative program includes practical methods for 1) strengthening and vitalizing the bodymind; 2) enhancing bodymind flexibility and limberness; 3) heightening aerobic fitness and endurance; 4) improving relaxation and reducing stress; 5) enforcing the body's natural resistance to disease; and 6) heightening mental and emotional functioning. Through a comfortable blend of lectures, demonstrations, experiential exercises, and daily massage sessions at the Esalen baths, each participant will learn ways to develop a personalized program for lifelong health and well-being. $330

Awakening the Magician Within
Emmett Miller Whether or not we have as yet learned it, there is a magician within each of us. His magic wand is belief. If we believe we are sick, we are sick; if we believe we are stuck, we are stuck. But all coins, even magic ones, have two sides. If we believe we are growing stronger every day, we are; if we believe in our creativity, our problems joyfully solve themselves. In this seminar we will investigate and discover what truth there is in each of these statements for us, individually. Our explorations will be experiential, using deep relaxation, visualization, music, movement, and selective awareness. $150

Gestalt, Bioenergy & Human Contact
Alan Schwartz There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $330

Symbols of Transformation
Ralph Metzner & Angie Arrien This seminar is an intensive experiential study of symbols as tools of personal growth. Symbols can expand one's perception of self and others, increase insight, and stimulate new areas of self-expression and creativity. We will consider a variety of symbols: psychologically, as archetypes of individuation, and cross-culturally, as universal constants. The symbols to be studied and experienced include: sun and moon, trees, flowers, circles/wheels/-mandalas, totem animals, light and fire, the elements, sacred mountains, the body and its parts, the journey-path, and others. Some of the sources of symbolism that we will draw on are astrology, alchemy, the tarot, mythology, and folklore of all cultures. Special attention will be given to the uses and significance of symbols in dreams, art, and the helping professions. Special symbolic creative projects will be part of the seminar. $330

Many Dimensional Self
Jay Ogilvy & Heather Maycock Ogilvy The question, "Who am I?" may have more than one answer. During this weekend we'll explore both the theory and practice of multiple selfhood. What is the self? What does it mean to allow several selves per person? What are the social implications, e.g., when one self makes promises that a person's other selves have to keep? Must there be one "captain of the ship?" What is the price of a well developed ego, a single identity? Do we bring on our identity crises, mid-life crises, dying relationships, over-consuming careers by such one-dimensionality? Might we instead evoke the many gods within us and free the energy of our shadow selves? We will approach these questions both cognitively and experientially using body, mind and heart. Remembering myths other than monotheism, playing with theories other than ego psychology, working to hear more of our voices, we hope to find integration through communication rather than subordination.

Zero Balancing
Fritz Smith — Zero balancing is a body handling system utilizing structural acupressure to deal directly with the interface between body structure and energy flow. The workshop will be both didactic and experiential.

Traditional anatomy, physiology, and kinesiology will be reviewed and then reinterpreted from an alternative viewpoint indicating the often overlooked imbalances which occur within our foundation joints. These imbalances may lead to chronic body pain, and frequently represent an ongoing energy drain from the body. Based on laws of nature, Zero Balancing is both a pleasure to give and to receive, and results seen are immediate, gratifying and often inspiring, with seemingly little effort on our part. While there will be both theoretical presentations and practical demonstrations, the main emphasis of the workshop will be toward individual instruction. You Don't Have to Feel Good to Suffer
Rick Tarnas & the Esalen Staff — Many of us are programmed in childhood to believe that in order to experience happiness one must undergo difficult, painful "growth" experiences. This workshop will explore various methods of self-awareness which will show us that there is no need for a human being ever to feel good and that constant depression, guilt, and free-floating anxiety can be a reality for you for the rest of your life. We will examine evidence from both ancient and modern civilizations concerning long-standing and intractable neuroses and psychoses, "lives of quiet desperation," and successful suicides. Just bring yourselves and your problems. $150

Special Programs

Holistic Health Classes

A program of holistic health classes for staff and long term residents was started during the summer of 1979. Regular weekly classes and practicums are given in Chinese traditional acupuncture, deep tissue work, Bach flower remedies, and homeopathy. A weekly anatomy and physiology class and other related topics are included in the curriculum. The spring, 1980 term of classes will go from February 10-May 9; the fall, 1980 term will go from the middle of August to November. These are primarily ongoing classes open only to individuals who have previously arranged for a long term stay at Esalen of at least three months through the work-scholar program or the residency program. Transformation Science: A 3-Weekend Series integrated by Saul-Paul Sirag, David Deamer & Michael Murphy

Science is the process of testing the limits of the unknown and pushing those boundaries back. As a result, scientific knowledge transforms us—not only by providing new techniques for getting things done (or generating new problems), but, more importantly, by transforming our view of ourselves in the world.

The purpose of these programs is to experience something of the fundamental work being done in three different areas having great potential for human transformation.

Weekend of January 11-13
Physics: The nature of reality as clarified by Bell's theorem.

Weekend of January 18-20
Social History: The nature of social organization as influenced by scientific and cultural paradigm shifts.

Weekend of January 25-27
Psychology: The nature of human ability as it is extended by transformative practices.

These quite different forces for change can readily provide grounds for speculation on the future of human development, and thus afford the opportunity for an integration of this information with whatever knowledge and wisdom the participant possesses.

In addition to these public seminars, there will be working sessions involving physicists, biochemists, social historians, psychologists, and other scientists who will explore these subjects during the month of January. These private sessions are part of a new program at Esalen Institute to facilitate interdisciplinary discussions and research in areas of emerging significance. Saul-Paul Sirag will be available for tutoring those who participate in the entire series.

Please refer to the dates listed above for further information on the individual weekends.

Trager Psychophysical Integration and Mentastics Basic Training

In each professional training workshop, participants are instructed in trager table work, receiving directly from the instructors and giving and receiving from each other under supervision. In addition, participants learn to practice and teach mentastics, learn basic communication skills, clearing exercises, simple meditations and have time in group to share and process their experience. These trainings are open to professionals in education, body work, holistic health care, counseling, psychology, medicine, chiropractic, sports, performing arts and other disciplines which see movement as a primary means of learning. Applications must specify professional background. $690

Gestalt Practice

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
and used—is inexhaustable.
—Lao Tzu

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, and growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment. The second half of this program will have participants working primarily with each other, relating whatever is being learned (or unlearned) to the development of their own styles. Thus this program might be especially useful to those wishing to utilize a gestalt approach in their professions (e.g. counselors, teachers, ministers, mothers, doctors and nurses).

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J. C. Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach). $810

Alternative Futures

A four-week interdisciplinary program for professionals and students in the areas of psychiatry, psychology, medicine, anthropology, philosophy, religion, economy, ecology, and politics. This workshop will focus on the present global crisis and explore the dangerous and promising alternatives for future development of the human condition. The program will cover the following thematic areas:

1) Analysis of the Contemporary Situation in the World.
Visiting specialists from various disciplines will analyze the existing crises in politics, economy, ecology, medicine, psychology, and psychiatry. Special emphasis will be put on the limitations of the present paradigms of science and the urgent need for their drastic revision.

2) Alternatives for Future Development: Promises and Dangers.
In this context we will explore such issues as the techniques for radical change of consciousness, body transformation and enhancement of human mental capacities, reforms of the existing educational system, holistic approaches to medicine and health care, urban architecture of the future, voluntary simplicity, space colonies, genetic engineering, and others. Special attention will be paid to the convergence of modern consciousness research, mysticism, and quantum-relativistic physics and the emergence of a new paradigm for science.

3) Self-Exploration and Group Process
The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with personal experience. The Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators for an ongoing process of intrapsychic and interpersonal exploration throughout the program. We will experiment with techniques of personality transformation that seem to be relevant from the point of view of the future of the planet. The participants will also have the opportunity to explore the alternatives for their own future. In this context, we will use gestalt practice, encounter, neo-reichian approaches, dance, fantasy exercises with music, mandala drawings, and different forms of body work. Jack Kornfield will conduct a systematic course in Vipassana meditation during the entire four weeks of the workshop. The faculty will be announced in the next catalog. $1250

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth (A four-week internship program for personal & professional growth)

Over the years Esalen has functioned as a major clearing house for a wide variety of approaches and means for facilitating personal evolution and expression. One's journey could begin with any realm—mental, physical, emotional, or transpersonal—each path serving to create a wealth of information and energetic access.

What are the common experiential and conceptual threads that underlie each of these paths? How can these threads of experience be best woven together to create a fabric whose qualities are simultaneously exquisite in their delicacy while still remaining strong enough to sustain the wear and tear of worldly existence? And how best might this very personal process of self-discovery and integration be taught and shared with others?

The exploration and resolution of these and other basic questions pertaining to the process of change and growth will serve as the basis of our work together during this month long institute program.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own ability, style, and artfulness both as individual guide and group facilitator, as well as to do in-depth personal work and training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthetic techniques, and the meditative arts.

The program will be structured to include: intensive individual work, supervised observations, practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills, video feedback, illustrated lectures and didactic theoretical sessions. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective linking human potential practices with traditional psychological and counseling modalities. $1,250

Friends of Esalen

Friends of Esalen provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available on a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

☐ I wish to become a Friend of Esalen and I enclose my check for the category circled.

Registration Information

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute-By Reservation Only.

Reservation Information: In order to reserve a space in any workshop, we require a reservation fee of $20 for weekend groups, $70 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups, payable in U.S. currency only. Balance of payment is due on arrival. These fees are not refundable, but with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs.

Please mail all reservations to:
Reservations, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920

Reservations by telephone: You may make reservations by phone if you use your Mastercharge, BankAmericard, or American Express credit card number to charge your reservation fee.

Phone: (408) 667-2335
Hours: Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday,
Saturday: — 9 am to 3 pm
Wednesday: 9 am to 12 noon
Sunday: 12 noon to 5 pm

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program, write for a scholarship form before making a reservation (allow at least three weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—September 30 programs or for weekend programs.

Ongoing Residence Program: Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $1100 per 26-day period.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has limited child care facilities. If you are interested in bringing a child while you are attending a workshop of five days or longer, contact the office well in advance for information on availability of child space. Esalen does not supply babysitters.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen. Esalen limousine service is not available after 5 pm.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff, usually in the kitchen. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Accreditation: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs.

Contributions to Esalen Institute are tax-deductible.

The expenses of attending Esalen, including travel, are deductible for federal income tax purposes as an educational expense if incurred to maintain or improve professional or work skills. (See Income Tax Regulation 1.162-5.)

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Health: Whose Responsibility?

Excerpted from a keynote speech by Gregory Bateson, Governor's Conference, Berkeley, California, 3 May 1979

Going back to classical undertones, what has happened is that the riddle of the Sphinx has been restructured. "What is it that walks on four legs and then on two legs and then on three?" And the answer is "man." The Psalmist's question: "Lord what is man that Thou regardest him?" is the same question on the ancient Hebrew side. That question is, at this very moment, in almost complete flux. And the flux concerns the question of the relationship between Mind and Body, a very ancient problem in the West but one that doesn't seem to perplex the East so much.

The position of medicine is right in the middle of that pull and push between mind and body. The superstition with which we here are most familiar is, I suppose, the superstition that material causes in lineal sequence will provide a sufficient theoretical background for describing human health and ill health and human behavior in general. But that seems to me to be a very unsatisfactory superstition, and not very old. It goes back in full strength to about the seventeenth century and dominates the field of established medicine. It leads to a whole philosophy of diagnosis. You look to find a cause; you look to find a remedy for that cause. And you know—every doctor knows—that that's at least twenty-five percent nonsense. Doctors will vary as to how much nonsense they think there is in that superstition.

It is not satisfactory for human beings to try to model themselves on lineal material cause as a description of what goes on. If you deny to mind an effective position in your explanatory system—in your understanding of what it's all about—you also deny humor, you deny religion, you deny poetry and art. You even deny the existence of placebos. Placebos only work because mind happens to be an effective and necessary part of the explanatory system. Doctors and the public often think of placebos as salt pills and sugar pills—little approximate nothings. I got over that idea a long time ago in New Guinea when I discovered that one of the best placebos was "analgesic balm" that you rub into the patient. He can feel it, it's hot! It's not a matter of a neutral placebo, it's a matter of an effective placebo. And if you extend that thought, all the experimental work with placebos shows that they have about 30 percent of the effectiveness of physically active drugs, and that all medication owes 30 percent to a placebo effect, which is not stressed in textbooks but obviously must be so.

I think that what I went through in my bout with cancer was an enormous placebo running over two to three months in which, incidentally, I lost a rib and they went in and took a good look. You know, this was quite a dramatic thing. They gave me less than 24 hours to live at one stage. They didn't tell me but they told my good wife and we've been living on bonus time ever since, and there is much to be said for that because, in spite of fashionable desires to forget it, death is right in the middle of the picture. It's one thing that is responsible for human health. It is part of the territorial and temporal definition of "self."

I went through a sort of a placebo. They were unable to operate, so they can't claim a "surgical" success. But it was in a sense a medical success. The operation was a failure but the patient lived. But perhaps, you see, the operation was not a failure. And, if that be so, then I have opened up to you an enormous field of reality which is normally and conventionally forgotten in the discussion of health and sickness. It means that what you and I and the entire medical services, and indeed many people outside medical services, are responsible to is some sort of integration of culture hinging upon what we think is the answer to the mind-body problem.

It is one thing, you see, for me to say, "All right, I went through a large placebo." But this means that not only that sequence but the whole world of physiological experience, health, illness—call it what you will—which is netted together in a sort of vast hypnosis, must move over to assimilate a change of philosophy.

There is, or used to be, an integration of the world in which we live. It got broken up, as far as I can see, somewhere about the beginning of the nineteenth century with the rise of the industrial revolution when the philosophies of Locke and Newton from the seventeenth century really started to take over. To become dominant in our thinking took them a century. And since then what we've had is many scattered bursts of a sense of integration. There was Claude Bernard's Milieu Interne, there was Clark Maxwell with the analysis of a steam engine with a governor, Russel Wallace's discovery of natural selection, and so on. Perhaps the most interesting is the story of Still, the "Old Doctor." It was in the 1880's or so that Still got an idea, at least a hundred years ahead of his time, that the workings of the body were holistic and that that holism was essentially a communicational holism. He got the further idea that the communication whereby the body was integrated passed through the spinal cord. He therefore argued, and here he went a little too far, that any condition of the body should be modifiable by manipulation of the spinal cord. So he founded the science of osteopathy and got read out of the medical church very quickly. He had his big idea 100 years too soon. The idea was a dreadfully powerful one and, like many others who have ideas that are too powerful, he overinflated the idea and went, I think, a little insane. But he trained his students with grueling discipline to a very highly detailed knowledge of neuromuscular and spinal anatomy.

Now it seems to me that what we are responsible to is a holism, a way of thinking, not just about the body but the body-hyphenated-mind as not two separate things but as a single organization. We're responsible to the holism of the relationship between doctor and patient which is not then a one-way causal system but an interactive system. We now know that you breach a holistic structure when you say—or do it without saying it—"I am only going to attend to this end of the relationship. I am going to study the role of the doctor." Role is a half-ass relationship. It's one end of a relationship and you cannot study one end of a relationship. If you attend, for more than a few minutes, to only one end of an interactive system, what you will create is a runaway. That's a system which is addictive, expanding or escalating. It's that simple, there is a mass of mathematical research to back up this statement. The resulting runaway will propose catastrophe. What we have to learn is to attend briefly to the part and then to correct this analytic thinking by attending to the whole. The disastrous and escalating systems are the product of analytic thought uncorrected by attention to the whole.

We have, for example, an ongoing battle between feelings and intellect. There is no choice between rigor and imagination: if you specialize in rigor you end up dead and if you specialize in imagination, you end up in the mental hospital. The integration of those two is one of the things we need, and we imagine "balance" between feeling and intellect. It is an advance to see that a dispute of emphasis between two necessary components, one analytic and one on the whole synthetic, is nonsense. It is better to keep swinging rather than try to hold a single position. The pendulum must be free to swing in the middle between these two. Get stuck at one end and you get a vast supernaturalism which puts the causes of human behavior outside the human individual either in supernaturals or external minds. At the other end, if you get stuck, you create a materialism which is intolerably reductionistic. And the ends propose each other till "miracles" become the materialist's dream of how to escape from his prison.

We are beginning to feel a heaving discomfort about the dispute between holistic medicine and the establishment, between supernaturalisms and materialism. But while the dispute escalates, there is also the beginning of a synthesis. When you combine three very general ideas — (a) the properties of circular trains of causation; (b) the notion of mental life as being composed of differences and news of differences; (c) the fact that, in all mental life and communication, the component notions are related as steps in branching (hierarchies of abstraction)—when these three are combined, you will find that both "materialism" and "supernaturalism" have dissolved away. □

Electro Shock

The following is taken from The History of Shock Treatment edited by Leonard Roy Frank. Contact him at 2300 Webster Street, San Francisco, CA 94115 for copies.

Since its development as a modern psychiatric procedure in the 1930s, millions of people throughout the world have undergone various forms of shock "treatment," especially electro-convulsive treatment (ECT). Psychiatrists have written thousands of articles and books recording and purporting to explain the nature, techniques, and effects of shock treatment, and why and under what circumstances it is used. Most of these writings appear in professional journals and reflect a positive attitude toward the procedure. Someone reading them would get little sense of its seriously disabling effects and the horror and outrage experienced by many who have been shocked. Nor would it be apparent from these materials that there has emerged a small but growing number of professional and lay people who are highly critical of the procedure on moral, legal, and medical grounds.

The major portion of The History of Shock Treatment is comprised of chronologically arranged selections, expressing these conflicting perspectives. The remainder of the book consists of four original articles, a survey of ECT-related deaths as reported in the literature, a roster of psychiatrists who presently employ shock treatment, a glossary of psychiatric terms, and an extensive bibliography. I have assembled these materials in the hope that their dissemination will lead the public to demand an end to the administration of shock treatment and all other psychiatric procedures to individuals against their will or without their informed consent.

My own interest in the subject stems from my having been an involuntary psychiatric inmate for eight months in 1962-1963. Labeled a "paranoid schizophrenic," I was forcibly subjected to a course of combined insulin coma-convulsive treatment (50 insulin coma and 35 electroconvulsive treatments) at Twin Pines Hospital in Belmont, California, a peninsula suburb of San Francisco.

The procedure resulted in a total and permanent amnesia for the two-year period preceding the last shock treatment. What I did and what was done to me while I was institutionalized was hardly discussed with me by the psychiatrists who authorized and administered the procedure, Dr. Norman Reider and Dr. Robert E. James, respectively. What knowledge I have of myself during this time comes mostly from reading of my psychiatric records, which, with the assistance of an attorney, I obtained in 1974.

My recollections of the few weeks immediately following the shock treatment are very sparse. I do recall, however, the intense fear, hunger, and feelings of suffocation I experienced while coming out of the last coma. There were four or five people hovering about my bed as Dr. James asked me to repeat certain childish words and phrases, which I did. Several times I slipped in and out of consciousness and, while barely awake, struggled to free myself from the mechanical restraints I found myself in. Greedily I swallowed a heavily sweetened orange drink.

Another memory I have from this time stands out. About a week later, at the request of one of the nurses, I agreed to talk favorably with Mike Mack, a 20-year-old fellow inmate, about the procedure I had just undergone, and for which he had been scheduled. One morning, soon after my talk with him, I was sitting in the dayroom. I heard his piercing screams coming from the shock treatment section. A nurse hurried over to close the heavy door separating us, thereby shutting out his screams.

After a month's convalescence from the shock treatment, I was released from Twin Pines.

The next five years of my life were spent in regaining the knowledge that I believed the shock treatment had destroyed. In addition to my general readings, I began to study a great deal about psychiatry, and it was not long before I saw that shock treatment was only a small part of a much larger picture of psychiatric inhumanity.

Early in 1964 I ran across an article by Dr. Thomas S. Szasz in Harper's Magazine. I was surprised and encouraged to find brilliantly articulated in this article a number of my own views on psychiatry, which were then only loosely formed. Since that time I have read many of Dr. Szasz's writings and have come to know him personally. I now wish to acknowledge with deep gratitude his influence on my thinking, not only about psychiatry, but also about personal and political liberty.

In recent years, while continuing my studies, I have become heavily committed to working with other people who share my convictions about involuntary psychiatry. In 1972 I joined the staff of Madness Network News (MNN), which had been inaugurated by Sherry Hirsch and Dr. David L. Richman earlier that year. In late 1973 Wade Hudson, who was also on the MNN staff, perceived the need for an organization that would work politically for the goals MNN had been striving to achieve by educational means. In early 1974 Hudson and I co-founded the Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA) in San Francisco.

During the remainder of 1974 NAPA conducted a successful campaign against electroconvulsive treatment at Langley Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute and a partially successful campaign for legislation prohibiting forced shock treatment, forced psychosurgery, and forced drugging in California.

In May 1975 NAPA began distributing 950 copies of The History of Shock Treatment, which I had edited. The booklet sold out within a year. Over the next two years I revised and expanded the original version. This book is the culmination of those labors.

To this day I often recall Mike Mack's screams. He probably has no memory of them, just as I have no memory of my own.

INTRODUCTION

by Lee Coleman, a psychiatrist in private practice in Berkeley, California. In 1973 he co-founded the Committee Opposing Abuse of Psychiatry.

Science is the religion of our age. Given the magnificent achievements of the natural sciences, it is not surprising that we have seen the rise of the social, or "unnatural," sciences. Their practitioners seek legitimacy, usually with success, by taking on the trappings of the scientific method.

Psychiatrists, historically identified with physicians because both were given roles formerly priest-like in nature, have unfortunately been unwilling to say "no thanks" to this link with medicine, and instead they have steadfastly maintained that they could diagnose and treat "diseases" of the mind. They have also seldom recognized that the priestly function includes not only spiritual healing but also social control and the legitimization of the status quo.

It is against this background that the current vogue of biological psychiatry, with its emphasis on physical treatments, should be viewed. The last twenty years or so have seen the psychiatrists pushed out of their preeminent position as psychotherapists; they now find themselves uncomfortably challenged by many new competitors. This threat both to their personal identity and to financial security could not help but provoke a reaction. The resurgence of organic treatments in psychiatry offers its medical practitioners a haven from nonmedical interlopers.

Mind-altering drugs are the mainstay of biological psychiatry. Powerful, social, political, and economic forces share responsibility for their massive use. The pharmaceutical and medical industries, for example, are financially dependent on each other, because the drug manufacturers need the doctor's signature on the prescription pad in order to maintain their huge profits, while medical journals are largely supported by advertisements placed by drug companies.

The resurgence of electroconvulsive treatment (ECT) should therefore not be seen in isolation, but as part of a growing trend to consider emotional distress as symptomatic of brain disease, for which doctors will have a prescription. The rationale for electroshock was formerly couched in psychoanalytic terms, with punitive superegos sometimes requiring repeated shocks of 110 volts for appeasement. Only then could guilt be assuaged and discontent be relieved. It is much more common now to hear equally absurd neuro-physiological explanations, this time the idea being that these electrical assaults somehow rearrange brain chemistry for the better. Most theorists readily agree, however, that these are speculations; in fact, they seem to take a certain satisfaction in shock treatment's supposedly unknown mode of action. They quickly point out, and quite rightly, that many bona-fide medical treatments have been empirically helpful despite the failure of physicians to understand why or how.

The truth is, however, that electroshock "works" by a mechanism that is simple, straightforward, and understood by many of those who have undergone it and anyone else who has truly wanted to find out. Unfortunately, the advocates of electroshock (particularly those who administer it) refuse to recognize what it does, because to do so would make them feel bad.

Electroshock works by damaging the brain. Proponents insist that this damage is negligible and transient—a contention that is disputed by many who have been subjected to the procedure. Furthermore, its advocates want to see this damage as a "side effect." In fact, the changes one sees when electroshock is administered are completely consistent with any acute brain injury, such as a blow to the head from a hammer. In essence, what happens is that the individual is dazed, confused, and disoriented, and therefore cannot remember or appreciate current problems. The shocks are then continued for a few weeks (sometimes several times a day) to make the procedure "take," that is, to damage the brain sufficiently so that the individual will not remember, at least for several months, the problems that led to his being shocked in the first place. The greater the brain damage, the more likely that certain memories and abilities will never return. Thus memory loss and confusion secondary to brain injury are not side effects of electroshock; they are the means by which families (perhaps unwittingly) and psychiatrists sometimes choose to deal with troubled and troublesome persons.

Many of us would question such a dubious means of obliterating, rather than dealing with, emotional distress. We should also consider the moral horror of adding force to an already deceitful situation. Not only are shock candidates fed a mixture of deception and sweet talk about its benefits and risks; they are often coerced into "voluntarily" accepting it. This ultimately stems from the fact that, among medical practitioners, only psychiatrists have the legal authority to incarcerate their "patients" and force "treatments" on them. Force is routinely used in the administration of shock treatment, but nowadays more surreptitiously than in the past, when most subjects were inmates in state mental hospitals. That, fortunately, happens much less often now; instead more and more ostensibly voluntary patients in well-appointed private psychiatric hospitals are being subjected to the same abuse.

Let us examine how this happens. While it is true that the vast majority of people who get shocked are said to be, and technically are, voluntary, many of them are coerced into the hospital by being told that, if they do not sign in "voluntarily," they will be detained under the local emergency commitment law. In other cases, patients go to the hospital freely assuming that they have the fundamental right every other medical patient has to leave at will. But psychiatric patients learn that the psychiatrist may at any time place them on an involuntary status. In fact, the psychiatrist may never have had any intention of allowing the patient to leave, but this awkward disclosure will not be offered the patient upon "voluntary" admission. One is voluntary, in other words, as long as one is willing to stay.

Bearing this hypocrisy and deceit in mind, the hollowness of the psychiatrists' response to recent legislative attempts to regulate shock treatment becomes very apparent. They argue for noninterference in the private relationship between doctor and patient, when the truth is that psychiatrists use state-delegated power to do things that no other physicians are allowed to do. Virtually none of those who are subjected to shock are free to leave the hospital, whether or not they are categorized as voluntary. They are truly psychiatric prisoners, special citizens whom we allow psychiatrists to assault because we carelessly accept the notion that anything labeled treatment and administered by doctors should be left to their discretion.

It is my hope that this collection of writings will encourage at least some psychiatrists to reject such state-delegated power. A few years ago I decided never again to participate in any form of involuntary psychiatry. I believe that this was a crucial moment in my own growth as a human being and as a therapist. The fact that I can truthfully pledge to my clients that I will never under any circumstances use my position as a psychiatrist to force anything on them encourages a trust in our relationship that otherwise would be impossible to achieve. For some, this knowledge is crucial in allowing them to participate at all; they quite justifiably distrust psychiatrists after what they have seen and experienced in psychiatric hospitals. It is psychiatry's state-authorized power, granted in the name of helping those too "sick" to know they need help, that drives away thousands of people who otherwise might wish to develop a therapeutic relationship.

More important than possibly influencing a few psychiatrists, however, is the struggle to arm psychiatric inmates with the knowledge and the will to resist assault by the psychiatric system. I believe that this book, with its demystifying message, will further that struggle. The goal is liberation from psychiatry—the day when no psychiatrist may force anything on anyone. Ultimately it is a movement in which we must all participate. Psychiatrists will never willingly give up their power to force themselves on patients. Such power must be denied them by fundamental changes in our laws, primarily the abolition of civil commitment. In that effort, every reader of this book is a potential participant. ■

From the Gazebo

"We need to find out what nature is doing so we can be in harmony with her."
*Buckminster Fuller

Five year old Mandy spent three months with us. She came to us under pressure, a mass of labels including "autistic," a sloppy catch-all word having little meaning. Her primary contact had been with people who themselves feel pressure to "do something." Often children such as Mandy are literally tortured by those who focus continually on what a child can NOT do and ignore what a child is ABLE to do. Often children such as Mandy with special needs are removed from nature's environment and placed in rooms away from trees, animals, and a variety of children and adults. And yet it was the element of water that opened the door for Helen Keller. As water splashed all over her and she had direct emotional contact with Annie Sullivan she made her connection with the Universe.

With her father, Mandy walked to Gazebo each morning. She didn't like the struggle at first. Soon Mandy and her dad walked hand in hand, without struggle, down the big hill over the little bridge above the creek. There was no pressure of time. I saw Mandy stop on the bridge and listen to the sounds of the creek. At Gazebo Mandy's shoes were taken off and she walked barefoot on grass and gravel, and in mud. Other children asked why Mandy couldn't talk. Before there was a chance for "explanations" I said we didn't know why. "Oh," said the children, who then went about their business contacting Mandy in their own unique styles. Mandy became part of Gazebo. Beverly Silverman, a children's rolfer, came to Gazebo and played with Mandy and worked with her body, sometimes in the sandbox or on the grass, and sometimes in the Gazebo. Patrick did feldenkrais exercises with Mandy in the same places. Other children gathered around and they wanted their turn too! And walking became easier. I heard Mandy laugh and scream with delight when she and five other children played in the little hot tub. She was part of and not apart from. The play was sometimes a bit rough, as children and puppies seem to be, yet Mandy did not cry—I saw Mandy have a good time. I remember one day Mandy waking up from a nap. She was sitting up on a blanket on the grass under a eucalyptus tree. She listened to the sounds of birds singing and leaves rustling, turning her head toward the sounds. Denver, a great big pup, came over and sniffed and, deciding he liked her, began to lick her face. Mandy didn't like that. She fussed and frowned. I watched. Soon she disconnected her clasped hands, raised her arms. She had had enough of this. With all her being she pushed the dog away.

She loved drums. With deliberation and conscious thought Mandy always walked straight for the drums whenever Arthur played them, and she danced as SHE danced, and her excitement showed as did her joy. I saw other children sharing their food and making sure that Mandy ate. I saw other children learning about caring for another. I saw Vivian taking Mandy to the pony and Mandy touching, hugging, and riding upon the pony—interacting with nature; again, her excitement showed. I also saw Mandy crying, loud and clear; and each time she blasted out her clasped hands disconnected, her arms outstretched, and she connected to the universe around her. She played outside all day, bundled up on cold days and naked on warm days. The outside is much better able to handle the energies of children, better than any room that is designed to exclude nature and the universe of which children ARE a part. Over the three month period that Mandy shared herself with us I saw her soul emerge from hiding. She surfaced to be with us. She came to trust us and we "thank you Mandy." Her learning took place within a context to which she could relate. The other children never stopped learning for one minute. ■

On Being By Myself

To be by myself is not only to be alone, though that is the primary meaning of the phrase. Solitude, to be sure, is a condition in which it is eminently possible to remain in the neighborhood of one's self, but no guarantee. And sometimes the company of others is a distraction away from self, but not always. Intimacy may be an entry into the neighborhood of the self. It's possible to be near one's self with another, as when two people separate themselves from others in the Narcissism a deux known as romantic love. But that is a special case, another story. For now let's stay with the more obvious though hardly well known case of being by one's self alone.

Is it an inward turning? We often think of it according to a geography of exterior and interior, as if the self were somehow inside the embodied person. We might do better to characterize this being by one's self in terms of the images that occur to a person when a person is actually alone. We might find that the images themselves are not of caves or interiors, but of quite another kind. Sometimes it is as if one enters a space that is not a space at all, where there is neither inside nor outside, but something like a light, or a sound, or a smell that suffuses consciousness.

Some meditators say that if you do nothing but watch your mind, you will see the most amazing associations. The mind is a kind of maze. One can get lost in it . . . without ever coming closer to self. Coming closer to self may require more than mental meditation, which is a marvelous avenue into the mind, but, at least in some forms, far too internalizing an enterprise to be adequate as an approach to self.

The self expresses itself not in but as our actions—and our non-actions. The self not only thinks but also acts. Being by one's self may include meditation, but it also includes what one does before meditating and after meditating, as long as one is not distracted away from self. It is possible to be distracted away from self in the very act of meditating.

And the spiritual: there too, however contemplatively one worships, if it is the ultimate Other that one worships, one is likely to be distracted away from self. This is not to say that the spiritual disciplines are always distractions from self. On the contrary, the Gnostic and Buddhist paths begin and end in the neighborhood of the self. But there are some very long detours along the way, some spurs from which many never return.

The question is this: Who or what is by whom or what when I am by myself? Who is the possessor of my self other than the self that is possessed? Who is the owner, the subject of the possessive 'my'? There might be several nominees: the person might own a self, or the body might own both personality and a self. Or is there some other candidate for the role of subject? Some other substratum to which all of these terms may be appended like so many predicates in a grammatically compound, complex sentence? What is the chain of grammatical command among these concepts? How are we to diagram the sentences of subjectivity?

Is there one, unambiguous, fundamental substratum? Or a network as subtle as the interlocking directorates among the Fortune 500? Who bosses whom? Do persons have bodies? Do bodies have selves? Do selves have moods? Do moods have personalities? Do personalities have bearers, bodies, moods? Perhaps our moods have moods. And this is the life of the self that seems so simple in the expression, "to be by myself."

We could dodge the embarrassment of these questions by a linguistic analysis of the way people use the phrase, "by myself." We could reduce obscurity like the famous drunk who lost his keys in the middle of the block but hunted for them near the corner, "because it's lighter here." We could illuminate the issue by noting that people use the phrase as a way of saying that no one else is around. Quite simply, they are alone. But if we stop here we would miss those middle of the block obscurities, those absorbing ambiguities of reflection that some of us drift into when no one else is around.

First of all, each stance, whether named a mood or a self, is a stance of the whole self. Just as a bodily stance involves the whole body, from facial expression down to how one holds one's spoon, so each so-called mood pervades the entire self, sufficiently so that each so-called mood represents a self quite distinct from the self represented by the previous "mood."

Of course there is a more or less common attribute these several selves possess, namely the body of a single person. But be not deceived by the name over the door. This "body," while it may properly be the underlying chassis and the substance-subject of the biological animal, is nevertheless not the substance-subject of the self. It is the self that has a body, not a body that has a self. The point will be clearer by looking more closely at the experience of moods.

So let's leave the corner of ordinary language analysis, for that is not where we lost our keys. Let's return to the darkness, to the shadows, and to the shadows within the shadows where several lights glimmer, but each from a different corner. To recall an earlier metaphor, as is only appropriate for a polymorphous obscurity, let's sleuth through the corporate headquarters in the economy of subjectivity. Let's trace down the interlocking directorships among Bodyco, Selfon, Subjectoil, Person International, and Mood Industries. And let's not be surprised to be surprised at which is a wholly owned subsidiary of which while others share controlling interest in the parent company.

Our moods carry our bodies differently. Each different mood is a different self in the sense that each experiences body differently. Just because there is a continuity of matter—skin and bones—it does not follow that the experience of embodiment is the same. And it is a continuity of experience, not the material continuity, that serves as criterion for the existence of a self. No one ever claimed to be able to locate the self with a scalpel. The self is of zero dimension. The self is not a continuity of chemicals, but the self does somehow involve the continuity of body.

Bodily continuity between one action and the next, between one time and another time, might seem to be the subject of properties that are like the properties of a material substance: the body "becomes cold," or "starts to run." But the body that is experienced as a continuant is, for Aphrodisiac moods, a different body-as-experienced from the body-as-experienced when one is saturnine. Thus the succession of so-called moods is a succession of different subjects or substrata. A saturnine self experiences body very differently from the way an Aphrodite experiences body. Differently experienced bodies in different stances are the continuant substrata of what then deserve to be called different substances: not material substances, not the abiding referrents of spatio-temporal designations, but the abiding referrents for a network of information—biographies.

To look at selves this way, as the informational referrents of biographies, is to see several things. First, it explains the curious attractiveness of the metaphor so much used by Ken Kesey and the Merry Pranksters. As Tom Wolfe tells it, they often talked about who was in whose movie. The metaphor has the advantage of offering the phenomena of selfhood in an always already edited form. There may be several different editings of the "same" event. Or there may be several different ways of seeing a given person. The interesting thing is that these different editings, these different movies, are produced and directed not only by different people—as in the four tellings of the "same" events by the different characters in Rashomon. Different movies are also produced and directed by the same person. I interpret my own past differently depending on which self is in the director's chair.

Here lies the difference between the concept of a person and the concept of a self: a person is a legal unit. The person is a reidentifiable agent in society. Persons make promises. The person is held responsible for actions, and if a person is found guilty of breaking the law, that person is bodily incarcerated. But the concept of the self is not so socially defined.

The reidentification of a continuant self is a more subjective matter than the objective location of a person's body. The reidentification of a self is a matter of a continuity of experience, and this is precisely the continuity that a look at selfhood finds only in discontinuous chunks—one morning Aphrodite, another morning Saturn. So it is that the same person contains several selves, several subjects of experience, several bodily substrata who direct and star in distinctly different movies. The several selves are different readings of the events in a single person's life.

Aside from helping to explain the peculiar attractiveness of movies as a metaphor for parallel biographies, the idea of several selves per person sheds light on the experience of ambiguous identity. In recent years the phrase "identity crisis" has entered the everyday vocabulary. The experience of the babble of several selves within a single person is not uncommon. But our tolerance for crosstalk is low. As heirs to a monotheistic culture, we are inclined to believe that one voice must command all others. As above, so below: one lord of lords, one self in charge, each of us an Ahab over the ship's crew of impulses. If we countenance any plurality of command, we prefer to speak of "sub-personalities," Starbucks who preserve the illusion of a neatly ordered hierarchy.

When I am by my self—or should I now say selves—I (we) experience no such neat order. Often there's a kind of peace, but it is the peace of concord rather than command. And sometimes, of course, there's mutiny.

What is the remedy? Or is a remedy what's wanted? As with any group, there's talk of exile for the rabble rousers, or an imposition of law'n'order by some strong leader. But the solution, such as it is, usually involves letting everyone speak his or her piece. It takes time. Sometimes it's boring. Some of my selves are so appallingly predictable. But the group process isn't. The outcome is almost never what any single self would have foreseen. So being by myself is seldom dull. In so populated a solitude I hardly feel that to be by myself is to be alone. ■

There are a variety of ways to experience Esalen, ranging from a visit to the hot springs on a week-night to a long-term stay as a student or resident. The week-end and five-day workshops described throughout the catalog are the standard route for coming to Esalen and learning the various methods of personal growth and self-exploration that are available here. The Experiencing Esalen workshops are particularly valuable as a kind of smorgasbord introduction to some of these many practices (such as gestalt, massage, sensory awareness, etc.); from such a sampling, the participant can then choose that approach which feels most appropriate, and then pursue it in subsequent seminars. For those who wish an extended stay of a month or more, the Ongoing Residence Program is ideal. Other long-term programs include the "month-longs" coordinated by individuals such as Stan Grot, Al Drucker, and David Schiffman, which frequently involve didactic seminars as well as experiential workshops, and can be particularly useful for professionals and graduate students.

A very popular way of being at Esalen and one that allows a much greater involvement with the place and its community at a lower expense is the Work-Study Program, which entails working with the Esalen staff as well as participating in an on-going workshop designed specifically for that program. See page 15 for more information and an application form.

In addition, besides all the catalog programs, there are a large number of other events which enrich life at Esalen. There is a regular Tuesday Night Forum where various writers and thinkers, both visiting and resident, share their ideas with the community. On Wednesday nights, there are films, dance performances, choirs, puppet shows, boogies, and other forms of creative entertainment. Bodywork of various kinds is available by appointment with individual practitioners, including massage, deep-tissue, polarity, and rolfing. Individual sessions are also available for various types of process work, including gestalt, neo-reichian emotional release, vision improvement, music gestalt, etc. Finally there is a Community Workshop program which goes on daily, and provides many opportunities for engaging in personal self-exploration or learning new appraches to human growth.

Work-Study Program

In the process of becoming educated, we are taught that it is more important to be involved with the outside world than with our Selves. We are taught to become Ego-involved—involved with manipulating things and people. We are taught to experience our selves primarily in relation to others; we lose touch with our essence.

From this perspective, we offer an opportunity to return to our Selves within the working context of the Esalen community. Our faculty for this program is our environment — staff — community.

— Learning/discovering the use of your own energy in work . . . for your SELF.
— Living together (close to others) operatively and co-operatively in a unique, high intensity environment.
— Contact/communication with the people of Esalen via group work and in day-to-day Esalen happenings.

An opportunity for:
— SELF-regulation
— SELF-examination
— SELF-contemplation
and if you choose
— SELF-reevaluation
— Facilitated by removal from your ordinary living context.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week in such areas as gardening, landscaping, maintenance, kitchen, and cabins. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs, and work assignments are made according to these requirements. The cost of the program is $350 for the first month, $250 for the second, and $200 for the third month.

The Work-Study program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program, emotionally and physically, and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share—contact—play/alone-together. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates.

Accommodations are shared, with up to three people to a room, at South Coast Center, a staff living complex which is 1½ miles north of Esalen. The Work-Study Program, lasting 28 days, is a full time workshop in itself. The work commitment to the community, group process work, and teaching seminars make up a busy schedule for participants. Enrolling in the Esalen catalog workshops is therefore discouraged, since the extra involvements tend to interfere with the fulfillment of the Work-Study Program.

Available dates: May 18-June 15; June 15-July 13; July 13-August 10; August 10-September 7; September 7-October 5; October 5-November 2; November 2-November 30; November 30-December 28.

ESALEN SEMINARS

Experiencing Esalen

Experiencing Esalen Staff

Coordinated by Janet Zuckerman Boeve & Joan Fiore

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificence of the Big Sur coast.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls) and Anger and the Rocking Chair (Lederman).

Gestalt Practice

Esalen Gestalt Staff
Coordinated by Joan Fiore, Christine Price & Richard Price

The Esalen Gestalt Staff includes Leonard Bearne, Janet Zuckerman Boeve, Laura deNuccio, Joan Fiore, Jeffrey Kent, Nancy Kaye Lunney, the NINE, Jenny O'Connor, Christine Price, Richard Price and others.

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustible.
—Lao Tzu

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Paricipants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is enfoldment, wholeness, growth rather than adjustment, cure or accomplishment.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J. C. Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach). $280

Weekend of May 2-4

Weekend Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

We will assist you in acquiring the basic tools you will need to begin to explore massage. By demonstrating for you and practicing with you it is our intent to introduce you to the major muscle sets of the body and to help you to establish a sense of an effective beginning, development, and closing of a full-body massage. Emphasis will be on our own grounding and internal awareness, on learning to recognize the areas in ourselves and others that need relief, and on learning to be aware of the quality of our own touch. $150

Thinking Body/Moving Mind/Understanding Heart
Betty Fuller

Movement is a primary means to learning: learning about one's self, one's relationship to others, one's place in the universe. Happy side effects of such learning can include an enriched and enhanced self image and spontaneous and appropriate self expression along with greatly reduced stress, friction, tension, and effort. The workshop includes trager and feldenkrais body-mind approaches, guided imagery, simple meditations and massage at the baths. Feelings, encounters, understanding, and realizations generated in the workshop may be shared and processed in the group. $150

Visions and Economics
George Leonard & Paul Hawken

With conventional social policies in disarray, new approaches to national and international problems are urgently needed, and it now appears that ideas that have come out of the human potential movement over the past 15 years are becoming highly relevant. During this weekend, George Leonard, a long-time human potential activist and visionary, will lead participants in proposing transformational approaches to the challenges of the day; Paul Hawken, an economist and writer, will discuss their economic, political, and social costs.

How do specific visionary alternatives in such areas as energy, health care, tax reform, economic planning, and education relate to realities of the existing political climate, economic structures, and matrix of social consensus? We will explore the dynamic interplay between a variety of new age ideas and their practical applications in a number of fields. $150

Week of May 4-9

Exploring Your Creative Process
Nancy Kaye Lunney

Through gestalt, imagery, music, writing, drawing, videotape and spontaneity we will investigate aspects of the creative experience, from blocking and stagefright to euphoria. Focus will be on self awareness and on developing the confidence and freedom necessary for the creative journey. Individual projects can be developed during the workshop based on each person's major interest, and individual work in a supportive group setting will be stressed. Please bring whatever special materials you think you might want to play with. Piano accompaniment will be available. This workshop is suitable for non-professionals as well as professionals in the creative and performing arts. $330

Health, Longevity, and Optimal Well-Being
Ken Dychtwald

In this workshop, a comprehensive "six point" program for health, longevity, and optimal well-being will be presented. Drawing from the latest information and techniques from the holistic health, physical fitness, and human potential fields, this innovative program includes practical methods for 1) strengthening and vitalizing the bodymind; 2) enhancing bodymind flexibility and limberness; 3) heightening aerobic fitness and endurance; 4) improving relaxation and reducing stress; 5) enforcing the body's natural resistance to disease; and 6) heightening mental and emotional functioning. Through a comfortable blend of lectures, demonstrations, experiential exercises, and daily massage sessions at the Esalen baths, each participant will learn ways to develop a personalized program for lifelong health and well-being. $330

May 4-30

Alternative Futures / Stanislav and Christina Grof

For workshop description, see Special Programs, pp. 36-37. $1,250

Weekend of May 9-11

Awakening the Magician Within / Emmett Miller

Whether or not we have as yet learned it, there is a magician within each of us. His magic wand is belief. If we believe we are sick, we are sick; if we believe we are stuck, we are stuck. But all coins, even magic ones, have two sides. If we believe we are growing stronger every day, we are; if we believe in our creativity, our problems joyfully solve themselves. In this seminar we will investigate and discover what truth there is in each of these statements for us, individually. Our explorations will be experiential, using deep relaxation, visualization, music, movement, and selective awareness. $150

Close Encounters: An Experiment in Meeting and Contacting Other Human Beings
Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop provides an opportunity for you to pay attention to the quality of your interpersonal contact, particularly to your willingness to take risks and to your ability to stay true to your own feelings while meeting and contacting others.

You may discover your own rhythm of contact and withdrawal; you may discover how you sabotage yourself from having more satisfying relationships; you may discover you're getting exactly what you want from your relationships. You may discover anything; you may discover nothing. You may even discover that you're in charge. $150

Week of May 11-16

Sound & Movement as a Healing Art: A Celebration with Elisa Lodge, Esalen Musicians & Staff

Coming together
In stillness, in motion. . .
Celebrating our joyfulness and harmony.
Moving freely,
Opening to the pleasures of our bodies
Gently shedding fears,
Carried by our voices, and our movements
To the richness of our feelings,
Creating ourselves
With music, dance, and the Healing use of touch.
$330

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

For workshop description see page 17. $330

Reichian/Gestalt Intensive
Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop combines neo-reichian breath and body work, to facilitate physical/emotional release, with gestalt work, to facilitate contact, integration, and self-responsibility.

We provide the time, the space, the opportunity to move at your own pace from dis-ease to ease, from fragmented to whole, from self-discounting to self-validating, from role-playing to authentic self-expression, from helpless victim to active participant in your personal destiny, or from wherever you happen to be coming to wherever you're growing. You might explore your dreams, your tensions, your madness, or your options; take room to breathe or to explode, soak in nurture or exorcise demons, finish past unfinished business, or examine present concerns.

First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to experiment with the quality of interpersonal contact through group interactions. $330

Weekend of May 16-18

Steps to an Ecology of Mind / Gregory Bateson

In the last twenty years, the theoretical advances in cybernetics and advances in the study of personal interaction have led to new ways of looking at the living world, including everything from biology to poetry and politics. The workshop will explore these ways of perceiving and thinking. $150

Couples Workshop: Intimacy and Personal Growth
Betsy Hand & Gerald Smith

This workshop will focus on deepening contact and strengthening mutual support while expanding as individuals. Some of the time will be spent using structured approaches for enhancing communication, being separate, trusting, and fighting fairly. The approaches will be tailored to what each of you brings to the weekend. $150

Week of May 18-23

Gestalt, Bioenergy & Human Contact; Old & New Learning Integrated / Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self and our interdependence with physical and social environments. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $330

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom to Be / David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness, as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in the techniques of gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $330

The Gazebo ™: An Alternative Education
Janet Lederman

The Gazebo is a model for restructuring educational systems, both physically and philosophically. It is a new concept of "school," involving the inviting of children back into society, the integration of generations, and the re-introduction of life into the content of learning.

The workshop will be both didactic and experiential. We will investigate alternative ways of financing education and plan ways to revitalize neighborhoods as viable teaching resources by generating community involvement. The form, structure, and activities of the Gazebo will be available to participants. So far our youngest student is 9 months old and our oldest is 75. Esalen's Gazebo is more than an idea. It is an actuality. Limited to 12 participants. $150

Exploring Self-Acceptance / David Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self-concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter methods, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $150

Energy Systems and Gestalt Process / Alan Schwartz

Read the May 18-23 description. This will be a weekend to explore and understand our individual energy systems and their relation to how we both make contact and inhibit contact. One focus will be on integration via energy release techniques. Another will be on the simple task of being present, physiologically and emotionally, being aware that contact refers to our consistent awareness process and the autonomous expression of who we are. $150

Symbols of Transformation
Ralph Metzner & Angie Arrien

This seminar is an intensive experiential study of symbols as tools of personal growth. Symbols can expand one's perception of self and others, increase insight, and stimulate new areas of self-expression and creativity. We will consider a variety of symbols: psychologically, as archetypes of individuation, and cross-culturally, as universal constants. The symbols to be studied and experienced include: sun and moon, trees, flowers, circles/wheels/mandalas, totem animals, light and fire, the elements, sacred mountains, the body and its parts, the journey path, and others. Some of the sources of symbolism that we will draw on are astrology, alchemy, the tarot, mythology, and folklore of all cultures. Special attention will be given to the uses and significance of symbols in dreams, art, and the helping professions. Special symbolic creative projects will be part of the seminar. $330

Un-Covering Creative Energy / Myrtle Franklin

As children we were closer to the source of our creativity and were free enough to express it informally. Over the years we gradually found barriers to inhibit it. Now, through various awareness exercises, we can uncover and express this energy through whatever medium is naturally our own: sound, color, writing, movement. We will focus on the process of expression-appreciation. $330

Many Dimensional Self
Jay Ogilvy & Heather Maycock Ogilvy

The question, "Who am I?" may have more than one answer. During this weekend we'll explore both the theory and practice of multiple selfhood. What is the self? What does it mean to allow several selves per person? What are the social implications, e.g., when one self makes promises that a person's other selves have to keep? Must there be one "captain of the ship?" What is the price of a well developed ego, a single identity? Do we bring on our identity crises, mid-life crises, dying relationships, over-consuming careers by such one-dimensionality? Might we instead evoke the many gods within us and free the energy of our shadow selves? We will approach these questions both cognitively and experientially using body, mind and heart. Remembering myths other than monotheism, playing with theories other than ego psychology, working to hear more of our voices, we hope to find integration through communication rather than subordination.

Black Dance / James Xavier Nash & Jasmine Nash-Lutes

This workshop will include massage and dancing, exploring the rituals of Black disco dancing in contemporary American society. High-low energy, sensual and sexual rhythm and syncopation, hand clapping, foot stomping, using African drums, we will use our voices and recorded popular Black music. $150

Week of June 1-6

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff

Advanced Massage Intensive
Esalen Massage Staff

Whether your massage experience is professional or avocational, our aims in this course are to take you deeper into your own work and to provide whatever instruction we can to add to your understanding of the body and to your repertoire of techniques. In addition to morning and afternoon practice sessions with various instructors, we will use yoga, movement, evening lectures and discussions, and demonstrations of specific practices to stimulate ourselves out of our old patterns of working and increase the range of conditions with which we can deal effectively.

The following concerns will receive emphasis: how to sustain your energy through a day of treatments, how to clear yourself of the negative energy released by your client, how to use weight and leverage to your advantage, and so on. As we reach more and more deeply into one another, emotional changes are triggered by the unravelling of blocked muscular energy. As these emotions present themselves, they will provide us with some first-hand practice in productive ways of moving through them.

The format and pace of this course will presume some previous massage experience—at least an introductory five-day intensive or its equivalent in your own practice. $330.

Zero Balancing / Fritz Smith

Zero balancing is a body handling system utilizing structural acupressure to deal directly with the interface between body structure and energy flow. The workshop will be both didactic and experiential.

Traditional anatomy, physiology, and kinesiology will be reviewed and then reinterpreted from an alternative viewpoint indicating the often overlooked imbalances which occur within our foundation joints. These imbalances may lead to chronic body pain, and frequently represent an ongoing energy drain from the body. Based on laws of nature, Zero Balancing is both a pleasure to give and to receive, and results seen are immediate, gratifying and often inspiring, with seemingly little effort on our part. While there will be both theoretical presentations and practical demonstrations, the main emphasis of the workshop will be toward individual instruction. This workshop is limited to persons certified in the healing professions. $330

Awareness Through Movement & Functional Integration: The Feldenkrais Method / Mia Segal

Through a series of simple, gentle exercises devised by Moshe Feldenkrais we learn to know ourselves and find many new choices of behavior to enrich our lives. $150

Designing a Sustainable Society: The Solar Village
Sim Van der Ryn, Lillie Leonard & Friends of Solar Village

In the next generations, society will be physically transformed from today's total dependence on depletable fossil fuels to reliance on continuously available "income" energy from the sun.

This workshop will explore how the solar transition can come about in your community through the use of solar and conservation concepts in buildings, local food production, transportation, and waste recycling. A paradigm for the solar transition is the Solar Village concept first developed for the re-use of a large federally owned site in Marin County.

The Solar Village concept will be presented as a model whose features can be applied in cities and suburbs everywhere. We will explore the connection between sustaining personal balance and energy balance in our homes and communities. $150

New Perspectives in Psychotherapy and Self-Exploration / Stanislav & Christina Grof

We will focus on the observations from modern consciousness research that have revolutionary implications for the theory and practice of psychotherapy. The suggested revisions include an expanded model of the human mind, new techniques and strategies of self-exploration, and powerful unconventional mechanisms of personality change. The participants will have the opportunity to explore the new principles in experiential sessions combining pranayama breathing, evocative music, body work, and mandala drawing. Special attention will be paid to the problems of handling spiritual emergencies as part of an effort to create a network of professionals offering help in transpersonal crises. $350

Experiencing Esalen / Experiencing Esalen Staff / For workshop description see page 17. $170

The American Way of Birth and Death / Jessica Mitford, Bob Treuhaft, Suzanne Arms & Don Creevy

Jessica Mitford and Bob Treuhaft wrote The American Way of Death in 1963, giving us our first sustained look at what they called the funeral industry's "grotesque cloud-cuckooland where the trappings of Gracious Living are transformed, as in a nightmare, into the trappings of Gracious Dying." In 1975, Suzanne Arms wrote Immaculate Deception, an expose of the "machine age of birth" based on invasive medical procedures and technological assumptions which "treat normal birth as a risky, dangerous, painful, and abnormal process in which pregnant women have no other choice than to submit graciously." Both of these best-sellers challenge the myth of expertise that has grown up around birth and dying. In cataloging the abuses of the funeral and hospital birth industries, both books have helped inspire alternatives to the control these monopolies have over dying and being born in America. The home birth movement, the proliferation of midwives, the development of community homes for birth and dying, and the regulation of the funeral industry, are among a number of reforms which figure prominently in the current revisioning of the American way(s) of birth and death. Author and long-time political activist Jessica Mitford and her husband Bob Treuhaft (appointed by Governor Jerry Brown to chair California's State Board of Funeral Directors) will join with Suzanne Arms and Don Creevy (co-founders of The Birth Place, a community birth home in Menlo Park), for a wide-ranging discussion of these and related issues. $170

The Moving Center / Gabrielle Roth

An American shamanic ritual using music, poetry, sacred dance, and ritual theatre experiences to mirror the mind, catalyze the heart, and open the body as a channel for creative energies. Through collective rituals which ground us in our sameness we explore our individual dreams and visions and learn to share our differences. $170

Week of June 22-27

Self Care and Professional Competence: A Workshop for Health Professionals
Jan McCann, Cynthia Rogers & Julian Silverman

This workshop is concerned with teaching/learning a point of view and a method for being at ease in one's day-to-day health care work environment:

—contacting and communicating with others comfortably
—being careful with one's self so as to able to care for others more effectively. For additional information see page 16. $350

Unity / Gabrielle Roth

This is a five-day shamanic healing ritual designed to inspire and channel the religious, sexual, and creative aspects of life energy into unity and expression. Through music, sacred dance, poetry, and ritual theatre processes, we will explore and present our unique experiences of life's waves, rhythms, and cycles. The moving center tools are designed to release our gifts, talents, and potentials to be the most of who we are. $350

Vital Signs / Pat & Neil Lamper

The Surgeon General has determined that vital signs are important to our health. Medical doctors have scopes to chart them. We will use gestalt, imagery, breathing, movement, sound, and fun to detect these vital signs, which are right under our noses anyway. Thus we can own these signs, and enhance them, and use them. Thus we can be more present for ourselves and those we love. Thus our lives can be more vital. And we can be at peace and vibrant at the same time. No special jargon, skills, knowledge, or masks needed. Just the miracle of being here. $350

Weekend of June 27-29

Close Encounters: An Experiment in Meeting and Contacting Other Human Beings
Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent For workshop description see May 9-11. $170

Steps to an Ecology of Mind Gregory Bateson
In the last twenty years, the theoretical advances in cybernetics and advances in the study of personal interaction have led to new ways of looking at the living world, including everything from primary biology to mind and politics. The workshop will explore these ways of perceiving and thinking. $170

From Stress to High Level Wellness Preventing Burn-Out in the Helping Professions
Joy Holloway & Barbara McNeill
An experiential approach to high level wellness. Learn what high level wellness is about. We will assist you in developing skills in the areas of self responsibility, stress control, nutrition and physical activity, and in promoting the excellence and clarity which are synonymous with optimum health. We will create our own wellness plans and, through personal experience, learn the importance of self responsibility in active health and well being. We will also encourage the shifting of beliefs towards a new paradigm, one in which we are no longer rescuing patients, clients, friends from disease, but rather teaching self-responsibility by our personal examples. $170

Week of June 29-July 4

Feelings and Consciousness / Clair Killen

A non-confrontive group experience of movement, emotional release, and cognitive integration. Using radix practices, music, massage, and vision work we will explore our beliefs, muscular armor, and self-esteem. $350

Lower Back Syndrome / Ruthy Alon

In our over-tense and under-moving culture, lower back discomfort is a common issue. This workshop offers self-healing processes for kinesthetic functioning from the feldenkrais method, awareness through movement.

As we experiment with the patterns of primal evolution by which nature has prepared us for mature movement, we arrive at healing insights. We relearn the grammar of flow and grace as we reconstruct our development through early infancy.

We train our organism into pain-free, lively coordination as we experience a range of mindful alternative movements selected from our natural vocabulary. We challenge our body intelligence to make new choices in the way we use ourselves. In this autonomous learning process the search for ease is our guide to well-being. The re-education of the lower back function is explored in the context of its interactions with the whole body. The style of movement is gentle and moderated to personal pace, which encourages listening to inner quality rather than performing mechanically. Emphasis is placed on our relationship to gravity and its effect on alignment, as well as on our ability, on the organic level, to accept being held and to allow love in. $350

The Eighties: Time to Expand Your Experience
Frank Rubenfeld & Mari Krieger

From me-centeredness to social and cosmic consciousness; from left-brain linearity to right-brain body experiencing; from gender typing to androgyny. In this workshop we will use social gestalt and body therapy to facilitate a fuller participation in both inner and outer experience. $350

Five-day Massage Intensive / Esalen Massage Staff

An introduction to the language of the body, this course will attempt to view the human interior through various windows: yoga, feldenkrais, movement, demonstration and work sessions, and evening lectures and discussions. Every major portion of the body will be given detailed attention, and your instructors will acquaint you with their individualized styles. In the morning and afternoon practice sessions the focus will be on your integrating this information in your own manner and evolving your own style of working with the body. Our intent is not to teach you to imitate, but to help you learn to become effective; the rest you will teach yourselves. $350

Weekend of July 4-6

Transpersonal Psychology: The CITP Experience
Bob Frager, David Zeller & CITP Faculty and Students

At the California Institute of Transpersonal Psychology, we have developed a Ph.D. program focused on individual and group transformation. Our emphasis is on balanced development of body, intellect, emotions, and spirit. This weekend will provide an intensive and joyful introduction to the CITP curriculum, including work in aikido, interpersonal process, Jungian psychology, major spiritual traditions, chanting, meditation, and play. $170

A Weekend Primer on Constitutional Holistic Medicine/focusing on homeopathy, acupuncture, & deep tissue work) / Al Drucker

This workshop will examine energetic medicine, that which deals directly with the energy field and the vital force. The three principal systems that will be discussed and demonstrated are different healing paths with a common curative goal—the complete restoration of health through the Law of Cure. We will study the subtle transforming role of disease in the spiritual evolutionary development of the individual, seeing it as the catalytic agent that puts us back on track with our deeper life's purpose and mission. But we will also explore ways of pure healthful and heartful living and sensitive attunement which permits us to achieve our life's goals without illness. Early morning sessions will be devoted to chanting and meditation followed by yoga or t'ai chi. We will also schedule a massage session with herbal bath and learn about herbs and flowers. Meals will consist largely of natural living foods, coming mostly from our own organic garden. For additional information see page 16. $170

Reichian Gestalt: A Workshop for Contact and Release / Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita)

This workshop provides a safe environment to experience consciously the process of our own unfolding—physically, emotionally, energetically, sexually, spiritually.

As we become aware of the ways we hold back our self-expression (flow of life energy) we then have the choice to let go. By contacting tension (stuck, accumulated energy) and allowing emotions which have been locked and frozen in our bodies, often since early infancy, we then have the opportunity to open ourselves to the creative flow of life energy within each of us. As we contact and allow our hurts and pain, we can then increase our capacity for pleasure and joy. As we allow our expression of anger, which is a powerfully expansive, outward directed energy, we can open and deepen our capacity for love and compassion. As we contact and allow our expression of fear, we can then move toward expanding our capacity for trusting—ourselves and others. Learning to trust our bodies, our responsiveness and movement, is a liberating experience.

Utilizing reichian emotional release, gestalt practice, bioenergetics, feldenkrais, massage, reflexology, dance, meditation, and various other bodymind approaches, we can move toward expanding our capacity for trust and fulfillment. $350

The Theatre of Being / Elisa Lodge

The stage is set:
the Ocean, the sky, the mountains, and ourselves . . .
The plot:
the manner in which we move, live, and love . . .
In this experience of creative exploration, we will touch into the inner sources where our beauty and power begin.
The tools:
structural patterning, acting techniques, visualization, meditation with sound, movement, music, and massage. All for the benefit of releasing ourselves, our hearts and souls into the world. $350

The Psychology and Politics of Cults
Arthur Deikman, Zev Putterman & Daphne Greene

Against the backdrop of 916 deaths at Jonestown, the battle between Scientology and the I.R.S., the legal disputes surrounding Synanon, and the world-wide influence of the Rev. Moon, the issue of religious cults raises questions of many kinds—psychological, political, spiritual, and moral. A central dilemma involves definition: what is a cult? What are the aims and methods of various contemporary religious groups? What are appropriate standards for addressing questions of group tyranny and abuse of members without denying our traditions of dissent, non-conformity, and freedom? Psychiatrist Arthur Deikman proposes that the proliferation of cults stems in part from Western culture's naivete in its approach to mysticism. Zev Putterman contends that the cult situation must be viewed with compassion as a metaphor for the collective search for values in our society. Daphne Green is active in the movement to expose the Unification Church as a fraudulent, authoritarian front using fear and indoctrination to maintain its membership. This workshop offers a neutral and open forum for these group leaders to join with participants in considering the nature of various religious groups and the psychology of their leaders and members; the question of "brainwashing" as it relates to initiation practices of various kinds; the functions cults fulfill for members; and the more abstract question of whether ordinary institutions (public education, organized religion, the medical establishment, political parties, the military) can be considered cults in terms of their influence in the life of our culture. $170

Open Psychodrama Encounter
Walt & Maurica Anderson

This workshop is a flexible weekend's work and play using a variety of encounter, gestalt, and body-movement approaches, with emphasis on psychodrama—the enactment of improvised life scenes as a way of expressing feelings, gaining insight, working through interpersonal conflicts, developing more openness and spontaneity, and having fun. The degree of active involvement is up to the individual. $170

Core Dynamics—Body Energetics / Hector Prestera

Using body release methods, body reading, color reading, and psychic intuition, each participant will have an opportunity to contact areas of body armoring which prevent the core self from spontaneous release. Freeing the "core self" is the object of this weekend.

Suggested reading: The Body Reveals (Kurtz & Prestera). $170

Wisdom and the Magic of Transformation
Huston Smith

The great historical traditions—Hinduism, Buddhism, Taoism, Sufism, and the West—will be combed for insights that bear directly on the living of our daily lives. Our search is for wisdom and method; theory that connects with the heart so that it is not just a head trip. We will consider body (elementary yoga), mind (reflection on life's meaning and purpose), soul (approached aesthetically through films in the evenings), and spirit (basic meditation, kindergarten zen). $350

The Uses of Personal Power / Jack Downing

Personal power is the power to act. When we finish our private, unfinished business, we return to our social orientation again. We find that we have new powers and abilities. How do we use our new freedom? What is worth having and doing? What personal powers do we actually have? Looking at these and other topics will be the subject of our workshop. Limited to 15 intermediate and advanced seekers. $350

Trager Psychophysical Integration and Mentastics Basic Training
Betty Fuller, Sheila Merle Johnson & Gail Stewart

In each professional training workshop, participants are instructed in trager table work, receiving directly from the instructors and giving and receiving from each other under supervision. In addition, participants learn to practice and teach mentastics, learn basic communication skills, clearing exercises, simple meditations, and have time in group to share and process their experience. These trainings are open to professionals in education, body work, holistic health care, counseling, psychology, medicine, chiropractic, sports, performing arts, and other disciplines which see movement as a primary means of learning. Applications must specify professional background. $730

Healing the Myth of Separation: A Celebration of Our Divinity
Maitreya Stillwater & Maloah Devi-Stillwater

"When you have accepted your mission to extend peace you will find peace, for by making it manifest you will see it."

A Course In Miracles

This weekend will be set aside for remembering who we are behind our illusions. We will join together for healing the idea of separation, studying the principles of A Course in Miracles, and attuning to our inner guidance. The experience will include meditation, sharing, and singing the songs of Maitreya. $170

Week of July 20-25

The Spiritual Path: Promises and Pitfalls
Stanislav & Christina Grof

We will combine observations from modern consciousness research and from various traditional practices to explore the process of spiritual awakening. The participants will have the opportunity to confront transpersonal areas within themselves in various experiential exercises, combining evocative slide-shows, music, controlled breathing, mandala drawing, and individual work if appropriate. Special attention will be paid to the understanding of and approach to "spiritual emergencies" which can occur in the context of the kundalini process and other forms of personal evolution. $350

Emerging Awareness and Love, Humans and Dolphins / John & Toni Lilly

Spend five days with John and Toni Lilly; dolphin research and self programming; the JANUS program on communication with dolphins is under way as of December, 1979. Progress to date plus tapes and movies . . . Your beliefs and their consequences and revisions. Suggested reading: Man & Dolphin (1961); Mind of the Dolphin (1967); Human Biocomputer (1967); Center of the Cyclone (1972); Simulations of God (1974); Dyadic Cyclone (1976); The Deep Self (1977); Lilly on Dolphins (1975); The Scientist (1978); Communication Between Man and Dolphin (1978). $350

The Celebration of Nature
Michael Tierra (Ananta)

Wild herbs, massage, chanting, movement, yoga, meditation, balanced diet, and fasting to integrate body, mind, and spirit. We will explore the special uses of herbs and foods and how to use them to influence positive states of being. We will engage in the ancient "simpler's art" of gathering and using herbs in teas, anointing oils, salves, and baths to ease and free old tensions and blocks, and to reveal new pathways to creativity and wholeness.

As a rhythmic and melodic complement, we will utilize the sounds and chants of nature from the traditions of Africa, India, America, and throughout the planet with appropriate dances to give fuller expression to our being. We will take gentle walks through the garden and surrounding forests to discover the wild herbs and trees which we can use for food and medicine. $350

Transformations: An Energy Release Workshop / Maureen Lavender

We will focus in this workshop on freeing our musculature from emotional reactiveness. Then the energy tied up in holding patterns of "cannot" and "have not" can be transformed into responsible action. We will look at ways in which we misuse energy and explore the power inherent in conscious ways of breathing, moving, and thinking. In trying to avoid pain—or pleasure—we frequently shrink from or impulsively discharge our energy. Overcontracted or extended we make poor containers for the life force. To restore potency we will use emotional release, bioenergetic, rebirthing, and yogic breath movements, symbolic imagery, and connective tissue massage. $170

Surrender to Self
Merri Goldenson (Devarani) & John Majuri

Deep inside each of us is the person we were created to be. Our life struggle is to free this person and feel the love, music, and harmony of life in our being. We will learn ways to soften and surrender our body armor and allow our life force to flow. We will explore our feelings of grief, guilt, anxiety, anger, love, trust, joy, and pleasure. Holistically we will use the principles of chiropractic radix intensive, emotional release, bates vision, massage, meditation, and dance. $350

Be Your Own Child—A Movement Journey
Nitza Broide Miller

Discover the child in you—its joy, sadness, fear, excitement, anger, curiosity, wondering, fun, sensuality, loneliness, playfulness.

Reconnect with the child in you so that it is nurtured, loved, cared for and allowed to grow.

In this workshop we'll learn to give the child in ourselves permission to be. Through dance, energy flow, touch, imagery, relaxation and dynamic breathing we shall tap on our hidden and forgotten desires and secret wants and allow them to be expressed. We shall nurture them in loving-caring movement adventure. Touch and movement rituals of self care will be learned and practiced. $350

Integrity / David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will, and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength, and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical, and mental potentials and how they affect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others. $520

Findhorn Today / John Syer and Nick & Henrietta Rose

In this introduction to the Findhorn community in northern Scotland, Findhorn members use audio-visual presentation, group meditation, and discussion to share its spiritual vision of itself as a planetary center within a growing network of Light. $170

Integrating Knowledge with Being / Earl Ettienne

We are developing a greater understanding of a universe that is constantly making itself apparent to us. This evolving knowledge is not only bringing us insights into the predominant harmonious interplays apparent throughout the cosmos, but also enables us to more fully comprehend how we can bring ourselves and our imperiled planetary society in line with the creative supportive interplay of nature. This seminar will explore charting a plan or path of personal and group survival, using as a basis the knowledge inherent in the organization and dynamic flexibility of biological systems. Examples from the processes of biological energy and resource management will be used to model systems that we can live by. Topics to be discussed range from the evolution of living systems from "cosmic dust" to their organization into self-contained energy-efficient conscious aesthetic entities. $170

Vision Improvement—Our Willingness to See
Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita)

This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and our selves to see. Utilizing deep emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the bates system, nutrition, and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience and expand—enabling us to look newly at our selves and our world in which we live. Limited to 12 participants. $350

Findhorn: A Vision of Wholeness
John Syer and Nick & Henrietta Rose

Started in 1962, the Findhorn Foundation in northern Scotland has been a point of inspiration for many thousands of members and guests. The essence of Findhorn is the power of its vision of wholeness, where individuals experience a process of transformation which reveals their true identity as spiritual beings. Findhorn members will share through audio-visuals, meditation, work, and play, elements of the Findhorn experience: the nature kingdom, group meditation and attunement, working the laws of manifestation, building the network of Light, and nourishing the seeds of a New Age. $350

"What was the nature of your face before you were born?"

—Zen Koan

We have to learn to feel, taste, look, and speak without the restrictive authority of an idealized self-image, an overlay of do's and don'ts dulling our senses and confusing our minds.

We will focus on bringing into the foreground of consciousness an awareness of our basic functioning, unclouded by habits, ambitions, or fears. Being in direct contact with our own naturalness opens us to a fuller connection with our innate talents and capacities, freeing us for new delight and depth in living and being. $350

For workshop description see July 4-6. $170

Let Go/Let Be / Betty Fuller

Movement is a primary means to learning about my self, about my relationships with others, and about my place in the universe. This workshop includes physical and mental stress reduction and alignment exercises, guided imagery, nutritional information, and moving meditations, as well as the integrative bodymind approaches of trager, feldenkrais, and rolf-nolte. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual followup are presented. The schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths and participation in the work of the Esalen community. $170

I Ching as Visual and Kinetic Dance of Life
Al Chung-Liang Huang, Chih-chang Lee & Jay Goldfarb

A new way of perceiving and cultivating the self. We will experience the teachings of I Ching through brush calligraphy, writing, and dancing the Chinese characters of each core hexigram, and polarize them in the yin/yang harmony of t'ai chi. We will also learn the Yarrow Stalk Ritual, and meditate the everchanging human psyche through classic Chinese theatre style face paintings. Bring a basic calligraphy set with at least one large size brush, a bottle of ink, and a pad of newsprint.

Gestalt Synergy:
An Integrative Approach to Self Actualization
Ilana Rubenfeld

The sea has waves . . . waves are the sea . . . sea and waves are one. To speak of waves apart from the sea is a delusion—so mind and body are one!

The focus in this workshop will be on experiencing one's own body and emotions as a total organism. Emotions and memories are often stored in our bodies, resulting in tension and imbalance. A unique blend of gestalt, alexander technique, and feldenkrais exercises will be used as a gateway to contacting, expressing, and working through deep feelings. Massage staff will be on hand to assist the workshop.

We have the choice to contact ourselves and each other with joy, sadness, compassion, humor, ideas, and with the body—the whole person. $520.

Weekend of August 15-17

Songs of Innocence, Songs of Experience / Nancy Kaye Lunney

This weekend is a voyage into song for people who want to sing but are afraid or worried about what others will think, for shower singers and choir members who dream of hitting the big time, as well as for accomplished singers who want to improve their performance. Piano accompaniment, hand-held microphones, and video feedback will be part of a supportive environment for self-expression. Bring your own favorite song titles or choose from a variety at Esalen. Most important, bring your own styles, your voices, and a willingness to explore your creative potential. Each of us has a song to sing and the courage to share it with others. $170

Shifting Paradigms and Social Change / Fritjof Capra

We shall explore the fundamental paradigm shift that is going to dominate the eighties—a shift from a fragmented, mechanistic world view to an organic, holistic, and ecological view. Adopting a dynamic and global perspective, we shall recognize our current multi-faceted crisis as a manifestation of profound social and cultural change. Our discussion of the various aspects of this change will focus on the individual, social, and ecological dimensions of health, and will include the role of modern physics in shaping the new paradigm. $170

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body / Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact, and nurturing, sensitive giving, and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean, and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $170

Ways of Balance—East and West / Judyth Weaver

In the past years there has been much interest in the Orient with the hope that Eastern wisdom can help us out of the predicaments our Western technology has led us to. This workshop will delve into the correlations and contradictions of the eastern and western ways. We will explore methods of meditation—oriental and occidental; western therapies such as reichian and gestalt, and the eastern practices of "just being"; movement disciplines such as ancient t'ai chi ch'uan and modern expressive dance; deep sensing inside and relating outward to others; the merits of active and passive, contact and withdrawal, freedom and structure, yin and yang. The goal is an understanding of a balanced use of aspects of each culture that can aid us on our paths of healthy, useful, and pleasurable lives. $350

Adventures in Self-Exploration / Stanislav & Christina Grof

Focused self-exploration in this workshop will be based on the model of the unconscious that emerged from psychedelic research. It includes not only biographically determined areas but also the dynamics of the death-rebirth process and transpersonal experiences. We will use a combination of music and guided affective imagery, mandala drawing, yoga, massage, and individual work when indicated. $350

Self Awareness & Health Practices for Professionals / Janet Mentink & Phillip Mac

This workshop for health care professionals will include both didactic and experiential aspects emphasizing experiential learning about body/mind relationships, body awareness, and self awareness. Massage, centering, and visual imagery will be included so that the group can experience enthusiasm and support for change and self growth.

The workshop will allow "helpers" to explore previous decisions and concepts about themselves as helping professionals, and in the areas of health and disease and self care. Aspects of self awareness and re-decisioning may be used to enhance personal and professional well being. For additional information see page 16. $170

Opening the Feelings
Joel Dweck & Anne Ruderman

In this neo-reichian workshop, participants will learn to deepen their capacity to experience and express feelings. Using radix emotional release techniques, participants rediscover themselves and contact others in a deeper way.

Body awareness and verbal techniques for integration will be complemented by two intensives. The intensive is a period of individual work within a smaller supportive group. Feelings that have been held in since childhood—grief or pain, fear and rage—begin to emerge in these workshops. As participants learn to surrender to and accept these feelings, they in turn discover a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. $350

Soft Energy Paths / Amory Lovins & L. Hunter Lovins

You can change your energy future. An energy policy based on very efficient use of appropriate renewable sources ("soft tech") is cheaper, faster, surer, safer, nicer, and easier to implement than conventional policies. It can be kind to both the earth and our expectations. Professionals and lay people with interest and basic background in soft energy policies, and with a desire to advance them in practice, have this unusual opportunity to explore them informally—in such technical, economic, political, and social detail as they may wish—with two leading analysts/advocates. $170

A Weekend with Max Lerner

Wide-ranging discussion of love, sexuality, psychohistory, presidents, politics, power, education, erotic literature, philosophy, value systems, myths. The chief focus will be on a developmental overview of the phases of the life-cycle as a frame for sexuality, love, and creativeness. Dr. Lerner will draw on his current books in progress, Ted and the Kennedy Legend, Eros in America, and on his psychohistorical studies of American Presidents from Franklin Roosevelt to Jimmy Carter. $170

Meditation and Bodily Transformation
Michael Murphy and James Hickman

A workshop at the Lindisfarne Association at Crestone, Colorado
For further information, telephone [303] 256-4695

Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman are gathering examples of extraordinary bodily transformations from various fields—from the yogic and contemplative literature, psychiatric records, hypnosis and drug research, sport, the arts, Soviet work with psychical self-regulation and from many other fields—in an attempt to learn more about the range of such changes and the ways in which they happen. In this seminar they will present their work to date and speculate with the participants about the implications of their findings. Two questions for discussion are: (1) Do these bodily changes reveal an evolutionary possibility? (2) How do they relate to notions of enlightenment?

They will also lead the seminar participants in daily sessions of meditation, running, visualization, and other exercises that support the kinds of high level change their research involves. The daily schedule will begin with sitting and walking meditation before breakfast, continue with a three hour session of running and visualization exercises from 9:30 until 12:30, and conclude with evening presentations and discussions. In one of the evening sessions, Jim Hickman will discuss his recent studies of parapsychology and altered states research during a two month trip through the Soviet Union.

Experiencing the Esalen Garden
Sherry Ackerson, Steven Harper & the Esalen Garden

The focus of this workshop will be the experience of nurturing and being nurtured by the earth and her plant life. During the day, specific methods for gardening, including plantings, bed preparations, and composting, will be taught. We will also learn the healing aspects of herbs, and enjoy an herbal bath. Our evenings will include guided fantasy, meditation, drawings, and movement. Come and celebrate the gentle dance of earth, air, sunlight, water, and our bodies in our year-round organic vegetable garden.

Since much emphasis is on experiencing what we learn, make sure to bring overalls and workboots. $350

Being Healthy is More Than Not Being Sick: A Workshop in Holistic Health / Emmett Miller

A modern attitude toward health and wellness involves recognizing the interplay between our self-image, our emotional state, our relationships, and our health. Symptoms are thus used as guides to direct our awareness to aspects of our lifestyles which need attention.

High level wellness can be said to have been reached when symptoms become fewer and fewer. Wellness is maintained through regular applications of the principles of selective awareness, deep relaxation, aerobic exercise, rest, and proper nutrition. Moreover, these principles are used in such a manner as to produce continuous personal growth—mentally, physically, emotionally, and spiritually.

We'll begin by using simple techniques for evaluation of our present level of wellness. We will then explore the concepts of high level wellness, and learn ways to develop and maintain it through balancing and attuning mind, body, emotions, and spirit. We'll also explore the use of deep relaxation, mental imagery, and movement therapy to unstress and to project a positive self-image and a lifestyle of high level wellness. This workshop is designed for those who enjoy guided imagery and dance movement. $170

From Despair to Empowerment
Joanna Macy & Joseph Havens

Given threats of nuclear holocaust and environmental destruction, the survival of our species has become questionable for the first time in history. This awareness creates in many a deep sense of despair, a dread too grim to name. Because of social taboos and fear of pain, we tend to hide this despair from ourselves and others—a repression which numbs us and saps the energy we need for an imaginative response. This workshop will confront our deep concerns for our planet and its people, letting them surface in us in ways that release our energy and creativity. Awareness exercises using imaging, meditations, and ritual will be combined with demonstrations of strategies in organizing support groups for personal and social change—so that participants can return to their life situations empowered with some effective tools for action, and with a deeper trust in the collective adventure of our time. $170

A Psychic Training Program / Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $350

Psychiatry & Anti-Psychiatry: An International Perspective
Franco Basaglia, Mony El Kaim, Wade Hudson & Sylvia Marcos

The movement for humane alternatives to traditional psychiatric treatment methods has become international in scope. In fact, many of the most creative and encouraging efforts have developed outside the United States. In this country, the medical model and the medical monopoly of "treatment" services remain solidly entrenched. The Bay Area Committee for Alternatives to Psychiatry (BACAP) is affiliated with an international network and will be organizing this workshop to explore issues related to transforming the public mental health system.

The workshop will also include the presentation of a 25 minute slide show, "The Politics of Psychiatric Drugs," and screenings of two powerful documentaries, Do No Harm, an analysis of the drug industry, and Hurry Tomorrow, filmed behind the locked doors of a California State Hospital. (For more information about BACAP write to them at 344 Market St., Rm. 701, San Francisco, CA 94102.) $170

Thymos: "The Courage to Be" / Paul Lee with Rolf & Elsa VonEckartsberg

The Greek word thymos (as in the herb thyme and the human thymus gland) is translated as "vital root" or, by Paul Tillich, as the "courage to be." In this workshop Paul Lee will explore the "roots" or consciousness in thymos and discuss the assistance provided by thyme, considered to be a vitalizing herb, strongly germicidal, yet a classic for culinary use; and the role of the thymus gland, the center of the immune system where DNA was first found and originally called thymonucleic acid. In addition to discussing the relationship of thymos to molecular biology and immunology, we will examine its significance in terms of one of the deepest conflicts of our culture, the physicalist/vitalist debate in the biological sciences. We can see the re-emergence of vitalism in the environmental and holistic health movements, of which the current herb renaissance is a prime constituent.

Participants will be able to sample a variety of herbs, including thyme. Paul Lee will be assisted by his colleagues, Rolf and Elsa VonEckartsberg, in leading a series of exercises and rituals drawn from herbal practice, including ancient Egyptian "Star Rituals." $170

Some of the steps involved in learning to experience your feeling process in a way that increases your personal effectiveness in the world will be the focus of this workshop. Separating feeling from thoughts—sensitizing your body to your own rhythms and sensations and recognizing that your feelings—your discoveries are your truth without needing outside validation. The process is then the choice of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $350

Shiatsu Massage—The Full Treatment
Patricia Caldwell

Shiatsu is the oriental art in which the thumbs and hands are used to press certain points over the entire body. A working knowledge of a full shiatsu treatment for personal or professional use will be given. Emphasis will be on seeing and treating people as wholes, centering techniques, and shiatsu as a self-awareness practice and spiritual discipline. Charts will be provided. $350

Beyond Self-Growth: Awareness Training for Political Being / Walt Anderson & Abe Levitsky

There are no apolitical beings. There are only those who are blind to the full sense of membership in the human family, the political order, the ecosystem. The process of growth leads beyond the narrowly defined self to wider awareness and engagement.

Using group dynamics, psychodrama, and gestalt, we will explore the evolutionary political ecological dimensions of your personal struggle to survive and be fully human. $170

French Intensive/Biodynamic Gardening / David Field

Based on the belief that a fuller understanding of nature will yield fertility in the garden, French Intensive Biodynamic techniques approach plants and soil through a balance of spiritual and practical points of view. Supreme drainage and abundance are realized through careful cultivation, fertilization, and propagation in conjunction with cyclic forces. The flow of life is encouraged. Workshop participants will actively engage in all processes which lead to health of the soil, including double-digging, tilthing, and dressing of raised beds; preparation of seed flats, sowing of seeds, and transplanting; composting; the importance of herbs; and specifics of climate and plant variety selection for various geography. $170

Self-Hypnosis, Selective Awareness & Movement
Emmett Miller

Movement requires the use of muscular activity in varying degrees of intensity. So, too, thought processes and interpersonal communication proceed through stages of higher and lower energy. Most of our personal and social difficulties (symptoms, unwanted emotions, maladaptive habit patterns) can be eased when we learn to react in accordance with and in response to our internal and external environment.

In this workshop we will explore principles of self-hypnosis, selective awareness, feldenkrais, t'ai chi, dance, and movement therapy—to expand our self-awareness and ability to allow our minds and bodies to flow with our changing experiences. The explorations offered will be especially good for people who have had experience in these fields before. $170

Alternative Futures / Stanislav & Christina Grof

A four-week interdisciplinary program for professionals and students in the areas of psychiatry, psychology, medicine, anthropology, philosophy, religion, economy, ecology, and politics. This workshop will focus on the present global crisis and explore the dangerous and promising alternatives for future development of the human condition. The program will cover the following thematic areas:

(1) Analysis of the Contemporary Situation in the World
Visiting specialists from various disciplines will analyze the existing crises in politics, economy, ecology, medicine, psychology, and psychiatry. Special emphasis will be put on the limitations of the present paradigms of science and the urgent need for their drastic revision.

(2) Alternatives for Future Development: Promises and Dangers
In this context we will explore such issues as the techniques for radical change of consciousness, body transformation and enhancement of human mental capacities, reforms of the existing educational system, holistic approaches to medicine and health care, urban architecture of the future, voluntary simplicity, space colonies, genetic engineering, and others. Special attention will be paid to the convergence of modern consciousness research, mysticism, and quantum-relativistic physics and the emergence of a new paradigm for science.

(3) Self-Exploration and Group Process
The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with personal experience. The Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators for an ongoing process of intrapsychic and interpersonal exploration throughout the program. We will experiment with techniques of personality transformation that seem to be relevant from the point of view of the future of the planet. The participants will also have the opportunity to explore the alternatives for their own future. In this context, we will use gestalt practice, encounter, neo-reichian approaches, dance, fantasy exercises with music, mandala drawings, and different forms of body work. Jack Kornfield will conduct a systematic course in Vipassana meditation during the entire four weeks of the workshop.

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth

(A four-week internship program for personal & professional growth)

David Schiffman, Elisa Lodge & Esalen Staff

Over the years Esalen has functioned as a major clearing house for a wide variety of approaches and means for facilitating personal evolution and expression. One's journey could begin with any realm—mental, physical, emotional, or transpersonal—each path serving to create a wealth of information and energetic access.

What are the common experiential and conceptual threads that underlie each of these paths? How can these threads of experience be best woven together to create a fabric whose qualities are simultaneously exquisite in their delicacy while still remaining strong enough to sustain the wear and tear of worldly existence? And how best might this very personal process of self-discovery and integration be taught and shared with others?

The exploration and resolution of these and other basic questions pertaining to the process of change and growth will serve as the basis of our work together during this month long institute program.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own ability, style, and artfulness both as individual guide and group facilitator, as well as to do in-depth personal work and training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthetic techniques, and the meditative arts.

The program will be structured to include: intensive individual work, supervised observations, practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills, video feedback, illustrated lectures and didactic theoretical sessions. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective linking human potential practices with traditional psychological and counseling modalities.

The Compleat Spa/A Feelingbodymind Approach to Health, Beauty & Vitality / Joan Fiore, Jeffrey Kent, Susan Altenbach & Alan Dolit

This intensive nine-day workshop combines physical conditioning and diet with various intra interpersonal, mental emotional clearing processes for the purpose of learning, and learning to enjoy, those practices that make up the foundation of attaining and maintaining optimal health, vitality, morale, and beauty.

Each participant, with the help of a physical education specialist, works out an individual movement, exercise, swimming and jogging program designed for whatever levels of personal tolerance and needs are present.

We will also teach a gestalt approach to eating that puts you in contact with your body and its appetites and the desirable amount of weight for you to carry on your frame, encourages respect for food, enhances the satisfaction and enjoyment of eating, eliminates the built-in defeat system of should-eat, should-not-eat deprivation-type diets, and moves from the first step of conscious eating to the natural outcome of organic self-regulation.

As we become tuned in to how we nurture and or abuse our bodies, our appetites, our energies, we work with gestalt practice, visualization, encounter, psychodrama, emotional release breath and body methods to uncover, explore, and give expression to whatever feelings may emerge around related issues—such as the profound life repercussions that often arise from a changed body image or greater body awareness. $690

Gestalt Practice / Richard Price, Christine Price Joan Fiore & the Esalen Gestalt Staff

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustible.
—Lao Tzu

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, and growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment. The second half of this program will have participants working primarily with each other, relating whatever is being learned (or unlearned) to the development of their own styles. Thus this program might be especially useful to those wishing to utilize a gestalt approach in their professions (e.g. counselors, teachers, ministers, mothers, doctors and nurses).

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J. C. Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach). $870

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth

(A four-week internship program for personal & professional growth)

David Schiffman, Elisa Lodge & Esalen Staff

For description, see Special Programs, June 1-27. $1,400

Westerbeke Ranch Programs

This series of programs sponsored by Esalen will be held at the Westerbeke Ranch in Sonoma County, which is about an hour's drive north of San Francisco. These residential workshops will be held in an intimate setting which includes rustic cabins, home cooked meals, a sauna and Japanese tub, a large swimming pool, and beautiful scenery. Weekend workshops begin on Friday evening and end Sunday at noon. Five day workshops begin on Sunday evening and end Friday at noon. A reservation fee of $100 is required for five day programs and $50 for weekend programs. Reservation fees are not refundable, but with five days notice they can be transferred to other Esalen seminars. Full payment for all Westerbeke workshops is due five days in advance of the beginning of the program. Send all reservations and payments to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920.

June 1-6

Grammar of Spontaneity / Ruthy Alon

In this experiential workshop you will participate in guided processes of organic motions from the feldenkrais method, awareness through movement.

In a supportive space, free of rightness or effort, you will explore a variety of alternative movement options, meditate on their inner qualities, and nurture your body intelligence to choose more gratifying ways of day to day functioning, like enjoying lightness and grace in your moving, tuning into your personal rhythm, coordinating your organism to avoid pain, and allowing sex to flow effortlessly.

In the early mornings, a special out of doors experience will be extended to link the grammar of explorations with your spontaneity, through a ritual of 12 swinging natural motions inspired by the need to move and celebrate liveliness. $330

July 13-18

The Centered Equestrian
David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

The relationship between horse and rider is a remarkable combination of emotional poise, physical courage, skillful use of the will, and just plain old "horse sense."

Our focus together will be on how to deepen our mastery of these qualities.

Using a variety of practices including structural patterning, creative movement and visualisation, basic riding skills, and group process, we will spend the week finding ways to deepen the experience of pleasure and harmony between ourselves as a group, with our horses, and with the beauty of our natural surroundings.

No previous riding experience is necessary. $390

July 25-27

Vision Improvement—Our Willingness to See
Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita)

This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and our selves to see. Utilizing reichian deep emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the bates system, nutrition, and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience, and expand—enabling us to look newly at our selves and our world in which we live. Limited to 12 participants. $170

The Awakening of Creativity / Michell Cassou

This workshop is designed to develop an experiential understanding of intuitive expression using the tool of creative painting. Emphasis will be placed upon making the discrimination between painting from thought or preconception and painting directly from feeling. As the movement of the creative process evolves, the painting experience becomes a natural vehicle for exploring deeply into oneself. A sense of confidence and trust in spontaneous expression can be developed, which can overflow into other aspects of life and relationships.

On one evening of the workshop there will be a showing of "Eternal Rerun," an audio-visual presentation of Michell's work depicting the inner process of death and rebirth. $170 plus $9 materials fee.

July 27-August 1

A Psychic Training Program / Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own Psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $350

Massage & Deep Tissue Work: A Synthesis
Deborah Medow

This workshop for massage and health practitioners will combine massage with principles of deep tissue work: a deep tissue massage. As we work together, participants will experience body restructuring and increased body awareness. To enhance our understanding and experience of body/mind/spirit in this work, some movement and sensory awareness sessions will be offered along with daily morning yoga sessions.

Review of structural anatomy and acupuncture principles is recommended for this training. $350

August 22-24

The Art of Rejuvenation
Jack Downing & Jocelyn Olivier

A light hearted and meaningful look at the scientific and mythical reality of the fountain of youth. Using gestalt, a number of body work approaches, and a little magic, you will learn to interpret your body's symptoms and discover ways to de-stress and invigorate your self. $170

Massage for Couples / Gail Stewart

This group is for partners (spouses, friends, lovers, or good neighbors) who would like a weekend to melt down, cool out, and lighten up with each other. We will ease into ourselves with massage, tantra, dance, chanting, and other effortless delights. Leave behind your schedules and duties and bring along someone you trust. $170 per person

August 24-29

Sports & Consciousness: New Ideas & Training Routines / Michael Murphy & Mike Spino

Focusing on running and meditation, this workshop will introduce methods of mind/body development being explored by Mike Spino and Michael Murphy. These methods will include various running gaits and tempos, muscle/skeletal exercises, breathing techniques, visualization and meditation exercises, and some of the lore of mystical experience in sport. Ways in which these elements can be integrated into various training routines will be presented. There will also be discussions of altered states that occur in sport and conceptual frameworks with which to interpret them (including a scenario of bodily transformations suggested by a study of the traditional Indian siddhis or yogic powers). $350

September 12-14

Hypnosis & Parapsychology / Lee Pulos

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lecturettes explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $170

The Gentle Art of Becoming – Together: / A Workshop for Couples / David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery as well as gestalt awareness methods. $170 per person

Wilderness Programs

July 12-21

Rites of Passage: A Mountain/River Adventure
Dick Galland & Annie Callaway

This workshop is grounded in the notion that a person's responses to the challenges of the mountain and river reflect their responses to the challenges of daily life. From the very real and immediate lessons of the wilderness, we can come to see ourselves more clearly and thus act with a greater sense of purpose.

As in rock climbing, when we move from balance, through imbalance, into balance again, this program will be an opportunity to pause and take stock, to reflect on where we have been and where we wish to go. It will be a time for relaxation, for stretching limits, for extending ourselves, for seeking a new and revitalized sense of who we are.

For seven days we will explore the remote and spectacular Marble Mountains wilderness in northern California. Carrying everything we need in our packs, we will hike through broad green forests, lush meadows full of wildflowers, and camp by crystal mountain lakes. From a base camp in a small alpine basin, we will experience beginning rock climbing and rappelling, ascend a nearby peak, run, relax in a sweat house, and each spend 24 hours completely alone in reflection and contemplation. We will learn a variety of mountain skills including camp craft, map and compass travel, wilderness medicine, gourmet cooking, and mountain ecology.

At the end of these seven days we will move to the nearby Klamath River and embark on two days of whitewater rafting. Guiding our twelve-foot rubber rafts with paddles, we will each have a chance to captain our boat through the rapids and delight in the exhilaration and timeless grandeur of the river experience.

Though this workshop is an adventure in doing, we will use techniques from psychosynthesis, yoga, and meditation, as well as journal writing to help us ground our experiences so we may incorporate them into our daily lives.

No previous experience is required. You should be in reasonably good physical condition. Complete information on clothing, equipment, and travel will be sent to you upon registration. $375

August 9-16

Encountering in the High Sierras
Maurica Anderson & Tom Moore

This seven-day workshop will begin with a six mile ferry ride to the end of Lake Thomas Edison (7200') in the John Muir Wilderness Area. From there we will hike into a High Sierra basin containing many lakes, streams, and snowfields. Mules will carry in all of the food, camping equipment, and personal gear. We will camp by the main lake for six days, taking side hikes, eating outrageously good food (fresh or frozen rather than freeze dried), and working with body awareness, meditation, psychodrama, gestalt, and encounter, laughing a lot, and getting to know the high country, one another, and ourselves.

Mountaineering experience is not necessary, but applicants should be capable of moderate hiking. A detailed information sheet will be supplied upon request. Participants will meet in the Sierra on August 9. $295

August 10-17

Inner & Outer Paths to Adventure:
A 7-day Wilderness Experience in Volcano National Park, Hawaii / Dick Galland, Annie Callaway, David Schiffman & Elisa Lodge

Perhaps no place on earth offers such an exquisite variety of geographic features, plant, and animal life as the big island of Hawaii.

During this seven-day adventure we will explore the edge of a four thousand foot live volcano. We'll camp under the stars (seeing the major constellations of the northern and southern hemispheres) in Kapukas-islands of ancient forest surrounded by lava. We will also descend to the sea, where we will swim among brightly colored reef fish and each spend twenty-four hours alone in reflection and contemplation.

This will be an experience of challenge and contrast, combining traditional wilderness skills and group process work with a variety of human potential practices. Applications must be received by July 27. $525 (plus airfare)

August 16-29

The Experience of Wilderness: High Sierra Journey
Robert Greenway & Steven Harper

Evolutionarily, we are but moments from our tribal/native past—a time when cultures were relatively integrated with the natural environment. This two-week workshop will explore and provide space for regaining some of the healing aspects of a full encounter with nature, as found relatively pristine in the wilderness setting. We will live lightly on the land, emphasizing skills essential for preservation of the earth's wilderness. There will be basic training in minimum impact camping, outdoor living skills, survival techniques, along with a basic orientation to the ecology, geography and cultural history of the Sierras. We will explore ritual, tribal consciousness, and ancient Native American methods of resolving group differences. We will cook simple organic meals communally, travel as lightly as possible, swim in cold streams, and chant native songs from many cultures. There will be time, space, and preparation for a personal "solo" or alone "vision quest" time, with techniques for integration and preparation for return towards the end of the wilderness journey. We will attempt to join "the inside" with "the outside" wilderness.

Participants do not have to be experienced back-packers, but should be in good health, and ready to undertake vigorous physical activity. The group will meet in the Sierra on August 16. Complete information will be sent upon registration. Registration deadline July 16. $375

September 7-12

The Rites of Passage: A 5-day Pilgrimage On Horseback through the Big Sur Wilderness
David Schiffman, Skip Utterback & Rick Jensen

Turning the clock back to a more gently paced time, we will share a profoundly simple style of life together.

Beginning our journey from a remote beautiful ranch on the river's edge in Arroyo Seco, we'll travel along winding canyon trails through the unspoiled back country of the Ventana Wilderness.

We'll carry all our essentials with us, making stops in some of the loveliest spots in the Ventana.

The trip will combine elements from human potential practices, group process work, and traditional equestrian and wilderness skills. It will be a time of simplification and cleansing.

The group will be limited to ten participants. $525

FIFTH INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF TRANSPERSONAL PSYCHOLOGY

November 9-14, 1979 — Boston (Danvers), Massachusetts
"NATURE OF REALITY; Dawning of A New Paradigm"

This major conference was an unusually rich and exciting gathering of many individuals—philosophers, psychologists, physicists, economists, and many others—who represent the cutting edge of the emerging world view, a multi-faceted paradigm which is overthrowing the old positivistic and materialistic model of the universe which has dominated the Western mind since Descartes and Newton. Because of the special importance of the conference, we are offering the following tapes of lectures from that week:

FRIENDS OF ESALEN

FRIENDS OF ESALEN provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available to a broader base. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to extend such scholarships.

In addition to the knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your support of Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

☐ I wish to become a Friend of Esalen and I enclose my check for the category circled.

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute-By Reservation Only.

Reservation Information: In order to reserve a space in any workshop we require a reservation fee of $50 for weekend groups, $100 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups, payable in U.S. currency only. Balance of payment is due on arrival. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs.

Please mail all reservations to:
Reservations, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920

Reservations by telephone: You may make reservations by phone if you use your Mastercharge, BankAmericard, or American Express credit card number to charge your reservation fee.

Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, & Saturday 9 to 3
Wednesday 9 to 12 Noon
Friday 9 to 8 PM
Sunday 12 Noon to 8

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation (allow at least three weeks for processing as we have many applications). If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15—September 30 programs or for weekend programs.

Ongoing Residence Program: Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $1400 per 26-day period.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive anytime after lunch.

Esalen has limited child care facilities. If you are interested in bringing a child while you are attending a workshop of five days or longer, contact the office well in advance for information on availability of child space. Esalen does not supply babysitters.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Catalog design: Red Dog Pieface

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pick-ups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen. Esalen limousine service is not available after 5 pm.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff, usually in the kitchen. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Accreditation: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs.

Contributions to Esalen Institute are tax-deductible.

The expenses of attending Esalen, including travel, are deductible for federal income tax purposes as an educational expense if incurred to maintain or improve professional or work skills. (See Income Tax Regulation 1.162-5.)

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some persons, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

"Contact is the appreciation of differences"
Fritz Perls

Big Sur

These are excerpts from a statement by Brian Lyke entered into the record of the hearings of the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Parks, Recreation, and Renewable Resources, Washington, D.C., April 24, 1980.

Think of Big Sur as if it were another country. Think of it as if it had its own language and customs, its own unique heritage, its own norms of social conduct, its own goals and values, its own pace of life. Think of it as far away and somewhat out of step with the rest of mainland America, and leave unanswered the question as to whether it is a step ahead, or a step behind, because the wheel goes round and round, and what seems quaint and old fashioned in one moment, is called progress in the next.

The first settlers came to the Santa Lucia Coast of California around the middle of the last century. They were preceded here by the Spanish explorers and the Indians who were the first human inhabitants of the area. These early settlers were bold spirits who came because they loved independence, seclusion, and the beauty of the mountains and sea more than the dubious benefits of civilization, and their descendants, both natural and spiritual, live here for similar reasons.

Much has been said about the majesty and grandeur of Big Sur which sets it apart from any other place. For over fifty years poets, painters, photographers, and storytellers have been trying to capture and convey its magic and inspiration. But not enough has been said about the people of Big Sur.

If you agree that the existing character of the coast and its unique social fabric should be maintained, then please recognize that Big Sur is people as well as land. It's woodcutters and ranchers, artists and writers, farmers and scientists, sculptors, dancers, psychologists, musicians, architects, carpenters, and the Benedictine Hermits of Camaldodi. It's the wealthy and the poor, the straight and the eccentric all woven together into an exquisite tapestry.

We who live in Big Sur hold the land in trust. We do not possess it; it possesses us. We do not want to keep tourists out as did those who sixty years ago fought against the construction of the Coast Highway. Last year nearly three million visitors traveled that highway and some of them stopped to enjoy the hot springs at Esalen.

What we do want is for you to realize that one of the unforeseen probable consequences of the designation of Big Sur as a National Scenic Area is the destruction of its native culture, of which Esalen is a part, and the creation of a social and political climate that is inimical to freedom, creative self-expression, spontaneity, and self-responsibility. The proposed land acquisition plan will spell doom to private ownership of the land and will sever the symbiotic relationship between the land and its inhabitants that has sparked artistic creativity and provided a rich heritage for all the world to enjoy. If the resident population is uprooted from this coast, as has happened in scores of National Parks and Recreation Areas throughout this country in spite of guarantees and promises from the government, a natural resource as valuable and rare as the sea otter and the redwood will be lost, and the character of Big Sur will be forever diminished.

If you agree that Big Sur must be protected from development, then please first consider the fact that local residents, who themselves have fled developed areas, do not wish to see Big Sur developed with more restaurants, or motels, or homes in the viewshed, or public sanitation facilities, or parking lots, or trailers to house additional government employees, or obtrusive chainlink fences, or new trails through the wilderness, or signs which tell you where to take a picture or redundantly point out that this is, indeed, a scenic area. Development for recreational purposes, in the name of protection and preservation, is an inscrutable logic, indeed, and that is what this bill promises.

If you agree that Big Sur must be preserved, then please honor the fact that her citizens have been working together for over four years to create a Local Coastal Plan. It is a process which has required everyone's patience, humor, energy, trust, goodwill, and intelligence. It is a plan which has very stringent restrictions against new development, and it, rather than a comprehensive federal plan, should be the governing plan for Big Sur.

Don't allow control over this area to be taken from local hands out of some mistaken notion either that Washington knows best, or that local citizens lack the will or the ability to manage their land in the public interest. Don't throw out the hard work of people who have given so much of themselves, and though they have not always agreed on specifics, at least they are united in their love for Big Sur. Will those who write the Government's comprehensive plan be able to say that?

If you agree that Highway One is the most beautiful two-lane, rural scenic highway in the United States, and must remain that way, then don't turn Big Sur into a huge outdoor museum for tourists to look at through the windows of a bus. Don't destroy the wonder and majesty of this coast for people who have never seen it by regulating how and when they can experience it, as will happen if a visitor transportation system, which this bill calls for, is created.

Big Sur has a wild, unspoiled grandeur, and we intend to keep it that way. With the ocean at our feet and the mountains at our back, there is a sense of peace and freedom, of reverence and praise and thanksgiving that there is still a place such as this where people can come for renewal and refreshment, yes, and perhaps even to live. But if you organize and program the experience of Big Sur, if you label it, and name it, and structure it and limit it, if you put Forest Service green to it and signs to explain it, if you publicize it and commercialize it, then at best you have succeeded only in putting an ugly, ill-conceived frame around a masterpiece, and at worst you have offered it up to be vandalized by those who neither think nor care. ■

In July, 1979... the Regents of the University of California were approaching a vote on a motion, proposed by Governor Brown, to terminate as soon as possible the contractual relationship with Government to run and supervise the Lawrence Livermore and the Los Alamos Laboratories researching and testing atomic weaponry. The two documents here reproduced were part of my personal efforts to clarify and promote my feeling on this subject.

Regent Gregory Bateson

Esalen Institute,
Big Sur, Ca. 93920
June 24, 1979

Regent Vilma S. Martinez,
28 Geary St., 6th floor,
San Francisco, Ca. 94108

Dear Vilma,

You asked me to spell out my ideas about the "evil" nature of our atomic commitment. Let me do this in writing so that you and our fellow regents may consider the arguments with more care than is possible in open meeting.

First, let me say that I am not talking about individual death or even the death of great national or cultural systems. I know well that these deaths are a normal and necessary part of the ecology within which all life is framed. Only I suggest that if you have difficulties in hearing what I have to say about more total death, you should try — perhaps in meditation — to grasp and assimilate the premise that individual death of person or nation is irrelevant to the present issue.

I am talking not about individual or national deaths but about tearing that larger fabric within which death of the individual person or nation is continually necessary. As long as you are tormented by ideas of personal and individual death, it will be difficult to see straight. To kill the Russians and even the whole biosphere will be preferable to risking your own skin. It's that simple.

I can see only two ends of an arms race. One is the use of the accumulated weapons in warfare and the probable destruction of the mammalian way of life. The other involves that deliberate risk which we call trust.

First, I will consider the matter of nuclear weapons in terms of learning theory and what Bertrand Russell called the "logical types." To make the matter more vivid for you, a lawyer, I will give you an example of my way of thinking taken from the field of law.

As I understand it, the law defines crime as a class of action. "Such and such act or action is a 'crime'." But to an anthropologist it is uncomfortable to leave the words "act or action" without some definition. What begins or ends a sequence so that that particular sequence is to be called an "act"? And what of context and the closely related notion "intent"?

So let me define an act or action as that unit of behavior which follows the ordinary laws or rules of reinforcement. If rewarded, the "act" will be positively learned and probably repeated; if punished, the "act" will be avoided or extinguished.

But this definition won't do. "Crime," as everybody knows and has known for centuries, does not follow the simple rules of reinforcement. Sometimes yes — but on the whole punishment results, as often as not, in teaching the "criminal" how to be a better criminal.

In other words, the category "crime" is not of the same logical type as the category "act or action." Evidently there is something askew in the whole way of thinking about "crime." The solution, of course, is that "crime" implies a way of seeing the context and meaning of certain sequences of acts and interaction. A crime is a sequence shaped within a certain system of motivation.

Chalk up then the distinction between the act of hurting somebody, which may be subject to simple negative reinforcement, and a habit of offense such that each act springs from a philosophy which prefers harm in this second case. I shall say that the process which led to this philosophy is evil. In the first case the act is merely bad. And the difference between the two is related to the notion of addiction — progressive and partly irreversible habit formation.

What I am saying is, of course, not new. St. Thomas Aquinas knew long ago that not action but generality of action was evil. The Seven Deadly Sins were pride, covetousness, lust, envy, gluttony, anger, and accidie (apathy). The Saint is very clear that these are not names of action. A sin is classified as "deadly" if it "gives rise to others especially in the manner of a final cause." With the decay of theology our thinking has become sloppy but I see justification for the old theological word "evil."

The question is whether fooling around with atomic weaponry is merely in itself an offense or does it give rise to other offenses "in the manner of a final cause." A serious university should concern itself with such distinctions.

Now the parallel is close between the muddled way in which people think about crime and the muddled way in which they think about the armaments race. In both cases, there are theories of deterrence and in both cases the theories of deterrence contain a little truth — enough truth so that politicians, journalists, and armaments people can appeal to that modicum of truth to prevent others from thinking the whole matter through.

First, it has to be clearly seen that the message of deterrence is limited and specific. It is not "you shall not attack me" and it is not "you shall not make to yourself more arms."

The message is very simple: "You shall not attack me tomorrow" and it is "if you are frightened (and I am indeed trying to frighten you), you should arm youself as soon as possible."

(There is a silly paradox connected with secrecy in this business. The real secret is not about the weapons which we have. The secret is about the weapons which we do not have!)

But the gimmick in the whole business which identifies what we are doing as "evil" and "deadly," in the sense in which the seven sins are deadly, is the linkage to time. It is perhaps a bad action to make weapons — it is an evil action to make weapons and to participate in a process which leads to distrust and war.

"Do not make war today or tomorrow" is all very well but this message always must carry with it the underlying jab of distrust and the long time suggestion — "make war more effectively next week or next year." The sin of armament-making gives rise to others in the manner of a final cause and it is this that makes it deadly.

Beyond time, of course, there is the matter of scale — the sheer quantity of human pain that these machines can generate and the danger of their toxic effects spreading from the killing of a few millions of people to the upsetting of world ecological process. The fact that there is no likelihood of discovering any permanently safe way of disposing of waste products. And no likelihood that the people who are participating in this monstrous — cancerous — industry will ever learn to tell the simple truth about their actions or the probable effects of their actions.

All this I need not remind you of. We see enough of it around the Regents table.

In sum — NO — I think that the University of California should not continue to be mixed up in this miserable business. Our task is education, not the promition of cynicism and the aiding of destruction.

I must apologize in the delay of this letter — I guess I postponed writing because this matter is distasteful and frustrating. But in the end, we must all stand and be counted.

Yours,

Gregory Bateson

Regent William A. Wilson,
Chairman,
Committee on Special Research Projects,
10475 Bellagio Road,
Los Angeles, California 90024

Dear Bill,

Thank you for your letter of February 8, which forces me to face some unpleasant issues and to take action which I had been postponing.

You know, I am sure, that I am totally out of sympathy with the whole business of nuclear weaponry. I believe that a university should have no connection with such folly, such evil. It's like a church or a hospital. The munitions of war should never be stored in such places or shipped in hospital ships, etc. not just because churches are ancient monuments or to save the wounded but because the civilization which puts materials of war in its hospital ships and attacks hospital ships with torpedoes, bombs churches, etc. is precisely a civilization which is not worth fighting for.

You will say that in this case, there is no contemporary civilization that is worth dying for — and you may be right — or that our standard of ethics should always be set by the conduct of our enemies. (And in such a case may God forgive the wretched propagandist who lies about the conduct of the enemy!)

In the particular matter of atomic weaponry, perhaps it does not now matter to the planet that we and the Russians are busily increasing our destructive potential. It is already so gross that only a small part will probably be used in Armageddon. The folly was in getting into the armaments race and staying in it.

But there is no sense in losing an armaments race. I warned Teller the other day that a government which was stupid enough to get into an arms race could also be stupid enough to lose it.

The weakness of Salt II which so frightens Teller is expectably an effect of our knowledge of our own continued armament and the Russians' knowledge of theirs. I continually hear behind the argument of deterrence the assumption that the next war will be an atomic holocaust and that we shall lose it; and I hear the sick need to make these prophesies come true.

Anyhow, it is surely wrong and probably fatal to engage half heartedly in either the pursuit of war or of peace. If you elect the pathway of "deterrence," you must go whole hog down that pathway until you discover the hopelessness of it. W. Blake has a bitter proverb: "If the fool would persist in his folly, he would become wise."

So even if the philosophy of deterrence is empty, and a threatening stance is in the long run totally futile; even so, if the powers that be elect that course, then they should not be hampered in it. Surely nothing less than total commitment can work!

And the same is surely true of the business of getting out of the arms race. Only total honesty and total commitment to the path of peace will do. Participation in Salt meetings makes sense only with complete realization that the escalation is bigger than we are. To get out of the arms race is not so difficult or complex. All it requires is, in Eliot's heartbreaking words:

"A condition of complete simplicity. (Costing not less than everything). And all shall be well."

So how can I vote on your committee? I cannot join you in wholehearted commitment to the path of "deterrence" and war. I cannot manoeuver to make your chosen courses half-hearted or inefficient. I am in what somebody once called a "double bind."

So, I have to make my position clear to myself and to you all and, since I do not expect you to see it my way, I must then get out.

Will you please accept my resignation from your committee and inform the Nominations Committee of your need for another member?

Yours sincerely,

Gregory Bateson, Regent

The Farm Project

The Esalen Farm Project has been established to work toward raising and supplying enough natural foodstuffs from the local environment to sustain the Esalen community and to teach people how to do this for themselves. At present we have cleared over two acres of land, purchased a small tractor, and planted nearly one hundred trees on a three acre parcel north of the Gazebo. The programs in this project include orcharding, truck farming, fishing, aquaculture (fish farming), greenhouse production, food storage and preservation, beekeeping, ornamental food plants, and small animal raising. By developing greater independence from outside commercial food sources, we help broaden the concept of responsibility.

The Energy Program

Esalen's Energy Program was established to study and implement alternative technologies to create a more self reliant community. Geothermal and hydroelectric projects have been initiated as ways to utilize our own renewable resources and lessen our dependence on nonrenewable energy sources. Both passive and active solar heating systems are being developed at Esalen, including a solar powered laundry which uses flat plate collectors to heat the hot water for the washing machines. A solarium greenhouse has been designed to augment the heating of the lodge dining room as a passive collector. Esalen is turning to a future based on utilizing those resources which are both plentiful and renewable.

The Meditation Pavilion

There has been a growing realization that those who live and work at Esalen, as well as those who come as guests, need a place for silence and meditation. A master plan for a meditation pavilion was created by the late Selig Morganrath, Esalen's architect-designer, to be located in the area just south of Fritz's. Now, three years after Selig's death, a design-concept for the structure itself has been created by Ray Sanborn, Selig's son-in-law. The Meditation Pavilion will be a memorial to Selig, and will be built by the members and friends of the Esalen community. Toward this end, the Selig Morganrath Memorial Fund has been established.

The Transformation Project

The Transformation Project, begun in 1976, is systematically studying extraordinary bodily transformations that occur in such areas as religious practice, mind assisted healing, hypnosis, biofeedback, sensory isolation, sports, acupuncture, physical therapy, and mental illness. To this end, four activities are underway: developing the first computerized data base of evidence for the human organism's transformative capacities; analyzing the ways and circumstances in which high level bodily change occurs; developing disciplines to support such change; conducting seminars, and publishing articles and books to disseminate the project's findings. To date, the project has been supported by Esalen; Laurance Rockefeller; McDonnell Foundation, Inc.; Ferdinand Eberstadt Foundation; Mona Bronfman Scheckman Foundation; Qume Foundation; various individuals, and numerous volunteers.

Soviet-American Exchange Program

For the past several years Esalen has been exploring the research efforts in the Soviet Union that relate to concepts of human potential. In our judgment these efforts represent a significant cultural development in the U.S.S.R., one that is similar to the emergence of a "human potential movement" in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. Esalen is initiating a Soviet-American Exchange Program to encourage the dissemination of information and the sponsorship of seminars among scientists from the Soviet Union and America. Upon its completion, The Transformation Project computer archive will be made available to the Soviet Academy of Sciences, and Soviet studies in these areas will be exchanged with American researchers. Because good Soviet-American relations are crucial to world peace, we feel that this kind of mutual person-to-person exploration is urgently needed.

Steve Beck

The projects described are originated at and funded by Esalen. To encourage a broad base of support, we invite outside contributions for them. Gifts to Esalen are tax-deductible. They can be made to the Esalen general fund or to any of the individual projects.

Gazebo Thoughts

Kramer vs. Kramer received five Academy Award Oscars. What was that all about?

Norma Rae was up there in the top five and also received an Academy Award Oscar for the best actress in a leading role. What was that all about? . . .and in the corner of the Academy there was an Oscar for a film that could not be overlooked. A film that celebrated contact, trust, and bonding. It was The Black Stallion.

Today many parents are single parents, or parents who live in separate places, or parents who are both working — because they must within our changing economy, or because they choose to do so based on a changing relationship of women to all levels of the labor market, industry, and government. There have always been these parents — but today there is a difference in attitude, feeling, and action. Fathers as well as mothers are truly interested in being available to their children — whether the parents are getting along with each other or not. Men are participating in the structuring of the family and women are participating in the structuring of the larger social and political environment. Egos are courageously being set aside, replaced by a new vision of birthing, parenting, and community. I have witnessed men and women deciding to focus their attention on ways to best provide a feeling of well being, confidence, and strength for the child they see and hear. They are also aware of the gift of learning and love they receive in return. This new group of adults see that within industry, small business, and community there is an extended family available to support the fledgling generation into untried areas of cooperation and collaboration — on a larger-than-thought-of scale. This new generation of young parents is also beginning to demand a quality of education that is different from past models or new models provided by automatic, robot producing corporations such as can be found in the fast food industry.

Without movement no system can maintain balance. By truly focusing on movement, change, healthful living, and learning the little ones will be cared for and the problem of the "older worker" and the "unmotivated teen-ager" can be addressed and redesigned.

". . . for want of a nail, the Kingdom was lost."
Coming from the Kingdom to the nail — whether a child is with papa or mama — quality child caring should be demanded at each one's business site — one that is in appreciation of different environments, and respectful of history, tradition, and the nature of time.

Structured custody and designated weekends do not allow for varied interactions and intimacy. Parents are finding more organic ways of sharing custodianship — ways which offer parents a richness of experience with their child, and offer a rhythm of exchange which maximises the quality of time spent alone and together.

The children's center at Esalen is called Gazebo. Gazebo is a design of flexibility and neutrality so that it may be fully used by multiple points of view. It works for the traditional family structure as well as for the many special family structures which exist today.

Deep-Tissue Sessions

Over the past several years we have been training practitioners of the deep-tissue work at Esalen. This is a manipulative work done on the connective tissues and other structural elements of the body. Its purpose is to realign and strengthen the physical body while at the same time vitalizing and organizing the energy body. The conceptual roots of the deep-tissue sessions lie in the work of Ida Rolf and in acupuncture, combining the physical and energetic understandings of both approaches.

A typical deep-tissue session takes approximately 1½ hours to complete. The whole course of deep-tissue work may take 10 to 12 sessions, depending on the individual. Ideally sessions should be scheduled once a week, and not more often than twice a week. In any given session we concentrate the focus of our work on a different segment or layer within the body, endeavoring to bring order and organization into the core structure of the being. Each session can be considered complete in itself and designed to leave the person physically and energetically balanced. The work is holistic, treating the whole person. Hence, there should be no adverse effect from discontinuing the work at some point and resuming it at a later time, continuing where the previous session left off.

As is true for many other holistic growth practices, the long-term effects of the deep-tissue work can be transformative to the individual, sometimes creating significant changes in life patterns. The work is compatible with and complementary to other growth practices like gestalt, yoga, t'ai chi, aikido, acupuncture, homeopathy, the softer versions of reichian work, and most physical conditioning programs. Although the deep-tissue sessions are also compatible with other systems of body manipulative work available at Esalen, such as massage, polarity, trager, and feldenkrais work, it is best not to mix in too many other body modalities when going through the deep-tissue course. If in doubt check with the practitioner. The reason for this is that in any deep work an important objective is the balancing of the body's energy field and the development of a close trust relationship with the practitioner. When this happens we usually see a progressive freeing of stress and tensions held in the body and the unlayering of holdings and traumas in the feelings. With trust and proper preparation the release can occur gently and naturally, without extensive pain or emotional upheaval. New grace of movement and functioning are frequently reported as body and energy field come into order and become aligned to the gravity direction. Sessions usually continue to act for days afterwards with freeing of held energies and reorganization of body functioning. Sometimes there may be a period of readjustment following a session before the body settles into a stable state of balance and well-being.

Deep-tissue practitioners undergo a training program at Esalen involving 300 hours of classes, covering anatomy and the basic ten deep-tissue sessions. This is followed by an internship period. A current list of deep-tissue practitioners working at Esalen is available in the Esalen office.

The next deep-tissue class, combined with a gestalt practicum, acupuncture, homeopathy, and other holistic health classes, will be held during the period February 20 through June 14, 1981, and again from September 4 through December 27, 1981. For further information see page 38.

Ways of Being at Esalen

There are a variety of ways to experience Esalen, ranging from a visit to the hot springs on a week-night to a long-term stay as a student or resident. The week-end and five-day workshops described throughout the catalog are the standard route for coming to Esalen and learning the various methods of personal growth and self-exploration that are available here. The Experiencing Esalen workshops are a kind of smorgasbord introduction to some of these many practices (such as gestalt, massage, sensory awareness, etc.); from such a sampling, the participant can then choose that approach which feels most appropriate and pursue it in subsequent seminars. For those who wish an extended stay of a month or more, there is an Ongoing Residence Program. Other long-term programs include the "month-longs" coordinated by individuals such as Stan Grof, Al Drucker, and David Schiffman, which frequently involve didactic seminars as well as experiential workshops. These can be particularly useful for professionals and graduate students.

A very popular way of being at Esalen, and one that allows a much greater involvement with the place and its community at a lower expense, is the Work-Study Program, which entails working with the Esalen staff as well as participating in an on-going workshop designed specifically for that program. See page 14 for more information and an application form.

In addition, besides programs, there are other events which enrich life at Esalen. There is a regular Tuesday Night Forum where various writers and thinkers, both visiting and resident, share their ideas with the community. On Wednesdy nights, there are films, dance performances, choirs, puppet shows, and other forms of entertainment. Bodywork of various kinds is available by appointment with individual practitioners, including massage, deep-tissue, polarity, and rolfing. Individual sessions are also available for various types of process work, including gestalt, neo-reichian emotional release, vision-improvement, music gestalt, etc. Finally, there is a Community Workshop program which goes on daily, and provides many opportunities for engaging in personal self-exploration or learning new approaches to human growth.

Esalen Institute - Approved Provider for Registered Nurses and Physicians

The Board of Registered Nursing in the State of California has approved Esalen Institute as a provider of continuing education for registered nurses. Provider Number 01152.

The Work-Study Program

The Work-Study Program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program, emotionally and physically, and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share, contact, play — alone/together. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week in such areas as gardening, landscaping, the farm, maintenance, kitchen, and cabins. No participants will be accepted as work scholars in Gazebo until they have fulfilled a minimum of one month in one of the aforementioned departments. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs, and work assignments are made according to these requirements. Before December 28 the cost of the program is $350 for the first month, $250 for the second, and $200 for the third month. Beginning December 28, the cost of the program will be $400 for the first month, $350 for the second month, and $300 for the third. A $150 deposit is required with your application.

Accommodations are shared, with up to three people to a room, at South Coast Center, a staff living complex which is 1½ miles north of Esalen. The Work-Study Program, lasting 28 days, is a full time workshop in itself. The work commitment to the community, group process work, and teaching seminars makes up a busy schedule for participants. Enrolling in the Esalen catalog workshops is therefore discouraged, since the extra involvement tends to interfere with the fulfillment of the Work-Study Program.

In addition to the regular program, Esalen is now offering an intensive three-month course in basic organic horticulture. The cost of the program will be $1050. A $250 deposit is required. In filling out the Work-Study application, please indicate your preference of landscaping, gardening, or small scale farming.

Available dates: November 2-30; November 30-December 28; December 28-January 25, January 25-February 22; February 22-March 22; March 22-April 19; April 19-May 17; May 17-June 14; June 14-July 12; July 12-August 9; etc.

NOTE: This application is not a registration in the program. Registration is made only after approval of application and upon receipt of deposit. Please return this form with $150 (or $250) deposit to:

Work-Study Program, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920. Telephone: (408) 667-2335

The balance of the fee is due on arrival. $75 of the original deposit is non-refundable, and may be transferred to other Esalen programs within one year of receipt of deposit.

Esalen Seminars

Experiencing Esalen

Experiencing Esalen Staff
Coordinated by Janet Zuckerman Boeve

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, bioenergetics, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificence of the Big Sur coast.

Gestalt Practice

Esalen Gestalt Staff
Coordinated by Christine Price & Richard Price

The Esalen Gestalt Staff includes Leonard Bearne, Janet Zuckerman Boeve, Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita), Joan Fiore, Jeffrey Kent, Nancy Kaye Lunney, the NINE, Jenny O'Connor, Christine Price, Richard Price, and others.

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustible.
—Lao Tzu

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is enfoldment, wholeness, growth, rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment.

Experiencing the Esalen Garden

Sherry Ackerson
Steven Harper
& the Esalen Garden

The focus of this workshop will be the experience of nurturing and being nurtured by the earth and her plant life. During the day, specific methods for gardening, including plantings, bed preparations, and composting, will be taught. We will also learn the healing aspects of herbs, and enjoy an herbal bath. Our evenings will include guided fantasy, meditation, drawings, and movement. Come and celebrate the gentle dance of earth, air, sunlight, water, and our bodies in our year-round organic vegetable garden.

Since much emphasis is on experiencing what we learn, make sure to bring overalls and workboots. $350

Advanced Massage Intensive

Esalen Massage Staff

Whether your massage experience is professional or avocational, our aims in this course are to take you deeper into your own work and to provide whatever instruction we can to add to your understanding of the body and to your repertoire of techniques. In addition to morning and afternoon practice sessions with various instructors, we will use yoga, movement, evening lectures and discussions, and demonstrations of specific practices to stimulate ourselves out of our old patterns of working and increase the range of conditions with which we can deal effectively.

The following concerns will receive emphasis: how to sustain your energy through a day of treatments; how to clear yourself of the negative energy released by your client; how to use weight and leverage to your advantage; and so on. As we reach more and more deeply into one another, emotional changes can be triggered by the unravelling of blocked muscular energy. As these emotions present themselves, they will provide us with some first-hand practice in productive ways of moving through them.

The format and pace of this course will presume some previous massage experience—at least an introductory five-day intensive or its equivalent in your own practice. $350

Meditation and Bodily Transformation
A workshop at the Lindisfarne Association at Crestone, Colorado

Michael Murphy & James Hickman

Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman are gathering examples of extraordinary bodily transformations from various fields—from the yogic and contemplative literature, psychiatric records, hypnosis and drug research, sport, the arts, Soviet work with physical self-regulation and from many other fields—in an attempt to learn more about the range of such changes and the ways in which they happen. In this seminar they will present their work to date and speculate with the participants about the implications of their findings. Two questions for discussion are: (1) do these bodily changes reveal an evolutionary possibility? (2) How do they relate to notions of enlightenment?

Seminar participants will be led in daily sessions of meditation, running, visualization, and other exercises that support the kinds of high level change this research involves. The daily schedule will begin with sitting and walking meditation before breakfast, continue with a three hour session of running and visualization exercises from 9:30 until 12:30, and conclude with evening presentations and discussions. In one of the evening sessions, Michael Murphy and Jim Hickman will discuss their recent trip through the Soviet Union. For further information, telephone (303) 256-4695.

Being Healthy is More Than Not Being Sick: A Workshop in Holistic Health

Emmett Miller

A modern attitude toward health and wellness involves recognizing the interplay between our self-image, our emotional state, our relationships, and our health. Symptoms are thus used as guides to direct our awareness to aspects of our lifestyles which need attention.

High level wellness can be said to have been reached when symptoms become fewer and fewer. Wellness is maintained through regular applications of the principles of selective awareness, deep relaxation, aerobic exercise, rest, and proper nutrition. Moreover, these principles are used in such a manner as to produce continuous personal growth—mentally, physically, emotionally, and spiritually.

We'll begin by using simple techniques for evaluation of our present level of wellness. We will then explore the concepts of high level wellness, and learn ways to develop and maintain it through balancing and attuning mind, body, emotions, and spirit. We'll also explore the use of deep relaxation, mental imagery, and movement therapy to unstress and to project a positive self-image and a lifestyle of high level wellness. This workshop is designed for those who enjoy guided imagery and dance movement. $170

Joanna Macy & Joseph Havens

Given threats of nuclear holocaust and environmental destruction, the survival of our species has become questionable for the first time in history. This awareness creates in many a deep sense of despair, a dread too grim to name. Because of social taboos and fear of pain, we tend to hide this despair from ourselves and others—a repression which numbs us and saps the energy we need for an imaginative response. This workshop will confront our deep concerns for our planet and its people, letting them surface in us in ways that release our energy and creativity. Awareness exercises using imaging, meditations, and ritual will be combined with demonstrations of strategies in organizing support groups for personal and social change—so that participants can return to their life situations empowered with some effective tools for action, and with a deeper trust in the collective adventure of our time. $170

A Psychic Training Program

Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $350

Exploring Your Creative Process
Nancy Kaye Lunney
Through gestalt, imagery, music, writing, drawing, videotape, and spontaneity we will investigate aspects of the creative experience, from blocking and stagefright to euphoria. Focus will be on self awareness and on developing the confidence and freedom necessary for the creative journey. Individual projects can be developed during the workshop based on each person's major interest, and individual work in a supportive group setting will be stressed. Please bring whatever special materials you think you might want to play with. Piano accompaniment will be available. This workshop is suitable for non-professionals as well as professionals in the creative and performing arts. $170

2nd Annual Esalen conference on Stress: Harnessing its energy for Health
Coordinated by Julian Silverman, Director, Health Care Programs for Health Professionals
A conference on improving the quality of care of your patients—AND for your self.

This conference, to be led by nationally known experts on stress and a group of highly skilled health professional leaders, focuses upon how we health care providers can better handle stress, and this directly affects both us and our patients. The program combines a series of technical scholarly presentations on aspects of stress management with a unique experiential learning format, developed by a team of health care educators at Stanford University and the University of California/Davis Medical School's Department of Family Medicine.

Program topics to be covered by the conference faculty include:
- Learning to utilize stress to facilitate self-composure
- Teaching specifics of self-care and stress tolerance
- Attitudes, belief systems, and stress tolerance
- Who's responsible for patients' health? Re-educating patients and health professionals
- Iatrogenic disease: causes, treatments, cures
- Body awareness, bio-feedback, and attention
- Re-viewing the physiology of stress—general effects, individual differences
- Stress and identity

Nurses and physicians will receive 30 hours of continuing education credit. $550

Weekend Massage Intensive
Esalen Massage Staff
We will assist you in acquiring the basic tools you will need to begin to explore massage. By demonstrating for you and practicing with you it is our intent to introduce you to the major muscle sets of the body and to help you to establish a sense of an effective beginning, development, and closing of a full-body massage. Emphasis will be on our own grounding and internal awareness, on learning to recognize the areas in ourselves and others that need relief, and on learning to be aware of the quality of our own touch. $170

Let Go/Let Be Betty Fuller
Movement is a primary means to learning about my self, about my relationships with others, and about my place in the universe. This workshop includes physical and mental stress reduction and alignment exercises, guided imagery, nutritional information, and moving meditations, as well as the integrative bodymind approaches of trager, feldenkrais, and rolf-nolte. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual followup are presented. The schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths and participation in the work of the Esalen community. $170

Integrity David Schiffman
In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will, and authenticity.

This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength, and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical, and mental potentials and how they affect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others. $350

Movement Around Center: The Rolfed® Body T'ai Chi

Jason Mixter & Catherine Elber

Open to individuals who have received at least five sessions of rolfing. For five days participants will learn how to integrate newly discovered movement patterns into their daily lives. In addition to practices which increase body sensitivity, awareness, and energy flow, the entire course of 19 movements of t'ai chi will be experienced. Jason and Catherine look forward to a gentle week of concentrated work, outrageous expansions, and playful ease into movement around center. $350

The Gazebo$_{SM}$: An Alternative Education

Janet Lederman & Gazebo Staff

The Gazebo is a model for restructuring educational systems, both physically and philosophically. It is a new concept of "school," involving the inviting of children back into society, the integration of generations, and the re-introduction of life into the content of learning.

The workshop will be both didactic and experiential. We will investigate alternative ways of financing education and plan ways to revitalize neighborhoods as viable teaching resources by generating community involvement. The form, structure, and activities of the Gazebo will be available to participants. So far our youngest student is 9 months old and our oldest is 75. Esalen's Gazebo is more than an idea. It is an actuality. Limited to 12 participants. $170

Psychiatry & Anti-Psychiatry: An International Perspective

Franco Basaglia, Mony El Kaim, Wade Hudson & Sylvia Marcos

The movement for humane alternatives to traditional psychiatric treatment methods has become international in scope. In fact, many of the most creative and encouraging efforts have developed outside the United States. In this country, the medical model and the medical monopoly of "treatment" services remain solidly entrenched. The Bay Area Committee for Alternatives to Psychiatry (BACAP) is affiliated with an international network and will be organizing this workshop to explore issues related to transforming the public mental health system.

The workshop will also include the presentation of a 25 minute slide show, "The Politics of Psychiatric Drugs," and screenings of two powerful documentaries, Do No Harm, an analysis of the drug industry, and Hurry Tomorrow, filmed behind the locked doors of a California State Hospital. (For more information about BACAP write to them at 344 Market St., Rm. 701, San Francisco, CA 94102.) $170

Thymos*: "The Courage to Be"

Paul Lee with Rolf & Elsa VonEckartsberg

The Greek word thymos (as in the herb thyme and the human thymus gland) is translated as "vital root" or, by Paul Tillich, as the "courage to be." In this workshop Paul Lee will explore the "roots" or consciousness in thymos and discuss the assistance provided by thyme, considered to be a vitalizing herb, strongly germicidal, yet a classic for culinary use; and the role of the thymus gland, the center of the immune system where DNA was first found and originally called thymonucleic acid. In addition to discussing the relationship of thymos to molecular biology and immunology, we will examine its significance in terms of one of the deepest conflicts of our culture, the physicalist/vitalist debate in the biological sciences. We can see the re-emergence of vitalism in the environmental and holistic health movements, of which the current herb renaissance is a prime constituent.

Participants will be able to sample a variety of herbs, including thyme. Paul Lee will be assisted by his colleagues, Rolf and Elsa VonEckartsberg, in leading a series of exercises and rituals drawn from herbal practice, including ancient Egyptian "Star Rituals." $170

My current focus is on enjoying life to the fullest and bringing the clearest expression of my self to each moment. Many people describe what I do as gestalt body work with a transpersonal bend.

During the workshop we will cover many aspects of my energetic approach to sexuality and work with the body energy field and the belief system which keeps us locked in obsolete behavior patterns. Where you are is where we will start. $350

Esalen Massage Staff

An introduction to the language of the body, this course will attempt to view the human interior through various windows: yoga, feldenkrais, movement, demonstration and work sessions, and evening lectures and discussions. Every major portion of the body will be given detailed attention, and your instructors will acquaint you with their individualized styles. In the morning and afternoon practice sessions the focus will be on your integrating this information in your own manner and evolving your own style of working with the body. Our intent is not to teach you to imitate, but to help you learn to become effective; the rest you will teach yourselves. $350

The Feeling Process

Janet Zuckerman Boeve

For many people, feelings are something mysterious, something to keep to yourself, or something to go up into your head to think about. This workshop is about all the steps involved in learning to experience, respect, and honor your own feeling process in a way that will increase your own vitality and personal effectiveness in the world. You can learn to separate feelings from thoughts, learn your own body rhythms, learn to contact your own place of wisdom, and participate, in a safe environment, in the exploration of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $350

Shiatsu Massage—The Full Treatment

Patricia Caldwell

Shiatsu is the oriental art in which the thumbs and hands are used to press certain points over the entire body. A working knowledge of a full shiatsu treatment for personal or professional use will be given. Emphasis will be on seeing and treating people as wholes, centering techniques, and shiatsu as a self-awareness practice and spiritual discipline. Charts will be provided. $350

Beyond Self-Growth: Awareness Training for Political Being

Walt Anderson & Abe Levitsky

There are no apolitical beings. There are only those who are blind to the full sense of membership in the human family, the political order, the ecosystem. The process of growth leads beyond the narrowly defined self to wider awareness and engagement.

Using group dynamics, psychodrama, and gestalt, we will explore the evolutionary/political/ecological dimensions of your personal struggle to survive and be fully human. $170

French Intensive/Biodynamic Gardening
David Field Based on the belief that a fuller understanding of nature will yield fertility in the garden, French intensive/biodynamic techniques approach plants and soil through a balance of spiritual and practical points of view. Supreme drainage and abundance are realized through careful cultivation, fertilization, and propagation in conjunction with cyclic forces. The flow of life is encouraged. Workshop participants will actively engage in all processes which lead to health of the soul, including double-digging, tilthing, and dressing of raised beds; preparation of seed flats, sowing of seeds, and transplanting; composting; the importance of herbs; and specifics of climate and plant variety selection for various geography. $170

Self-Hypnosis, Selective Awareness & Movement
Emmett Miller Movement requires the use of muscular activity in varying degrees of intensity. So, too, thought processes and interpersonal communication proceed through stages of higher and lower energy. Most of our personal and social difficulties (symptoms, unwanted emotions, maladaptive habit patterns) can be eased when we learn to react in accordance with and in response to our internal and external environment.

In this workshop we will explore principles of self-hypnosis, selective awareness, feldenkrais, t'ai chi, dance, and movement therapy—to expand our self-awareness and ability to allow our minds and bodies to flow with our changing experiences. The explorations offered will be especially good for people who have had experience in these fields before. $170

Opening the Feelings
Siri Mishler & Dale Cummings To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this workshop. We will be employing radix neo-reichian methods of emotional release, the most important of which is the radix intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, which can provide a lot of emotional support among participants. Grief or pain, fear and rage that have been held in since childhood can emerge. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he or she may discover a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience may change as feelings of tenderness and sexual feelings intensify and merge. $350

Work/Play: Practical Group Creativity in the Changing World of Business

Cavas Gobhai

Business techniques are often perceived as lacking in creativity and human values. However, innovation-minded managers have long recognized the value of using nonrational insights and cooperative accomplishment in place of the usual linear and competitive modes. This workshop will explore several such techniques that have withstood the test of reality in the marketplace. The medium of learning will be actual topics brought by workshop participants. Among the issues addressed will be:

How to invite and generate new ideas from your brain's right hemisphere.
How to generate involvement and commitment to change.
How to treat ideas in ways that lead to successful implementation.
How to develop a working understanding of soft concepts like conflict, commitment, consensus, cooperation, individual responsibility, and others relevant to becoming successful change agents. $170

The Body and the Energy Body

George Leonard

Many ancient and modern disciplines of personal health, growth, and change depend upon concepts of energy flows in and around the bodies of living things. Using methods derived from the art of aikido, George Leonard will present his approach to the human biofield or "energy body." Through simple mental and physical exercises, participants will experience their energy bodies in interaction with nature and other people, and will practice centering and heightened awareness with special attention to stress reduction and good health. They will be introduced to alternative ways of dealing with everyday life situations—especially those involving tension and expectation—and will explore ways of getting in touch with their own hidden powers. There will also be discussion of these experiences as they relate to education, sports, and social transformation. $170

Vision Improvement—Our Willingness to See

Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita)

This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and our selves to see. Utilizing deep emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the bates system, nutrition, and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience and expand—enabling us to look newly at our selves and our world in which we live. $170

Meditation and Prayer Workshop

Daniel O'Hanlon

This workshop provides introductory instruction and guidance in a variety of practices, drawn from the Christian traditions of East and West, from Hindu and Buddhist disciplines, and from the recent explorations of the human potential movement.

The workshop will encourage and assist each participant to discover his or her own path. The work will move in two states:

1) Guided experience in a variety of ways of deepening contemplation: breathing awareness, breath as gesture of prayer, body awareness meditations, mantras, the Jesus prayer, chanting, hatha yoga, visualization and fantasy, etc.

2) Under personal direction, more intense work with that practice or those practices most suited to each individual.

Sensory Awareness

Seymour Carter

"What was the nature of your face before you were born?" —Zen Koan

We have to learn to feel, taste, look, and speak without the restrictive authority of an idealized self-image, an overlay of do's and don'ts dulling our senses and confusing our minds.

We will focus on bringing into the foreground of consciousness an awareness of our basic functioning, unclouded by habits, ambitions, or fears. Being in direct contact with our own naturalness opens us to a fuller connection with our innate talents and capacities, freeing us for new delight and depth in living and being. $350

Merri Goldenson (Devarani) & John Majuri

Inside each of us there lives a free, loving, creative, and spontaneous child. Our life histories and repressed feelings of anger, fear, sorrow, and pain are locked in our body armor. Our focus in this workshop will be to discover new ways we can soften, let go, and surrender to ourselves.

In a supportive and safe environment we will utilize individual reichian intensives, group interaction, bio-energetics, imagery, hypnosis, dance, and massage. We can, once again, feel the flow of our sexual energy and the harmony of our being. $350

Weekend of November 7-9

Facilitating High Level Performance
Jerry Fletcher & John Williamson

The common critique of the human potential movement as narcissistic assumes an incompatibility between high levels of personal performance and fulfillment on the one hand, and the requirements of social and corporate stability or the larger social good. Yet people reflecting on their times of maximum performance usually regard them as times of significantly constructive social good. Bringing such evidence to bear to resolve the apparent paradox between high levels of personal fulfillment and the larger social good remains one of the major tasks of those in the consciousness movement who seek to have broad social and political impact. This seminar will present an intellectual basis for resolving this apparent paradox, and provide a variety of experiences for individuals to explore their own processes for achieving high levels of performance, to identify and deal with both personal barriers and external barriers to achieving high levels of performance, and to practice various methods of facilitating high levels of performance in others, either individually or in groups. $170

Principles of Self-Healing and Self Evolution
Rick Ingrasci

This workshop will be an experiential introduction to the basic principles of self-healing and self-evolution, with special emphasis on the role of the healing crisis and spiritual emergencies in the evolutionary process. Itzhak Bentov's psychophysiological model of kundalini will provide a framework for understanding transpersonal crises, and a variety of techniques for enhancing the self-healing process will be explored. Health professionals interested in working with spiritual emergencies and self-care will find this workshop of particular value. $170

Astrology: A Map of the Psyche
Robert Hand

Carl Jung once stated that astrology contained within its teachings the sum total of the psychological knowledge of the ancients. The point of this workshop will be to show the validity of this statement expressed in modern terms.

Many people have tried to make astrology fit into various systems of modern psychology. Here we will explore the extent to which astrology is, in itself, a complete system of psychology, which makes its own statements about human nature, and which suggests rather surprising consequences for ideas of human life and behavior.

Little or no previous knowledge of astrology will be required in this workshop. We will be concerned largely with the symbolism and its psychological import, not especially with the techniques of horoscope analysis. Any material of a technical nature that is needed in the workshop will be introduced as we go along. $170

The Heart of the Matter
Donald Sandner & Stephen Schoen

The "matter" of our title is the content of our lives: our bodies, our dreams, our waking problems, our pleasures, griefs, and aspirations. The "heart of the matter" is our psychological center, often called personal or spiritual truth. We shall make use of meditation, jungian dream work, and gestalt individual and group work. Our concern in the workshop is to feel, and thus, know, the heart of our lives as we are living them. $170

The Healing Community: A Workshop and Seminar for Health Care Professionals
Kathleen Keating, RN

We will experience living together as an intentional community as we explore the theory and dynamics of roles and behaviors which are healing, for ourselves as well as for our clients and patients. We will pay particular attention to the powerful healing energy that is created by the total group. There will be special emphasis on the healing modalities and techniques in the wellness and wholistic health revolution and also on group dynamics, communication, and methods for uncovering creative solutions. Individuals will have an opportunity to explore individual power and leadership within the group. Any group, whether it is the staff and patients of a medical unit of a general hospital, the staff and patients of a locked psychiatric ward, or the administrative staff of any health care facility, is potentially a healing community. T'ai Chi Chih—A Gift of Life
Catherine Elber

First presented to the public in 1974, t'ai chi chih is based on ancient movements that were a closely guarded secret of the Chinese emperors and their clansmen for over a thousand years.

Easier than t'ai chi chuan, these 19 gentle movements are becoming one of the simplest and most effective methods available for realizing within one's self how truly beautiful the gift of life really is.

By adding the principles of these motions to your life, you can experience a continual unfoldment of your potential while providing an enrichment to your life on every level. The effects of these movements enable you to experience the beauty and honor of personal transformation as your body, mind, and soul reap the benefits of harmony and balance—physical health and grace, mental peace and clarity, spiritual infinity. $350

The Singing Earth
Prem Das & Rutuima Das

For five days we will explore shamanic methods of communicating with the earth, sun, stars, and the deeper levels of our own being. Singing and dancing together we will open the channels of healing energy which surround us, and thus vitalize our physical, emotional, mental, and spiritual self. Through a review of belief systems (Huichol Indian, Hindu-Gyan, and Vedanta, as well as our own transindustrial-technological), we will study the possibilities of remote viewing, out of the body experience, time travel, and opening the inner doorway to experiencing higher levels of consciousness and intelligence. In culmination, we will have a ceremony/celebration focusing upon positive thoughts, prayers, and songs dedicated to the earth and all of her children, of all nationalities and species.

Esalen's Energy Path: Toward the Utilization of Renewable Resources
Leon Trice, Jose Mozic & the Esalen Energy Team

This workshop is intended to bring together both the philosopher and the technician of energy related ideas. We will explore in detail how Esalen is making the transition from an energy dependant state to one of independence, where responsibility is the keynote of a consciousness based on the use of those energy sources which are abundant and renewable. A new energy paradigm will be outlined, using the Esalen community as a case in study and as a model in developing an ecological path toward a more holistic approach in the utilization of our natural resources. $170

Symbols of Personal Growth: The Tarot
Angeles Arrien & Sharon Jeffrey

Tarot symbols provide a visual map which contains specific symbolic tools for aiding personal growth and transformation. During the seminar these ancient visual symbols will be examined with an emphasis on how they can be applied in personal, sociological, psychological, educational, and managerial situations. The significance and meaning of the symbols, myths, colors, numbers, and astrological aspects found within the Thoth deck will be explored and related to personal growth processes. Individual consultations will be a part of the weekend experience. $170

Towards a More Sensitive Relating
Charlotte Selver & Charles Brooks

An introduction to sensing, for more meaningful contact with our own nature and with the world around us.

How we relate to our deep inner needs, to other people, or to different tasks and situations depends on how we perceive them and how we trust our own findings. When perception is clear and full, we cannot make mistakes. Our whole organism is geared to respond appropriately. We have come, however, to see through a fog of preconceptions, a bewildering fabric of the ideas and judgments of others. Our own experience has been belittled; our perceptive faculties have lost their edge. The true I and the true you no longer meet. Both life and death have become often threatening fantasies.

Sensory awareness is a practice for rediscovering and reviving full sensory functioning. Through the gradual quieting of premature and inappropriate intellectual activity, it directs our attention both inwards and outwards to the actuality of the present moment. As perceptivity revives, true relationship becomes possible. Each everyday occasion in living gains its own freshness, its own uniqueness. We can become content again, like healthy children, as quality begins to make quantity unimportant.

The few hours of a weekend workshop may, and often do, permit a glimpse of something so exciting, so enriching, that a person may wish to change his life in order to follow it up. $170

Ken Dychtwald & Staff

In this five day experiential workshop, we will combine the beauty of Big Sur and the Esalen facilities with some of the most successful methods for enhancing health and optimizing bodymind functioning gathered from the holistic health, human potential, and physical fitness fields. This comprehensive program has been especially designed to allow each participant and opportunity to rest, refresh, and renew mental and physical functioning while simultaneously learning practical stress-management, self-care, and life planning skills.

The daily fourteen hour (optional) program will include: running, stretching and aerobic dancing clinics; meditation, relaxation, and stress-reducing classes; health walks/hikes; sensory awareness and creative visualization instruction; massage classes at the Esalen baths; healthy and nutritious meals prepared in the Esalen kitchen; and evening seminars on such topics as life planning, longevity, time management, optimal fitness, diet and nutrition, stress-management, and holistic health care. $350

Self-Acceptance—The Freedom to Be
David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express: tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness, as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $350

This workshop provides an opportunity for you to pay attention to the quality of your interpersonal contact, particularly to your willingness to take risks and to your ability to stay true to your own feelings while meeting and contacting others.

You may discover your own rhythm of contact and withdrawal; you may discover how you sabotage yourself from having more satisfying relationships; you may discover you're getting exactly what you want from your relationships. You may discover anything; you may discover nothing. You may even discover that you're in charge. $170

On Beyond Newton
Nick Herbert & April Burns

Fifty years ago, physicists became aware that the world is not a great machine. Yet old mechanistic mythologies still dominate our thoughts and actions. We will examine recent experiences that have moved physicists to change their minds about nature. Acknowledging our natural connections through play and t'ai chi based movement we can begin to stretch our beliefs about reality to fit the facts. Circle of Damage-Circle of Grace: Being With Your Child and Being Your Child
A Weekend for Children and Their Parents
Mira Rothenberg

Whenever any of us are hurt, we build our own fortress around the wound and thus insulate ourselves against further pain. An armor develops in the muscles of our bodies and breathing becomes controlled to reduce our level of feeling. The strength of the walls depends upon the degree of the hurt. Some fortresses have walls so thin that with a little help we can easily move through them and we are out again. Others are much deeper and have a life and tenacity of their own. They are reflected in rigid roles and are solidified in our bodies as chronic tensions and patterns of bodily attitudes.

In this workshop we will look at the process by which we as parents, children, and the family unit, constrict intimacy and fortify these citadels. We will explore safe ways to begin to dissolve these blocks and re-establish a basis for the exchange of feelings, needs, and perceptions.

We can give up blame and guilt and each take responsibility for stopping the circle of damage and restoring our own childlike grace which is the birthright of us all.

Heal Thy Self: A Workshop for Health Professionals
Hughes Andrus, MD
Mary O'Hara-Devereaux, FNP
& Cynthia Rogers

This workshop focuses on our behavior as health care practitioners and how this behavior affects our own health as well as the health of our patients. It emphasizes:

Self-responsibility for each practitioner's health;

Techniques for enhancing the sensitivity of practitioners in ways which make them more "tuned-in" to each patient-consumer;

Applying sound judgment and knowledge in relation to patients and simultaneously not taking health-care responsibility away from patients.

We will use methods of self-discovery derived from psychosynthesis, gestalt, meditation, and other systems, in addition to lecture and discussion on the several themes surrounding self care. Participants will have an opportunity to make an assessment of their own health status and consider changes for themselves and changes in their clinical practice styles. For additional information see page 13. $350

Self Re-Parenting
Joan Fiore
& Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to return to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments will progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and re-infanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $350

A Movement Approach to Individual Growth and Group Process
Mangrove

Mangrove is a community and performance collective of seven men from San Francisco. We work in an improvisational life process originating in organic movement flow.

We begin with our most basic dances of lying, sitting, standing, walking, and running. Each person explores the dynamics of his moving/thinking body in relation to balance, momentum, and gravity. We use the tools of nonverbal communication: the dynamics of pressure, immediate responsiveness, and the give and take of weight. To play with each other in the present moment, we let go of expectations, projections, and static images of ourselves.

This everchanging dance constantly asks for our presence and support, physically, emotionally, and spiritually. We dance alone, in pairs, and as a group, and we use voice and music to support and extend the contact improvisation. $350

The Painting Experience
Michell Cassou
& Stewart Cubley

This workshop is designed to develop an experiential understanding of spontaneous expression using the tool of creative painting. Emphasis will be placed upon making the discrimination between painting from thought and painting directly from feeling. As the creative process unfolds, the painting experience becomes a natural vehicle for discovering intuitive action as it occurs in painting and in life. A sense of confidence in personal expression can be developed, as well as a style unique to each individual. No experience in painting is necessary.

On one evening of the workshop there will be a showing of Eternal Return, an audio-visual presentation of Michell's work depicting the inner process of creative evolution. $170 plus $10 materials fee.

Body Work: A Workshop for Body Workers & Their Clients
Peter Levine

Central to all body work forms, regardless of their theoretical underpinning, is the concept of a vital force — a life energy that frequently is blocked from its natural expression in our daily lives. Body workers are trained to observe the restrictions of this vital energy in the body and assist clients in unblocking it. Yet training often fails to provide us with appropriate knowledge and experience to deal with physiological and emotional responses that frequently accompany a body work session, such as trembling, vibrations, tingling, numbness, lightness, immobilization, crying, anger, and laughter.

Since the understanding of these phenomena are outside the framework of many body work systems, these sensations may be confusing to client and practitioner alike, and response to the sensations may be inadequate. Yet if handled appropriately and facilitated when necessary, these emotional and physiological expressions can provide integrating experiences that assist the body in letting go of long-held stress patterns.

Individuals' experiences during body work will be used as case demonstrations to explore particular techniques and approaches that work more effectively in dissolving body armor and releasing accumulated stress and energy. Ways of adapting these methods to individuals' work will be examined. $170

Living and Loving . . . Fully Phyllis Shankman

Using gestalt awareness processes, meditation, movement, and massage, we will explore, individually and as a group, our willingness/resistance to feel and express our power, our tenderness, our anger and sadness, our fears, our joy, and our creativity. We will support each other and move together toward a clearer, more complete sense of ourselves and the ways in which we can live and love more fully and naturally. $350

Rolfing®-Movement Integration: A Fluidity of Being
Elisa Lodge

As we are, so we move and relate . . .
spontaneous-restricted flowing-tense open-inhibited

In this workshop we will experience a process of movement education based on the principles of Ida Rolf. This work correlated the relationship between the body's structure, emotional attitudes, and kinesthetic experience. Everyday movements and specialized activities (jogging, playing musical instruments, etc.) become more effortless and graceful when we are balanced to gravity. The spirit we open to through awareness is ageless. It is the source of our enthusiasm, excitement, and strength.

Group and individual work will be done, using gestalt, dance, and the healing use of touch — all for the benefit of becoming more present. $350

Psychic Work and Spiritism
Luiz Gasparetto & Esalen Staff

This workshop is for those who have been involved with psychic experiences and want to develop more of their potential. We will guide you by using popular Brazilian methods to develop contact with your spiritual guide. The workshop includes training in "spiritual massage," which is a form of body work recently developed at Esalen, following spirit instructions. We will explore means of developing mediumship, including spiritual cleansing and how to deal with different kinds of energy that naturally emerge with this kind of work. $350

Songs of Innocence, Songs of Experience
Nancy Kaye Lunney

This weekend is a voyage into song for people who want to sing but are afraid or worried about what others think, for shower singers and choir members who dream of hitting the big time, as well as for accomplished singers who want to improve their performance. Piano accompaniment, hand-held microphones, and video feedback will be part of a supportive environment for self-expression. Bring your own favorite song titles or choose from a variety at Esalen. Most important, bring your own styles, your voices, and a willingness to explore your creative potential. Each of us has a song to sing and the courage to share it with others. $170

Couples Workshop: Intimacy and Personal Growth
Betsy Hand & Gerald Smith

This workshop will focus on deepening contact and strengthening mutual support while expanding as individuals. The approaches will be tailored to what each of you brings to the weekend. $170 per person

Sexuality and Spirituality
Sam Keen

All of us in Western culture are heirs to dualistic ways of thinking, feeling, and being in the world. We suffer from a schizophrenic vision which posits a necessary civil war between:

mind and body
spirit and matter
reason and emotion
ego and id
spirituality and sexuality culture and nature
man and woman.

This playshop, consisting of lectures, guided journeys in memory and imagination, kindergarten drawing, and care/ful touch, will seek to analyze and find ways to heal these conflicts, bring an end to the civil war, and discover how we may make a rich marriage between sexuality and spirituality which will allow us to fully inhabit and transcend the flesh. $170

Getting Clear for the Holiday Season and a New Year: A Reichian-Gestalt Intensive
Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

In this last month of 1980, with the pressures of the holiday season ahead, this workshop provides the time and the space to take stock of the past year — its satisfactions and its disappointments; to share the memories, fantasies, dreams we've entertained; to come to terms with our business of the past; and to release the energy we've locked there so that we can move on, truly new, to the new days ahead. We'll take some time to re-search our families, to explore how our expectations of the future might actually affect our future. We'll take some time to charge, discharge, and re-charge, some time to re-experience, and lots of time to contact ourselves and each other. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. $350

Sound Body/Sound Mind: An Introduction to Ohashi-atsu
Wataru Ohashi

By utilizing the entire body energy of the giver upon the receiver, ohashi-atsu helps to restore a feeling of well-being and good health through touch. This workshop will teach basic ohashi-atsu techniques, including knowledge of tsubos (pressure points) and meridians (energy channels), how to utilize the essential ki energy, and how to apply body weight rather than muscular pressure for a more continuous, gentle, touching motion. $350

Focusing: An Integrative Process of Change
John Welwood Focusing is a simple experiential method for untangling life problems, emotional blockages, or fixed mental habits, and opening up the natural wisdom of the body/mind. It developed out of many years of research into the core process of change in psychotherapy and creativity by Eugene Gendlin, John Welwood, and others at the University of Chicago.

Focusing teaches people how to pay attention to a bodily "felt sense," which contains what they need to know about their lives, allowing new words and images to arise from it. This process integrates mind and body, intellect and intuition, resulting in a "felt shift," a bodily-felt release which allows a person to discover new ways of being and doing, which inspires forward movement in one's life. Focusing also facilitates stress reduction, the ability to listen and communicate more effectively, creativity, and physical healing.

Gestalt Workshop
Marty Fromm This workshop is designed for professionals who are interested in further personal growth and professional training in the practice of gestalt, as well as for others who are simply interested in their own personal growth through gestalt. While the sessions will be mostly experiential, ample time will be provided for didactic sessions of theory and practice.

The focus is on awareness: the discovery of what is, rather than on what was, might be, or should be. We will concentrate on "how and now" rather than on "why and because" of past and future, and will attend to body language and feelings. $350

Psyche as Dream and Body Image
Robert Bosnak, Deanne Lemle & Earl Ettienne Since the beginnings of depth psychology it has been noticed that psyche exists in mythical images. This workshop will deal with two living homegrounds of myth: the dream and the body image.

Jung discovered that the unconscious psyche consists of autonomous forces he called the complexes. These complexes have their own direction, intention and character, and are best imagined as independent people sharing soul with the ego. Our workshop will be a tribute to the autonomy of these multiple people of the unconscious psyche.

We will attempt to let them flourish as they present themselves in our dreams and body images so that we may learn about the perspectives that live with us in our soul. The individuation process may begin at the point where the ego discovers that she or he is not the only inhabitant of psyche and that the other is not only an outer person, but one who lives with us in our own soul as well. The workshop will include both experiential and didactic sessions. $350

The winter solstice is a time for restful introspection as the earth's outer darkness allows the inner sun of the soul to regenerate and find expression. Traditional cultures the world over have rested, fasted, and feasted during this time of the year in celebration of the turning point, the cyclic return.

We will join together to create our own ritual and pageant. Using a variety of practices, such as gestalt, guided fantasy, movement, massage, and more, we will integrate our personal rituals into a group presentation. $170

'Tis the season for year-end accounting—body, mind and spirit; for weeding self-negating weed beliefs and planting self expanding and self enhancing seed beliefs; for awareness through feldenkrais, trager, gestalt, and massage; for clearing emotional log jams to give free rein to choice and self-response-ability; for balance and energy in the fine-tuning of bodymind to the power of "the Force" through guided imagery, meditation, music, dance, and laughter. Rejoice! Bring musical instruments. $350

New Beginnings
Deborah Medow

The old year dies; another is born . . . a time to shake old patterns and welcome being in a new way. Meditation and yoga, massage, gestalt practice, music and sound, movement and dance are the modes of transit we will use. Let's breathe out the old, inhale the new, and celebrate new beginnings for the coming year! $350

Christmas Present
Paul Rebillot

We've idealized birth in the Christmas story—the newborn child surrounded by adoring parents, singing angels, comforting animals; worshipped by the wise and the simple, welcomed into the world and loved for nothing that he does, but for simply being who he is. Most of us were not welcomed in the same way, and at Christmastime our disillusionment peaks, our despondency and regrets based on unfulfilled ideals, promises, and fairy tales. Using gestalt, guided fantasy, theatre games, and rituals, we will seek to release ourselves from the excess baggage of past regrets and future expectations in order to return to the divine simplicity of our own present being. Out of that simplicity, we will create our own Christmas Present, a celebration in which each of us singly and all of us together can give ourselves our self for Christmas. $350

Self and Beyond John Zeigler

". . . the key is to open a way whence the imprisoned splendor can escape." —Browning

Come celebrate your limitlessness and restore the original you: loveable, capable, and unscarred by destructive parental/societal belief systems. Invoke a serene and perfect inner self that can give expression to a natural clarity, aliveness, and creativity. We will use a synthesis of intensive body and gestalt work for deep emotional release, self-hypnosis for reprogramming a negative consciousness, and other ancient and modern body/mind/spirit methods. Through supportive group interaction you can experience problems for what they really are: opportunities that can create a spontaneous and unconditional love of self, others, and an abundant universe. Through massage, movement, t'ai chi, music, singing, improvisation, and laughter you will awaken to the miracle of what you already are. $350

Energy Systems and Gestalt Process
Alan Schwartz

Read the December 28-January 2 description. This will be a weekend to explore and understand our individual energy systems and their relation to how we both make contact and inhibit contact. One focus will be on integration via energy release techniques. Another will be on the simple task of being present, physiologically and emotionally, being aware that contact refers to our consistent awareness process and the autonomous expression of who we are. $170

The Elements: States of Consciousness and Healing Energies
Ralph Metzner

The "elements" (four in the European tradition, five in Indian and China) represent fundamental principles of life and nature. Their meanings extend into psychosomatic illness/wellness, personality types (Jung's functions, the humors, astrology), the alchemy of relationships, ecological awareness, and planetary unity. In this workshop we study their symbolic expressions in various traditions and experience how they can further the integration of body, psyche, spirit, and nature. Methods used will include meditation, guided symbolic imagery, audio-visual media, breath and movement, body and field energy awareness, polarity balancing, and sensory attunement. $170

Pleasure, Sensuality & Your Body
Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact and nurturing, sensitive giving, and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean, and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $170

Gestalt, Bioenergy & Human Contact; Old & New Learning Integrated

Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self and our interdependence with physical and social environments. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $350

Reichian Gestalt: A Workshop for Contact and Release

Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita)

This workshop provides a safe environment to experience consciously the process of our own unfolding—physically, emotionally, energetically, sexually, spiritually.

As we become aware of the ways we hold back our self-expression (flow of life energy) we then have the choice to let go. By contacting tension (stuck, accumulated energy) and allowing emotions which have been locked and frozen in our bodies, often since early infancy, we then have the opportunity to open ourselves to the creative flow of life energy within each of us. As we contact and allow our hurts and pain, we can then increase our capacity for pleasure and joy. As we allow our expression of anger, which is a powerfully expansive, outward directed energy, we can open and deepen our capacity for love and compassion. As we contact and allow our expression of fear, we can then move toward expanding our capacity for trusting—ourselves and others. Learning to trust our bodies, our responsiveness and movement, is a liberating experience.

Utilizing reichian emotional release, gestalt practice, bioenergetics, feldenkrais, massage, reflexology, dance, meditation, and various other bodymind approaches, we can move toward expanding our capacity for trust and fulfillment. $350

Ilana Rubenfeld

The sea always has waves . . . waves are the sea . . . sea and waves are one. To speak of waves apart from the sea is a delusion—so mind and body are one!

The focus in this workshop will be on experiencing one's own body and emotions as a total organism. Emotions and memories are often stored in our bodies, resulting in tension and imbalance. A unique blend of gestalt, alexander technique, and feldenkrais exercises will be used as a gateway to contacting, expressing, and working through deep feelings. Massage staff will be on hand to assist the workshop.

We have the choice to contact ourselves and each other with joy, sadness, compassion, humor, ideas, and with the body—the whole person. $520

Integrating Total Life Experience into Medical History: The Global Life Assessment

Jack Downing, MD

Valid holistic medical practice requires comprehensive examination of both the historical and current aspects of the patient's life experience. This program has a threefold emphasis: informational; removal of significant empathic blocks in awareness; and teaching simple tools for enhancing observation and interpretation of body language. The participants will examine their own life experience in detail, including the presentation of a written, structured historical form to the group. Thereby they can enhance objective self-awareness and learn to use effectively these tools in patient care. Observation and interpretation of body language and selective therapeutic intervention during history taking and clinical examination will be taught. Bodily fears and responses to touching as a method of stress reduction will be elucidated. For additional information see page 13. $170

Applied Vulnerability: New Competence for Learning Our Way into the Future

Donald Michael

This workshop will explore the personal, organizational, and societal consequences of acknowledging our well disguised ignorance about the processes and directions of societal change in today's and tomorrow's turbulent world. Acknowledging ignorance can encourage and sustain responsibility and compassion and it is the prerequisite for true learning. Acknowledging ignorance also makes persons and organizations vulnerable, which can encourage the creation and appreciation of new options. However, to apply vulnerability creatively and effectively to critical societal tasks, new competences are needed. These include error embracing, being future-responsive, acknowledging uncertainty, interpersonal competence, and boundary spanning. We will examine the characteristics of these new competences and apply them to our own situations. The workshop is relevant for and will benefit from the participation of both new age activists and those in conventional organizations seeking more meaningful and effective engagement with an unfamiliar and uncertain world. $170

Lower Back Syndrome
Ruthy Alon

In our over-tense and under-moving culture, lower back discomfort is a common issue. This workshop offers self-healing processes for kinesthetic functioning from the feldenkrais method, awareness through movement.

As we experiment with the patterns of primal evolution by which nature has prepared us for mature movement, we arrive at healing insights. We relearn the grammar of flow and grace as we reconstruct our development through early infancy.

We train our organism into pain-free, lively coordination as we experience a range of mindful alternative movements selected from our natural vocabulary. We challenge our body intelligence to make new choices in the way we use ourselves. In this autonomous learning process the search for ease is our guide to well-being. The re-education of the lower back function is explored in the context of its interactions with the whole body. The style of movement is gentle and moderated to personal pace, which encourages listening to inner quality rather than performing mechanically. Emphasis is placed on our relationship to gravity and its effect on alignment, as well as on our ability, on the organic level, to accept being held and to allow love in. $350

Woman and Nature: A New Vision
Susan Griffin

Western culture has pictured both woman and nature as wild, unreasonable beings, or forces, which must be tamed and controlled by more reasonable God-like minds. Not only are women and the earth exploited and dominated by this ideology, but the emotional life of men is also sacrificed to this way of thinking. We are distorted and made less than ourselves. We are in danger of losing our capacity to know and love other beings. Behind the doctrine of control lies a psyche afraid of the power of nature to change our lives, afraid of both life and death. (Because a woman's body symbolizes life and death, in this view, women are hated and feared.) We can find another way of seeing and being in feminism and ecology, a vision of nature and of woman as the intelligent other, the subject and not the object, the one-in-whom-we-see-ourselves, in whom both spirit and matter combine to speak to us of a deeper "reason." In this workshop we will discuss these two ideas of the nature of the world both historically and in the context of our own lives, the decisions we have made or are making, our fears, our dreams, the processes of our work, ways of knowing and loving others. Together we will conceive not only utopian ideas, but also small events in our own lives which lead to transformation. $170

Touchstones of Reality
Maurice Friedman & Elijah David Herschler

Touchstones of reality are glimpses of a way at once uniquely personal and human that we experience in our meetings with persons, situations, characters of literature, religious scriptures, nature, art, or music. They are events that yield meaning and insight and help us in forming our life-stances and basic attitudes, and our understanding. They may arise out of mystical experiences, dreams, conflicts, making or creating a poem or a work of art.

When two people really touch each other as persons, whether physically, emotionally, mentally, or spiritually, it is a mutual revelation of life-stances. Maurice Friedman, philosopher and writer, and Elijah Herschler, sculptor, architect, photographer, writer, and poet, will share some of their own touchstones of reality with the group and then invite the members to five days of active sharing and dialogue of one another's ways of touching life. There is no one form for such sharing. Each person should bring an event, a poem, a dream, a song, a photograph, or a Zen, Sufi, or a Hasidic tale, to share. $350

Is Your Neck the Bottleneck of Your Energy?
Ruthy Alon

We introduce processes of mindful movements from the feldenkrais method that nurture the body intelligence and make available choices and qualities of coordination that are obscured from us in our culture of pressures and demands.

We re-educate the function of the neck by exploring the relationships of movement patterns throughout the whole body. In its process of ever-needing to adjust, the neck may lose its freedom, compensating for and absorbing tensions and expressions from toe to head. The healing of the neck takes place when a family therapy of the total organism clarifies its interactions in order to bring relief to the sensitive member.

You will experiment with many practical ideas to take home that will support you on a self-care path of gratifying ways of using your body so that your neck may work for you and not against you. $170

Cosmodrama: Experiencing the Relationship Between Consciousness and Reality

Pierre Weil

The experience of reality is a function of the state of consciousness we are in. Cosmodrama was created and based on the concept that man is, above all, a cosmic being. A new holistic model is developed as a circular network in which states of consciousness (sleep, dream, relaxed, awake, cosmic) are related with the two aspects of reality: inside reality (physical, emotional, mental, psi, and self) and outside reality (personal, interpersonal, social, earth, and the universe).

You will be shown how to manage your own drama and get more inner peace and freedom. This network for a new age integrates formal and intellectual education with psychodrama, gestalt, psychoanalysis, psychosynthesis, bodywork, meditation, yoga, tantric approach, etc. $350

Close Encounters: An Experiment in Meeting and Contacting Other Human Beings

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

For workshop description see November 21-23. $170

A Weekend with Peter Caddy, Co-Founder of Findhorn

This workshop will provide an introduction to the founding, growth, and development of Findhorn, the principles of creating a New Age community, the cooperation with nature, the laws of manifestation, relationships and the balance between male and female, and the roles of individuals, groups, and communities in world transformation. $170

From Burnout to Personal Growth: Increasing Effectiveness and Enjoyment in Work and Life

Elliot Aronson & Ayala Pines

This workshop is designed for people who work with people and who have experienced or are experiencing burnout. It deals with the impact of burnout on both the service provider and the client, ways of finding and recognizing support resources on the job, and positive techniques of dealing with burnout and life tedium. Through lectures, group discussions, and input from the participants themselves, individuals will have the opportunity to increase their understanding of those aspects of their own work and life which could cause burnout. In addition they will be provided with the tools and opportunity to learn how to handle these problems in order to increase the productivity and joyousness of their relationships with clients, colleagues, family, and friends. For additional information see page 13. $170

Feeling and Movement

Heidi Schaffer David Silverstein & Sandra Thompson

Through the combination of radix and neo-reichian methods with dance and movement, we will emphasize loosening and opening the body to the natural flow of its own energy. Participants can become aware of attitudes and muscular tensions that inhibit spontaneity and confine individual movement to a set or particular pattern. Radix intensives and deep feeling exercises will provide opportunities to release some of these tensions. Dance and movement experiences will offer a means of expressing the flow of energy that is freed by this release. $170

The Possible Human in the Possible Society

Jean Houston — The course will be for those deeply committed to social, personal, and spiritual transformation and willing to take the risks needed when they journey with such intention to the very edges of their lives. Together we will undertake a depth exploration of our cultural and spiritual heritage and then look to the evolutionary possibilities inherent for present culture and consciousness. We will seek the pattern that connects, thus finding ways to discover meaning, give impetus to our growth, and illumine our transitions. We will try to determine ways in which the possible human can help to create the possible society. $350

Physics Weekend: Bell's Theorem and the Nature of Reality

Nick Herbert, Saul-Paul Sirag — Quantum theory is universally successful in describing nature at all levels accessible to experiment. However, this comprehensive practical success is accompanied by an unprecedented disagreement as to what quantum theory actually means, and a corresponding confusion as to what sort of reality supports the phenomenal world.

Controversy over the nature of deep reality has been sharpened by Bell's theorem, which proves that any conceivable objective reality underlying the facts of experience must be independent of space and time. Thus either there is no ultimate objective reality, or this reality is more peculiar than we have been led (by ordinary physics) to believe. The impact of Bell's theorem is just beginning to be felt in the world of physics, but it is rather like the situation of the Michelson-Morley experiment, which led to Einstein's theory of relativity. Just what this current controversy in the foundations of physics will lead to is not yet clear, but the various possibilities will be explored in this weekend presentation. $170

Trust Your Process—A Raku Sculpture Workshop

Paul Rebillot & Richard Horan — "It is not pots we are forming but ourselves." —M.C. Richards, The Crossing Point

For seven days, we will follow the process of the ancient art of raku pottery as a symbol of our own inner process of self-transformation. Each afternoon we will meet with Richard Horan in the barn at Esalen. As we shape, dry, glaze, fire, and use our sculptures, we will, through gestalt and other disciplines, experience these same processes in relation to our lives. How do we form ourselves? How do we cleanse ourselves, rid ourselves of excess moisture—tears and other emotions? How do we decorate ourselves? What risks are we willing to take? How does the fire of our being influence the form we've made of ourselves? And what use—what expression—do we give to that form and fire, once united? The workshop will culminate in a final ritual in which we use the objects we've created, reflecting on the discoveries that we've made.

Trust in process is the secret of every art—whether it is pots we are making, or ourselves. $520

New Perspectives in Psychotherapy and Self-Exploration

Stanislav & Christina Grof — We will focus on the observations from modern consciousness research that have revolutionary implications for the theory and practice of psychotherapy. The suggested revisions include an expanded model of the human mind, new techniques and strategies of self-exploration, and powerful unconventional mechanisms of personality change. The participants will have the opportunity to explore the new principles in experiential sessions combining pranayama breathing, evocative music, body work, and mandala drawing. Special attention will be paid to the problems of handling spiritual emergencies as part of an effort to create a network of professionals offering help in transpersonal crises. $350

Transpersonal Practice

Léo Matos — In this workshop the participants will be introduced to psychological approaches developed by C.G. Jung, gestalt therapy, Tibetan Buddhist psychology, the psychology of the Mexican Indians, and various methods developed by ancient as well as "primitive" cultures. These methods have been studied and researched by transpersonal psychology and adapted to a scientific psychological context. Here in this experiential workshop we will explore different aspects of human existence, such as the experience of birth, and the psychological issues of rebirthing. $350

Beyond Biofeedback
Elmer and Alyce Green
Biofeedback means getting immediate ongoing information about one's own biological processes or conditions, such as heart behavior, temperature, brain-wave activity, blood pressure, or muscle tension. Information is usually fed back by a meter, by a light or sound, or subjects simply watch the physiological record as it emerges from the monitoring equipment. Biofeedback training means using the information to change and control voluntarily the specific process or response being monitored. Contemporary biofeedback research suggests that any aspect of a person's chemistry or physiology that can be brought to awareness directly or through instruments can become accessible to conscious control. Our biofeedback investigations at the Menninger Foundation lead us to believe that humankind has more talents and more potential for self-regulation than we use or take credit for. This weekend seminar will not involve training exercises with biofeedback equipment but rather will be an inquiry into the realms of human possibility beyond biofeedback. We will discuss the relationship between biofeedback and parapsychology, holistic medicine, and bodily transformation. A particular focus will be the deepening understandings of human consciousness and spiritual awareness toward which biofeedback practice points. $170

Opening the Feelings
Ron Andes, Renan Sercarz & Julie Wright
We will use radix (neo-reichian) methods to free the body's capacity for feeling expression and aliveness. As deeply held emotions of pain, anger, and fear are experienced and expressed, chronic unconscious patterns of tension can soften and the participant can allow deeper contact both with himself and others. With this can come a new capacity for love, trust, and joy. We mainly work with breathing and movement, asking the participant to allow whatever comes up. We will work with no more than ten participants to one facilitator, and each participant will receive two intensives. $350

Beyond the Physicalist-Vitalist Conflict: Toward a New Philosophy of Nature
Paul Lee
The physicalist-vitalist conflict in science is one of the deepest conflicts in our culture and helps account for the rise, triumph, and self-destructive collapse of industrial society, a "world above the given world of nature" and therefore lacking in vital roots. Vitalism holds that the processes of life are not explicable by the laws of physics and chemistry alone and that life is in some part self-determining. The defeat and rejection of this doctrine, it can be argued, began in 1828, the year of the artificial synthesis of urea. Biochemistry brought about the alliance of chemistry and biology on the foundations of Cartesian and Newtonian mechanics and mathematical physics, preparing the way for the discovery of DNA, genetic engineering, and the ability to manipulate the secret of life. In a series of consecutive steps, it is possible to document the physicalist takeover in the development and formation of the sciences and to see how each step exemplifies the structure of the physicalist scientific revolution and the overthrow of vitalism. This workshop will examine how, since 1970, this nearly exclusive trend has come under a critical check based on the revival of vitalism in the ecology/environmental and holistic health movements and allied movements. The remaining two decades of this century may witness radical paradigm shifts in the sciences as the physicalist hegemony is undermined by the collapse of industrial society as we know it in the fossil-fuel economy. This workshop will explore various movements from molecular biology to homeopathy in order to ascertain the significance of a revived vitalism for a new philosophy of nature. $350

John Marks
This workshop will explore the possible uses and abuses of mind control and consciousness techniques. It will trace the U.S. government's, particularly the CIA's, covert involvement with LSD, mushrooms, electroshock, hypnosis, and personality assessment research. From there the workshop will move into a more generalized discussion of the overt impact that this technology is having on today's world.

Gestalt Practice

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustible.
—Lao Tzu

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, and growth rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment. The second half of this program will have participants working primarily with each other, relating whatever is being learned (or unlearned) to the development of their own styles. Thus this program might be especially useful to those wishing to utilize a gestalt approach in their professions (e.g., counselors, teachers, ministers, mothers, doctors, and nurses).

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J. C. Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach). $870

An Integrative Approach to Group Process & Individual Growth
(A four-week internship program for personal & professional growth)

Over the years Esalen has functioned as a major clearing house for a wide variety of approaches and means for facilitating personal evolution and expression. One's journey could begin with any realm—mental, physical, emotional, or transpersonal—each path serving to create a wealth of information and energetic access.

What are the common experiential and conceptual threads that underlie each of these paths? How can these threads of experience be best woven together to create a fabric whose qualities are simultaneously exquisite in their delicacy while still remaining strong enough to sustain the wear and tear of worldly existence? And how best might this very personal process of self-discovery and integration be taught and shared with others?

The exploration and resolution of these and other basic questions pertaining to the process of change and growth will serve as the basis of our work together during this month-long institute program.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own ability, style, and artfulness as an individual guide and group facilitator, doing in-depth personal work and training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthetic techniques, and the meditative arts.

The program will be structured to include: intensive individual work, supervised observations, practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills, video feedback, illustrated lectures, and didactic theoretical sessions. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective linking human potential practices with traditional psychological and counseling modalities. $1400

Transpersonal Psychology

A four-week interdisciplinary training program organized jointly by the Esalen Institute and the International Association for Transpersonal Psychology (ITA). This workshop is designed for professionals and students of psychiatry, psychology, anthropology, religion, and philosophy interested in theoretical and practical foundations of transpersonal psychology and its application to psychotherapy. Special attention will be paid to new understanding of the psychotic process and to the problems related to transpersonal crisis intervention. This program is part of a systematic effort to create an international network of individuals trained to facilitate the process of personal transformation and to assist in spiritual emergencies. It will focus on the following four areas:

1. Foundations of Transpersonal Psychology and Psychotherapy. The participants will be introduced to history, theory, and practice of transpersonal psychology by individuals who have played a pioneering role in its development. Prominent exponents of jungian psychology and psychosynthesis will acquaint the group with their particular disciplines. Special emphasis will be put on spectrum approach to psychology and the recent convergence of quantum-relativistic physics and consciousness research as a scientific basis for the transpersonal orientation.

2. Psychosis: Disease or Transpersonal Crisis? We will discuss new understanding of the psychotic process emerging from psychedelic therapy, jungian analysis, kundalini research, and modern clinical and laboratory findings. In this context we will explore the shamanic model of transformation, discuss John Perry's Diabasis and the laingian approach, consider the promises and pitfalls of the spiritual path, and experiment with techniques of constructive assistance in transpersonal crises.

3. Techniques of Transpersonal Psychotherapy. We will explore theoretically and experientially the use of guided imagery with music, pranayama breathing, mandala drawing, gestalt practice, cultivation of psychic abilities, active imagination, and the jungian sandplay (Dora Kalff). The role of body work, acupuncture, and transit astrology in TP crisis intervention will be taught by experienced practitioners of these approaches.

4. Self-Exploration and Group Process. The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with personal experience. The Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators of the participants throughout the program. $1400

Deep Tissue, Gestalt, and Holistic Health Classes

Spring Semester: February 20, 1981 - June 14, 1981
Fall Semester: September 4, 1981 - December 27, 1981

We are scheduling a residential training program for 12 participants to gain new knowledge and skills in various holistic health and healing practices. The goal of the program is to give participants tools they can use in their own health care settings. Identical curricula will be offered during the spring and fall semesters. During each 4-month period, participants will receive in-depth training in the 10 deep-tissue sessions. (See deep-tissue description in the Food for Thought section of the catalog.) In addition to the deep-tissue classes held on twelve 3-day weekends, an ongoing gestalt practicum will be offered during four other weekends, focusing on training in gestalt process. A variety of other healing systems will also be covered as part of the program, including weekly classes in traditional acupuncture, homeopathy, anatomy, t'ai chi, bach flower remedies, and nutrition. A regularly scheduled community health clinic will meet weekly where participants can observe the integration of these holistic practices. The program will commence with a massage training weekend which is preparatory to the deep-tissue classes. Massage sessions will also be scheduled at intervals throughout the semester. Cost of the program, including tuition, room, and board, is $5200. Included in this fee are the cost of four 5-day catalog workshops of the participant's choice.

A reduced fee of $3000 is available. This fee requires a 16-hour weekly work commitment in the Esalen community and does not include any additional catalog workshops. Nurses and physicians taking this program will receive continuing education credit. A $500 deposit is required to reserve a place in the program. Early registration is recommended. A course outline may be obtained by writing to Al Drucker, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, Ca., 93920.

Conscious Childbirth

We are beginning a series of weekend workshops for pregnant couples interested in exploring conscious childbirth. Issues and themes to be covered in the series include conception and pregnancy, nutrition and exercises for pregnant mothers, labor, delivery, and post partem. Emphasis will be on education, responsibility, and awareness of choices. Workshop sessions will include pre-natal yoga, massage, and psychological process work. The use of ritual will be explored as a way to honor birth as a rite of passage. The Rites of Passage: A 5-day Pilgrimage On Horseback through the Big Sur Wilderness

Turning the clock back to a more gently paced time, we will share a profoundly simple style of life together.

Beginning our journey from a remote beautiful ranch on the river's edge in Arroyo Seco, we'll travel along winding canyon trails through the unspoiled back country of the Ventana Wilderness.

We'll carry all our essentials with us, making stops in some of the loveliest spots in the Ventana.

The trip will combine elements from human potential practices, group process work, and traditional equestrian and wilderness skills. It will be a time of simplification and cleansing.

The group will be limited to ten participants. $525

Journeying

This adventure will be an interplay between an inner and outer journey. The notion that each person's life is a quest, pilgrimage, journey, is the heart of the myth of the hero. As we trek through the Paria canyon we will move deep into the actuality and metaphor of wilderness and journey. You will learn about making and reading maps of unknown territory, locating yourself in time and space, dealing with demons and monsters, developing a vision to guide your personal journey, exploring limits, identifying sources of courage, strength, and nourishment.

The Paria canyon in the rimrock country of northern Arizona is a labyrinth carved by water and wind. Canyon walls rise a thousand feet and sometimes narrow to 15 inches. We will spend 8 days winding our way through the 40 miles, often walking in water, carrying our supplies, camping. We will spend hours telling stories, rock climbing and rappelling, and a day in silence and solitude. We will meet in Page, Arizona on October 17. $475

Inner and Outer Paths to Adventure: Hawaii

During this seven day adventure, we explore the largest of the chain of the Hawaiian Islands — Hawaii, sometimes called the "Orchid Island." We begin our journey in the Hawaiian Volcanoes National Park at the 4000 foot summit of the active shield volcano, Kilave, in whose caldera Pele, the legendary and mischievous goddess of volcanoes, is said to reside.

Leaving the smouldering volcano, with its lava tubes, we descend through lush, tree fern forests, cross deserts of hard-crusted lava, soft volcanic ash and cinder, and pass through low shrub and grasslands on our way to the beautiful sandy beach of Halape, where we swim in the warm, transparent waters, marveling at the fantastic marine life.

Camping at night in simple trail shelters, we learn all the skills needed to live comfortably in the wilderness. Woven into our week adventure will be group process work, combining a variety of human potential practices. There will be time for relaxing, journal and photography work, natural history and ecology study, Hawaiian history and mythology, and simply enjoying the incredible variety of terrain, plants, and animals. Applications must be received by January 5. $525 (plus airfare).

Westerbeck Programs

This series of programs sponsored by Esalen will be held at the Westerbeke Ranch in Sonoma County, which is about an hour's drive north of San Francisco. These residential workshops will be held in an intimate setting which includes rustic cabins, home cooked meals, a sauna and Japanese tub, a large swimming pool, and beautiful scenery. Weekend workshops begin on Friday evening and end Sunday at noon. Five day workshops begin on Sunday evening and end Friday at noon. A reservation fee of $100 is required for five day programs and $50 for weekend programs. Reservation fees are not refundable, but with five days notice they can be transferred to other Esalen seminars. Full payment for all Westerbeke workshops is due five days in advance of the beginning of the program. Send all reservations and payments to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA. 93920.

Hypnosis & Parapsychology
All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lecturettes explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $170

The Gentle Art of Becoming — Together: A Workshop for Couples
This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery as well as gestalt awareness methods.

Vision Improvement—Our Willingness to See
This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and our selves to see. Utilizing deep emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the bates system, nutrition, and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience, and expand—enabling us to look newly at our selves and our world in which we live. $170

A Weekend with Jack Rosenberg
My current focus is on enjoying life to the fullest and bringing the clearest expression of my self to each moment. Many people describe what I do as gestalt body work with a transpersonal bend.

During the workshops we will cover many aspects of my energetic approach to sexuality and work with the body energy field and the belief system which keeps us locked in obsolete behavior patterns. Where you are is where we will start. $170

invite you
to join us
in our organization

Friends of Esalen

Friends of Esalen provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available on a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

☐ I wish to become a Friend of Esalen and I enclose my check for the category circled.

Registration Information

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute-By Reservation Only.

Reservation Information: In order to reserve a space in any workshop we require a reservation fee of $50 for weekend groups, $100 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups, payable in U.S. currency only. Balance of payment is due on arrival. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs, to be used within one year of receipt.

Please mail all reservations to:
Reservations, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, CA 93920

Reservations by telephone: You may make reservations by phone if you use your Mastercharge, BankAmericard, or American Express credit card number to charge your reservation fee.
Phone (408) 667-2335

Monday, Tuesday, Thursday & Saturday 9 to 3
Wednesday 9 to 12 Noon
Friday 9 to 8 PM
Sunday 12 Noon to 8

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation. Allow at least three weeks for processing as we have many applications. If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15-September 15 programs or for weekend programs.

Ongoing Residence Program: Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $1400 per 26-day period.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive any time after lunch.

Esalen has limited child care facilities. If you are interested in bringing a child while you are attending a workshop of five days or longer, contact the office well in advance for information on availability of child space. Esalen does not supply babysitters.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen. Esalen limousine service is not available at any other time.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff, usually in the kitchen. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Accreditation: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs.

Contributions to Esalen Institute are tax-deductible.

The expenses of attending Esalen, including travel, are deductible for federal income tax purposes as an educational expense if incurred to maintain or improve professional or work skills. (See Income Tax Regulation 1.162-5.)

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some people, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Gregory Bateson

Gregory Bateson grew up in Cambridge, England, where his father, William Bateson, one of the pioneers of genetics, was Master of St. John's College. After studying natural history, Bateson took his M.A. in Anthropology. His early fieldwork in New Guinea led to the publication of his first book, Naven (1936), which has, in the last twenty years, become widely appreciated as providing a bridge from social anthropology to cybernetics. During his New Guinea field work, Bateson met Margaret Mead, to whom he was married for 14 years, and with whom he went on to do field work in Bali. During this collaboration, photography was used for the first time to document behavior in an ethnographic context, as described in the work they co-authored, Balinese Character (1942).

After World War II Bateson moved to California, where he studied alcoholism and schizophrenia at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Palo Alto. His work there provided keys to understanding these disorders as embedded in ongoing relationships. Until recently he has been most famous for the "double bind" hypothesis, which describes how individuals may be sent contradictory messages of love and rejection by parents, creating a dilemma which some resolve by schizophrenia.

Bateson spent some years in research on mammalian communication with dolphins in St. Thomas and Hawaii, taught for a period of time at the University of California at Santa Cruz, and, after his near death from cancer in 1978, was invited to become scholar-in-residence at the Esalen Institute in Big Sur, which was his home until his final illness.

Bateson's anthropological field research, his work in mental hospitals, and his study of marine mammals was perceived by him as unified, and indeed, exemplifies his basic perception of the natural and social worlds as joined by the "pattern that connects," the underlying structure of all communicational and mental phenomena. His sense of the need for a disciplined and reverent tracing of this pattern from field to field provided for him a sense of continuity with his father's works in genetics. As his ideas developed he collected his essays published in different research contexts in Steps to an Ecology of Mind (1971) and then wrote a philosophical synthesis of his thinking, Mind and Nature: A Necessary Unity (1979).

In 1976, Bateson was named Regent of the University of California, where he pressed for the University's withdrawal from nuclear weapons research. In recent years he became increasingly sensitive to the need for spiritual metaphors and a sense of the sacred in the human response to the complexity of the natural world.

Gregory Bateson

Gregory Bateson lived at Esalen for the last two years of his life. It was a privilege to have him here. To see him making his way to the baths early in the morning or trudging up the long path to the lodge for breakfast was strangely heartwarming. To participate in his monthly seminars was a challenge and a pleasure. And to see him dancing on the deck with visitors and staff alike was sometimes astonishing. His six foot six inch frame moved with surprising grace. That droll look of his was unforgettable.

This last period of his life was amazingly fruitful. He edited Mind and Nature, saw its publication and reviews, responded to his critics, and entertained the many visitors (and pilgrims) who came to see him. He wrote a book on art that is being edited now by Mary Catherine Bateson, his daughter. He traveled widely, attending conferences and seminars in Europe, Britain, and America on subjects like the double bind that he had originated or helped illuminate. And he counseled more people on their spiritual and intellectual problems than any of us could count. All of this after he had been given just a few weeks to live following his operation for cancer in the winter of 1978. He was an incredible combination of mind and heart.

He left his friends and students a permanent legacy in his work and personal example. Esalen is a kinder, wiser place because of him.

Michael Murphy

The Pattern Which Connects

(spoken at Gregory Bateson's funeral, Esalen, July 11, 1980)

Many of you knew Gregory much better, personally, than I did. I spent quite a bit of time with him here at Esalen; I had long discussions with him in the lodge and also up in his house, but I did not know him all that well. What I do know well, though, are his thoughts; his way of thinking and his concepts and ideas. My own thinking was very close to Gregory's before I met him and before I read his books, and it has become even closer under his influence.

I think the closest I ever got to Gregory was during the week he died. This may sound strange because I did not see him during that week, but I was working very intensely on some of his ideas, and while I was working on my notes—notes that I had taken while reading Gregory's books and also after some of our discussions—I not only absorbed his ideas but also heard his characteristic voice and felt his presence. It was a very intimate dialogue, much more intimate than any of our actual discussions.

The ideas that brought me so close to Gregory were his ideas about the nature of mind. In Gregory's view, mind is an essential property of living systems. In fact, as he told me once, "Mind is the essence of being alive." In his books he listed and discussed a set of criteria which systems have to satisfy for mind to occur. Any system that satisfies those criteria will develop various processes which we associate with mind—thinking, learning, memory, etc.

Bateson's criteria for mind represent a set of relationships, and these relationships can be realized not only by individual organisms but also by social and ecological systems. Mind, therefore, is inherent not only in the body but also in the pathways and messages outside the body. As we sit here, as a group of people, we not only have individual minds but also a collective mind, and this collective mind is embedded in the larger mind of our planetary ecosystem.

I find this concept of mind extremely liberating, and I have no doubt that it will have a strong impact on future thinking, as so many other of Gregory's ideas have had. It will help us to overcome the dualism of mind and matter which has dominated Western thinking ever since the seventeenth century; and it will help us to understand the teachings of mystical traditions which are often so hard to grasp for us Westerners.

At the same time, Gregory's concept of mind may help us to cope with his death and with our own deaths. Part of his mind has certainly disappeared with his body, but a large part is still around and will be around for a long time. It is the part that participates in our relationships with each other and with the environment; relationships which have been profoundly influenced by Gregory's personality.

As you know, one of Gregory's favorite phrases is "the pattern which connects." I believe that Gregory himself has become such a pattern. He will continue to connect us with each other and with the cosmos, and in this way he will live on in each of us and in the cosmos.

(From a speech given at Governor Jerry Brown's annual Prayer Breakfast, January 1976.)

Courtesy of Lois Bateson

I am an anthropologist. And the task of an anthropologist causes him to land himself in strange places. That is, places which are strange to him but of course not strange to the people who belong in those places. So, here I am at the Governor's Breakfast in what is for me a strange place but what is for many of you a place where you belong and have your natural being. I am here to relate this strange place to other strange places in the world where men gather together perhaps in prayer, perhaps in celebration, perhaps simply to affirm that there is something bigger in the world than money and pocket knives and automobiles.

One of the things children have to learn about prayer is that you do not pray for pocket knives. Some learn it and some don't.

If we're going to talk about such matters as prayer and religion, we need an example, a specimen, about which to talk. The trouble, you see, is that words like "religion" and "prayer" get used in many different senses at different times and different parts of the world. And what I would ask you is for a moment's agreement that what I'm talking about is that which is illustrated by the following example.

A well-known anthropologist, Sol Tax, was working with a group of American Indians outside Iowa City some twenty or more years ago. They invited him to the National Convention of the Native American Church, which was to be held quite close to Iowa City within a very few days. This is the church whose central sacrament is peyote—the little psychedelic cactus button which helps to determine the religious state. Now, the church was under attack for using what would be called a drug; and it occurred to Sol Tax, the anthropologist, that he would be helping these people if he made a film of the convention and of the very impressive rituals which would go with it. Such a film might serve as evidence that this worship is in fact religious and therefore entitled to the freedom which constitutionally this country grants to religion. He therefore dashed to Chicago (his home base) and was able to get a movie truck and some technicians and a stock of film and cameras. He told his people to wait in Iowa City while he went and talked to the Indians to get their approval of the project. What I'm going to read you is a statement about the discussion which ensued between the anthropologist and the Indians. (This account comes from a book called Man's Role In Changing The Face Of The Earth, which was a conference symposium from the Wenner-Gren Foundation, published in 1956.)

They could not picture themselves engaged in the very personal matter of prayer in front of a camera. As one after another expressed his views, pro and con, the tension heightened. To defile a single ritual to save the church became the stated issue, and none tried to avoid it. Not a person argued that perhaps the church was not in as great danger as they thought . . . . They seemed to accept the dilemma as posed as though they were acting out a Greek tragedy. As he [Sol Tax] sat in front of the room, together with the president of the church, and as he listened with fascination to the speeches, gradually the realization came that they were choosing their integrity over their existence. Although these were the more politically oriented members of the church, they could not sacrifice a longed-for and a sacred night of prayer. When everyone had spoken, the president rose and said that, if the others wished to have the movie made, he had no objections; but then he begged to be excused from the ceremony. Of course, this ended any possibility for making the movie; the sense of the meeting was clear.

There's a curious paradox in that story. That, indeed, the truly religious nature of the peyote sacrament is proven by leaders' refusal to accept the pragmatic compromise of having their church validated by a method alien to the reverence in which they held it.

This example, however, does not define the word "religion." It only defines the hedging which is necessary to preserve religion from that changing of its context—that reframing which will turn it into the temporal and the secular. Perhaps only too easily into entertainment.

Let me give you another example to come a little closer to what I mean by religion, to show what is to be protected from various kinds of defilement. The following poem is probably well known to many of you. It is part of the story of a ship in terrible straits. The decks are littered with corpses who have died of thirst and one sailor, the "Ancient Mariner," survives to tell the tale. This piece is the central fulcrum—the turning point of the whole poem. I've always found it singularly moving.

The moving moon went up the sky,
And no where did abide:
Softly she was going up,
And a star or two beside—

Her beams bemocked the sultry main,
Like April hoar-frost spread;
But where the ship's huge shadow lay,
The charmed water burnt a way
A still and awful red.

Beyond the shadow of the ship,
I watched the water-snakes:
They moved in tracks of shining white,
And when they reared, the elfish light
Fell off in hoary flakes.

Within the shadow of the ship
I watched their rich attire:
Blue, glossy green, and velvet black,
They coiled and swam; and every track
Was a flash of golden fire.

O happy living things! no tongue
Their beauty might declare:
A spring of love gushed from my heart,
And I blessed them unaware:
Sure my kind saint took pity on me,
And I blessed them unaware.

The selfsame moment I could pray;
And from my neck so free
The Albatross fell off, and sank
Like lead into the sea.

Oh sleep! It is a gentle thing,
Beloved from pole to pole!
To Mary Queen the praise be given!
She sent the gentle sleep from heaven,
That slid into my soul.

The silly buckets on the deck,
That had so long remained,
I dreamt that they were filled with dew;
And when I awoke, it rained.

Of course I am not suggesting that blessing the water snake made the rain come. That would be another logic from another more secular language. What I am suggesting is that the nature of this matter which we are discussing—prayer, religion and the like—is most evident at moments of change—at moments of what the Buddhists call Enlightenment. And while Enlightenment may have many sorts of content, and while it may be triggered by many sorts of experience, I think it important here where we are discussing religion as related to government to notice how often Enlightenment is a sudden realization of the biological nature of the world in which we live. It is a sudden discovery or realization of LIFE.

Already the water snakes give us a hint of that. And another example which is even more vivid—perhaps less familiar, alas—is the case of Job.

Job, you will remember, is like Little Jack Horner. He sticks his finger in the pie and gives to the poor, and says, "What a good boy am I." He has a God who is exactly like himself and who therefore boasts to Satan about Job's virtues. Satan is perhaps the most real part of Job's person deep hidden and repressed within him and sets to work to demonstrate that Job's pietism is really no good. Finally, after infinite sufferings a God who is much less pious and pedantic speaks out of the whirlwind and gives Job three chapters of the most extraordinary sermon ever written, which consists simply in telling him that he does not know any natural history.

KNOWEST though the time when the wild goats of the rock bring forth? or canst thou mark when the hinds do calve?

Canst thou number the months that they fulfill? or knowest thou the time when they bring forth?

They bow themselves, they bring forth their young ones, they cast out their sorrows.

Their young ones are in good liking . . .

(Job XXXIX, 1-4)

In conclusion I would like to say that I would be much happier about the world in which I live, about how my civilization is going to treat that world—the sorts of pollution and exploitation it is going to engage in and all the rest of that—if I felt really sure that my governors and my representatives know how many months the hinds fulfill and how they bring forth their young.

Gregory Bateson

In his introduction to Steps to an Ecology of Mind Bateson tells us of some of the difficulties he had making his points visible to his students or, as others may say, his students had seeing his points. These difficulties, he writes, were expressed in vague complaints that came to him as rumors: "There is something behind what Bateson says, but he never says what it is."

I say these students are right, only they don't understand that if he were to say what it is, there would be again something behind that of which he could not have said what it is, and so on. . . .

I know why that is so. Because of his understanding of language he can make his points extraordinary clear and transparent, and, of course, what is transparent cannot be seen!

Not long ago in a meeting, with Bateson in the audience, I mentioned this and proposed that in order to make his ideas visible I would now make them more opaque. While I was talking I watched through my peripheral vision how Gregory would take it. To my delight I saw him laughing so that tears came to his eyes.

Courtesy of Lois Bateson

When and where did I see him laughing that way before? Later it came to my mind that it was at another meeting, perhaps thirty years ago, where an extraordinary group of people was to discuss "circular causal and feedback mechanisms in biological and social systems," a theme that was to become "cybernetics." Gregory had the floor and his topic was "The Position of Humor in Human Communication." In retrospect one can recognize in his presentation an early glimpse of Batesonian visions of later: the central positon of paradox as the source of freedom in contrast to the rigidity of orthodox logic, as the doubly-weaved fabric of language that appears to speak about things while speaking about itself, and as the driving force in humor, the cause for the most species specific convulsion in homo sapiens: laughter.

As all theoreticians of humor are tempted to do, Gregory too felt he had to provide an example by telling a joke. However, he hardly had begun when, seeing in his mind's eye the end of the story, he started to laugh. He tried to continue the story, but with increasing difficulties, particularly because his laughter became so contagious that everybody began laughing with Bateson until tears came to our eyes. Perhaps it is irrelevant that it was a lousy joke.

The Janus face of paradox, humor, and language was speaking through Gregory in his Metalogues of a father with his daughter: "Daddy, what is an instinct?"

Most of us who know would have gladly answered that instinct is the innate aspect of behavior that is unlearned, complex, etc. . . . But Gregory doesn't fall for that. He leaves the telling of the semantic significance of this notion to somebody else. A dictionary can do it. He switches at once to the functional significance in a dialogue when appeal is made to this notion: "An instinct, my dear, is an explanatory principle." Of course, daughter is not satisfied with this, and insists now having "explanatory principle" explained. Eventually she gets father to say: ". . . . an explanatory principle . . . . is a sort of conventional agreement between scientists to stop trying to explain things at a certain point."

Should I ever be asked who is Gregory Bateson, I shall say: Gregory Bateson is an Explanatory Principle.

In Memory of Gregory Bateson

Gregory (or as he preferred, "Bateson") was one of the leading theorists of this century. He was appreciated for the power of his thinking along unconventional lines chosen by himself. He rarely took on the "unconventional lines" of another person. His opinions were expressed in ruthlessly truthful, authoritative ways, not allowing for disagreement. He was primarily an observer (in the anthropological sense of the term). His methods with dolphins, otters, octopuses and persons were those of ethology and anthropology rather than those of experimental biology, psychology, biophysics, or cybernetics. His impact in philosophy, ethology, and psychiatry was and is primarily in the clarity and conciseness of his theoretical formulations. His impact in the experimental disciplines was also in terms of formulations rather than experiments per se. He made contributions to the founding of the new field of cybernetics at its beginnings in the 1950s.

In his areas of expertise Gregory was excellent, the best. In fields not in his expertise he could be dogmatically critical and embarrassingly candid.

I first met Gregory in the beginning of the 60s and invited him to come to the Communication Research Institute laboratory in the Virgin Islands to work with dolphins. He spent 18 months there and then moved on to the Oceanics Institute on Oahu.

Henry Groskinsky

I found it very difficult to maintain support for Gregory. His well-known "Peck's Bad Boy" would pop out at critical times with project site visitors and turn them off. The form it usually took was an uncompromising high level intellectual explanation of his work without the clarity he was famous for with students. Support for him in the Virgin Islands was cut off by the NIH project site visitors; they specified that the laboratory support could continue but not for Bateson.

He had found Margaret Howe on the island and trained her in ethological observations of dolphins in the few months before he left. She did her now well-known work with Peter the male dolphin in the two years after Gregory left. He did not have the opportunity to share in those experiments on Peter matching the human voice sounds. He missed seeing and hearing this new and different dolphin behavior. That work could not start until he left the laboratory; his "trained disbelief" would not allow this exploratory type of research in this direction to be undertaken.

It does not surprise me that Gregory has often said that dolphins do not have language. My working hypothesis that the large-brained dolphins have the equivalent of a strange and alien language was stated before Gregory started with dolphin observations. During our time together and in the later years he stated that he did not think it likely that we would communicate with the dolphins on that high a level. I respected that as his opinion of an hypothesis and did not consider it more than his "trained disbelief," similar to that of Ken Norris, with whom he worked at Oceanics Institute.

I am sorry that Gregory died before we could show him the new work on communication research with dolphins. In the last year he was beginning to entertain the ideas counter to his trained disbelief. I personally believe that if we can realize communication with the dolphins, and if he had survived, that he would have become our ally with the first real demonstrations. Maybe not, but that is my belief. I miss him. Goodbye, Gregory.

So there it is in words
Precise
And if you read between the lines
You will find nothing there
There should be nothing there
For that is the discipline I ask
Not more, not less

Not the world as it is Nor ought to be —
Only the precision
The skeleton of truth
I do not dabble in emotion
Hint at implications
Evoke the ghosts of old forgotten creeds

All that is for the preacher
The hypnotist, therapist and missionary
They will come after me
And use the little that I said
To bait more traps
For those who cannot bear
The lonely
Skeleton of Truth

Allegory

May 12, 1979 At The Hermitage

There was once a beautiful lady, whose habit it was to sleep on disused railroad tracks.

In that same country there lived also a brutal surveyor who ran the trains up and down the tracks. He was at heart an explorer and therefore was particularly attracted by those branches of the railroad system where no trains had passed within living memory. These were precisely those tracks where the lady delighted to slumber.

So it happened over and over again that she would be disturbed in her sleep and compelled to retreat hastily while a powerful and smelly engine dashed over the very place where she had been happily resting.

Every time this happened there was a falling out between the lady and the gentleman. He maintained that she was an old-fashioned, trivial, and superstitious thing. She, in return, would spit out insults in a quite unladylike manner, saying that he was indeed a thing, sub-human, and nothing but a small boy interested only in silly noisy toys.

And so it went on. For about two thousand years she would always be finding new and unexplored parts of the railroad system upon which to sleep and he always choosing those very branches of the tracks for the exercise of his monstrous vehicles.

He asserted that it was his right—and even duty—to map the railroad system and that the whole system was entirely his—especially the unexplored parts of it. He argued that the system was a single, entirely logical-causal network of tracks.

She averred that the tracks were designed for the rest and peace of the human soul and cared nothing for his dreams of causality and logic.

He mapped every detail of the tracks along which he ran his engines. She continually found other parts of the system not yet mapped.

One day the engineer carelessly left one of his maps beside the track and the lady found it. Gingerly, holding it only with the tips of her fingers, she picked it up. She handled it as if it had been left there by the devil.

It was curiosity that led her to open the map, unwilling to see what it might contain and therefore not really looking at its details. Looking at it thus from a distance through half-shut eyes, she was surprised to find that thus half-seen, the document was in itself beautiful.

Courtesy of Lois Bateson

At the next confrontation between herself and the engineer she said without thinking "And you don't even know that your own maps are beautiful."

At this the surveyor was amazed. He gruffly replied that he was not interested in that.

She said to herself "Ah, then there is something in the universe in which he is not interested. That something belongs to me."

"For ever," she said.

After they parted, each considered what had been said. The surveyor was forced to agree that indeed the beauty of his maps and correspondingly the beauty of the railroad tracks were not within his province. She, on the other hand, was delighted and hugged to herself the secret knowledge that he would never invade what she most valued—the elegance and symmetry of the total system. Not its details but its foundations.

At their next meeting he asked whether she was still interested in the so-called beauty of maps. When she rather defensively replied in the affirmative, he said in an offhand manner that he had perhaps something to show her.

He then confessed that while she slept upon the railroad tracks he had come quietly and had made a careful drawing of her body. It was this drawing that he wanted to show her.

He unfolded and placed side by side before her his map of the railroad tracks and his drawing. He said it was "scientifically interesting" that the map and the drawing appeared to resemble each other in many "formal" characteristics. He specially wanted her to see this strange resemblance between the two documents.

She briefly dismissed the matter. She said she had always known that. But, saying this, she looked away and smiled.

Ceremony of Crossing Over for Gregory Bateson at the Green Gulch Farm and Zen Buddhist Meditation Center

Eighteen hits of the big bell were followed by a procession into the Meditation and Buddha Hall, where the ceremony began with an offering of incense and food for Gregory Bateson. Wallace Stevens' "Blue Guitar" and passages from William Blake and T.S. Eliot were ready by members of the family and friends. Governor Brown read the Twenty-third Psalm. During the ceremony, Gregory's family and many others spoke directly to Gregory. And Zentatsu Baker-roshi addressed Gregory:

"Gregory, you were intellectual history itself. The descendant of a family which, with great courage and daring, prepared the way for you. And then you yourself brought us over into, led us into this century from the ecclesiastical Victorian world into our contemporary world, and then further thrust us into an age we don't yet understand—a world where dualisms are resolved and oneness is the sign of being. Your own life was an answer to entropy—heat itself passing heat to us—a sacrament for our true life.

"Gregory Bateson gave his life over to science, to understanding being, to a science of trust and not of interference: and at the end he trusted life to end in its own way, within his own consideration, and with his family and friends, July 4, 1980 at noon, Independence Day."

During the ceremony Baker-roshi repeated three times—"Gregory, all your ancient karma from beginningless time, born of body, speech, and mind, is now fully resolved. All you ancient. . . .

"Although the bonds of attachment are hard to break in our past, present, and future; you are freed from karma now, from worldly attachments, from form and color. Unsupported anywhere, please take refuge in the unconditioned.

"Speech and mind have been freed. You have gone beyond, returned to your original nature. Your light and truth of leadership is all about us.

"If I were to name you in the traditional way, the name would translate as Wisdom-Emptiness/Vastness/Shining Rose.

"You have passed through the golden net of culture, escaped the explanations of science and society, and all attempts to explain or obscure the vast darkness.

"Philosopher, scientist, anthropologist, biologist, cybernetician, educator—reforming education like your grandfather, psychologist, lover of life and of us—the boundaries, the edges, softly moving, shimmering, reflecting, dissolving, a difference, we call it Dharma, joining, connecting.

"Stretched over the void—we have offered this ceremony and ourselves to your light, to your heart, to your sweetness, to your flights of intelligence, to your courage and compassion that illuminate this often bitter world, to your passing on to us life itself, to your flashing in the utter darkness.

"Let us be mindful of this great man within us, of our new existence." ■

What I recall

most vividly about Gregory Bateson is the quality of delighted presence he had when he was at his most abstract. He seemed more with you during those times when his thought was most in that region he sought to chart and describe, though he often joked that it was unchartable and could only be described by poets.

I remember particularly how I felt during one moment in our four day dialogue at the Westerbeke Ranch. We were discussing the responsibilities of contemporary epistemology. Gregory leaned forward—with childlike delight and a kind of mischievous smile—and said, "Well, it tis a kind of brooming operation, you know," clearly looking forward to the opportunity to clean out a few more of the obsolete cobwebs he found particularly unfreeing.

I liked that abstraction was delightful for him, and human, and a job that needed doing. I liked that he took it on and did it well and stayed at it and let it fulfill him.

We have a lot more work to do now, now that he'd done his. And it's good hard work, real, and genuinely satisfying, and contributory.

When I remember Gregory I feel taller.

Ways of Being at Esalen

There are various ways to experience Esalen, ranging from a visit to the hot springs on a week-night to a long-term stay as a student or resident. The weekend and five-day workshops described throughout the catalog are the standard route for coming to Esalen and learning the various methods of personal growth and self-exploration that are available here. The Experiencing Esalen workshops are a kind of smorgasbord introduction to some of these many practices (such as gestalt, massage, sensory awareness, etc.), from such a sampling, the participant can then choose that approach which feels most appropriate and pursue it in subsequent seminars. For those who wish an extended stay of a month or more, there is an Ongoing Residence Program. Other long-term programs include the "month-longs" coordinated by individuals such as Stan Grof, Al Drucker, and David Schiffman, which frequently involve didactic seminars as well as experiential workshops. These can be particularly useful for professionals and graduate students.

A very popular way of being at Esalen, and one that allows a much greater involvement with the place and its community at a lower expense, is the Work-Study Program, which entails working with the Esalen staff as well as participating in an on-going workshop designed specifically for that program. See page 16 for more information and an application form.

In addition, there are other events which enrich life at Esalen. There are frequent forums where various writers and thinkers, both visiting and resident, share their ideas with the community. On Wednesday nights, there are films, dance performances, choirs, puppet shows, or other forms of entertainment. Bodywork of various kinds is available by appointment with individual practitioners, including massage, deep-tissue, polarity, and rolfing. Individual sessions are also available for various types of process work, including gestalt, neo-reichian emotional release, vision-improvement, music gestalt, etc. Finally, there is a Community Workshop program which goes on daily, and provides many opportunities for engaging in personal self-exploration or learning new approaches to human growth.

The Work-Study Program

The Work-Study Program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program, emotionally and physically, and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share, contact, play — alone/together. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week in such areas as gardening, landscaping, the farm, maintenance, kitchen, and cabins. No participants will be accepted as work scholars in Gazebo until they have fulfilled a minimum of one month in one of the aforementioned departments. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs, and work assignments are made according to these requirements. The cost of the program is $400 for the first month, $350 for the second month, and $300 for the third. A $150 deposit is required with your application.

Accommodations are shared, with up to three people to a room, usually at South Coast Center, a staff living complex which is 1½ miles north of Esalen. The Work-Study Program, lasting 28 days, is a full time workshop in itself. The work commitment to the community, group process work, and teaching seminar makes up a busy schedule for participants. Enrolling in the Esalen catalog workshops is therefore discouraged, since the extra involvement tends to interfere with the fulfillment of the Work-Study Program.

In addition to the regular program, Esalen is now offering an intensive three-month course in basic organic horticulture. The cost of the program will be $1050. A $250 deposit is required. In filling out the Work-Study application, please indicate your preference of landscaping, gardening, or small scale farming.

Available dates: January 25-February 22; February 22-March 22; March 22-April 19; April 19-May 17; May 17-June 14; June 14-July 12; July 12-August 9; August 9-September 6; September 6-October 4; October 4-November 1; November 1-November 29 etc.

NOTE: This application is not a registration in the program. Registration is made only after approval of application and upon receipt of deposit. Please return this form with $150 (or $250) deposit to:

Work-Study Program, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920
Telephone: (408) 667-2335

The balance of the fee is due on arrival. $75 of the original deposit is non-refundable, and may be transferred to other Esalen programs within one year of receipt of deposit.

Esalen Seminars

Experiencing Esalen

Experiencing Esalen Staff
Coordinated by Janet Zuckerman Boeve

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificence of the Big Sur coast.

Gestalt Practice

Esalen Gestalt Staff
Coordinated by Christine Price & Richard Price

The Esalen Gestalt Staff includes Leonard Bearne, Janet Zuckerman Boeve, Laura DeNuccio (Ma Prita), Joan Fiore, Jeffrey Kent, Nancy Kaye Lunney, the NINE, Jenny O'Connor, Christine Price, Richard Price, and others.

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustible.
—Lao Tzu

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not "patients" but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The "leader" functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is enfoldment, wholeness, growth, rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment.

Integrating Life Experience into Medical History: The Global Life Assessment
Jack Downing, MD
Valid holistic medical practice requires comprehensive examination of both the historical and current aspects of the patient's life experience. This program has a threefold emphasis: informational; removal of significant empathic blocks in awareness; and teaching simple tools for enhancing observation and interpretation of body language. The participants will examine their own life experience in detail, including the presentation of a written, structured historical form to the group. Thereby they can enhance objective self-awareness and learn to use effectively these tools in patient care. Observation and interpretation of body language and selective therapeutic intervention during history taking and clinical examination will be taught. Bodily fears and responses to touching as a method of stress reduction will be elucidated. For additional information see page 15. $170

Applied Vulnerability: New Competence for Learning Our Way into the Future
Donald Michael
This workshop will explore the personal, organizational, and societal consequences of acknowledging our well disguised ignorance about the processes and directions of societal change in today's and tomorrow's turbulent world. Acknowledging ignorance can encourage and sustain responsibility and compassion and it is the prerequisite for true learning. Acknowledging ignorance also makes persons and organizations vulnerable, which can encourage the creation and appreciation of new options. However, to apply vulnerability creatively and effectively to critical societal tasks, new competences are needed. These include error embracing, being future-responsive, acknowledging uncertainty, interpersonal competence, and boundary spanning. We will examine the characteristics of these new competences and apply them to our own situations. The workshop is relevant for and will benefit from the participation of both new age activists and those in conventional organizations seeking more meaningful and effective engagement with an unfamiliar and uncertain world. $170

Week of January 4-9

Five-Day Massage Intensive
Esalen Massage Staff
An introduction to the language of the body, this course will attempt to view the human interior through various windows: yoga, feldenkrais, movement, demonstration and work sessions, and evening lectures and discussions. Every major portion of the body will be given detailed attention, and your instructors will acquaint you with their individualized styles. In the morning and afternoon practice sessions the focus will be on your integrating this information in your own manner and evolving your own style of working with the body. Our intent is not to teach you to imitate, but to help you learn to become effective; the rest you will teach yourselves. $350

A Life Stress Review: Personal Circumstance and Optimal Health
Jack Downing
Using the individual life inventory form, we define our personal life patterns. The workshop will include relationships between life experience and levels of being, and continue with the three functions of sex, money, and power. $350

Opening to Creativity: A Gestalt Workshop
Nancy Kaye Lunney
This workshop is for those who have a desire to create something, yet are stopped by self-criticism, frustration, or fear. The focus of these five days will be on developing the awareness and confidence which are necessary for free flowing creativity. Using gestalt process we can uncover negative programs which may be inhibiting creative expression. Individual projects in music, writing, drawing, or movement can be developed during the workshop based on each person's major interest. The emphasis, however, is not on "production," but on self-awareness; not on the project, but on the person doing it. $350

Surrender to Self
Merri Goldenson (Devarani)
John Majuri
& Vivian Gary
Inside each of us there lives a free, loving, creative, and spontaneous child. Our life histories and repressed feelings of anger, fear, sorrow, and pain are locked in our body armor. Our focus in this workshop will be to discover new ways we can soften, let go, and surrender to ourselves.

In a supportive and safe environment we will utilize individual reichian intensives, group interaction, bioenergetics, imagery, hypnosis, dance, and massage. We can, once again, feel the flow of our sexual energy and the harmony of our being. $350

A Celebration of Life
Emmett Miller
Greeting the return of the light, a time of quiet relaxation, music, movement, dance, and song. Touching the silent source within, and emerging gently into movement, guided by soft melodies that sing of the beauty that surrounds us. With sound and voice joining in the song of life, the pulse of rhythm lifting our weightless bodies and spirits into spontaneous movement. Experiencing the fullness of being in silence and in sound, in stillness and in movement. A time of joy, celebration, and play. $170

Core Dynamics—Body Energetics
Hector Prestera
Using body release methods, body reading, color reading, and psychic intuition, each participant will have an opportunity to contact areas of body armoring which prevent the core self from spontaneous release. Freeing the "core self" is the object of this weekend.

Suggested reading: The Body Reveals (Kurtz & Prestera). $170

G. Frederick Roll

Woman and Nature: A New Vision
Susan Griffin

Western culture has pictured both woman and nature as wild, unreasonable beings, or forces, which must be tamed and controlled by more reasonable God-like minds. Not only are women and the earth exploited and dominated by this ideology, but the emotional life of men is also sacrificed to this way of thinking. We are distorted and made less than ourselves. We are in danger of losing our capacity to know and love other beings. Behind the doctrine of control lies a psyche afraid of the power of nature to change our lives, afraid of both life and death. (Because a woman's body symbolizes life and death, in this view, women are hated and feared.) We can find another way of seeing and being in feminism and ecology, a vision of nature and of woman as the intelligent other, the subject and not the object, the one-in-whom-we-see-ourselves, in whom both spirit and matter combine to speak to us of a deeper "reason." In this workshop we will discuss these two ideas of the nature of the world both historically and in the context of our own lives, the decisions we have made or are making, our fears, our dreams, the processes of our work, ways of knowing and loving others. Together we will conceive not only utopian ideas, but also small events in our own lives which lead to transformation. $170

Gestalt Practice

Touchstones of Reality
Maurice Friedman
& Elijah David Herschler

Touchstones of reality are glimpses of a way at once uniquely personal and human that we experience in our meetings with persons, situations, characters of literature, religious scriptures, nature, art, or music. They are events that yield meaning and insight and help us in forming our life-stances and basic attitudes, and our understanding. They may arise out of mystical experiences, dreams, conflicts, making or creating a poem or a work of art.

When two people really touch each other as persons, whether physically, emotionally, mentally, or spiritually, it is a mutual revelation of life-stances. Maurice Friedman, philosopher and writer, and Elijah Herschler, sculptor, architect, photographer, writer, and poet, will share some of their own touchstones of reality with the group and then invite the members to five days of active sharing and dialogue of one another's ways of touching life. There is no one form for such sharing. Each person should bring an event, a poem, a dream, a song, a photograph, or a Zen, Sufi, or a Hasidic tale to share. $350

Living Tao: A New Way of Self Cultivation

Al Chung-liang Huang & Jay Goldfarb

To be in touch with the true teacher—your own bodymind; the true learning—nature itself; and to combine nature and self in one flowing dance of life—the living tao t'ai chi dancing.

Recommended reading: Embrace Tiger, Return to Mountain (Huang), Tao: The Watercourse Way (Watts), Mind and Nature (Bateson), The Dancing Wuli Masters (Zukav), Taoism: The Quest for Immortality (Blofeld), and Forgotten Truth (Huston Smith). $350

Self Acceptance—The Freedom to Be

David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness, as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $350

Creative Pattern and Experience

Coeleen Kiebert

An in-depth exploration of the creative process. Participants will identify their own unique form of creative expression. Individual pattern and experience will evolve through color, paint, clay, and music. Art will become a vehicle of communication, both inward and outward. This workshop is for persons looking for new creations and creatives looking for new inspirations. $170

A Gathering of Midwives

Terry Calhoune
Peggy Morrison Horan
Raven Lang
Jane Miletich
& Honey Rose

This workshop is a coming together of midwives and others interested in birth. Our time together will be spent in discussion of our birth work, exchanging ideas and information, sharing songs, dances, and rituals, and massaging at the hot baths. $170

Stress Management and Optimal Performance

Ken Dychtwald

In this workshop we will explore and examine the physical as well as psychological dynamics and characteristics of stress with particular attention to ways in which stress can seriously hamper health and all aspects of personal and professional functioning. Through the use of lectures, demonstrations, and a broad range of experiential exercises, participants will have an opportunity to rest, refresh, and renew while simultaneously learning practical methods and tactics for managing stress and increasing overall health and well-being. $170

Week of January 18-23

Advanced Massage Intensive

Esalen Massage Staff

Whether your massage experience is professional or avocational, our aims in this course are to take you deeper into your own work and to provide whatever instruction we can to add to your understanding of the body and to your repertoire of techniques. In addition to morning and afternoon practice sessions with various instructors, we will use yoga, movement, evening lectures and discussions, and demonstrations of specific practices to stimulate ourselves out of our old patterns of working and increase the range of conditions with which we can deal effectively.

The following concerns will receive emphasis: how to sustain your energy through a day of treatments; how to clear yourself of the negative energy released by your client; how to use weight and leverage to your advantage; and so on. As we reach more and more deeply into one another, emotional changes can be triggered by the unravelling of blocked muscular energy. As these emotions present themselves, they will provide us with some first-hand practice in productive ways of moving through them.

The format and pace of this course will presume some previous massage experience—at least an introductory five-day intensive or its equivalent in your own practice. $350

The Feeling Process

Janet Zuckerman Boeve

For many people, feelings are something mysterious, something to keep to yourself, or something to go up into your head to think about. This workshop is about all the steps involved in learning to experience, respect, and honor your own feeling process in a way that will increase your own vitality and personal effectiveness in the world. You can learn to separate feelings from thoughts, learn your own body rhythms, learn to contact your own place of wisdom, and participate, in a safe environment, in the exploration of expression or depression. An experiential workshop. $350

Inside/Living Tao: Fluting and t'ai chi dancing with whales, butterflies,

Paul Horn & Al Chung-liang Huang

Paul and Al will celebrate and share with us their joyous collaboration in nature, music, dance, t'ai chi, jazz, and China experiences!

Recommended reading and listening: Embrace Tiger, Return to Mountain (Real People Press), Huang; Tao: The Watercourse Way (Pantheon), Watts; Paul Horn's albums: Inside, Nexus, and Dream Machine. $370

Cosmodrama: Experiencing the Relationship Between Consciousness and Reality

Pierre Weil

The experience of reality is a function of the state of consciousness we are in. Cosmodrama was created and based on the concept that man is, above all, a cosmic being. A new holistic model is developed as a circular network in which states of consciousness (sleep, dream, relaxed, awake, cosmic) are related with the two aspects of reality: inside reality (physical, emotional, mental, psi, and self) and outside reality (personal, interpersonal, social, earth, and the universe).

You will be shown how to manage your own drama and get more inner peace and freedom. This network for a new age integrates formal and intellectual education with psychodrama, gestalt, psychoanalysis, psychosynthesis, bodywork, meditation, yoga, tantric approach, etc. $350

Close Encounters: An Experiment in Meeting and Contacting Other Human Beings

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop provides an opportunity for you to pay attention to the quality of your interpersonal contact, particularly to your willingness to take risks and to your ability to stay true to your own feelings while meeting and contacting others.

You may discover your own rhythm of contact and withdrawal; you may discover how you sabotage yourself from having more satisfying relationships; you may discover you're getting exactly what you want from your relationships. You may discover anything, you may discover nothing. You may even discover that you're in charge. $170

A Weekend with Peter Caddy, Co-Founder of Findhorn

This workshop will provide an introduction to the founding, growth, and development of Findhorn, the principles of creating a new age community, the cooperation with nature, the laws of manifestation, relationships and the balance between male and female, and the roles of individuals, groups, and communities in world transformation. $170

From Burnout to Personal Growth: Increasing Effectiveness and Enjoyment in Work and Life

Elliot Aronson & Ayala Pines

This workshop is designed for people who work with people and who have experienced or are experiencing burnout. It deals with the impact of burnout on both the service provider and the client, ways of finding and recognizing support resources on the job, and positive techniques of dealing with burnout and life tedium. Through lectures, group discussions, and input from the participants themselves, individuals will have the opportunity to increase their understanding of those aspects of their own work and life which could cause burnout. In addition they will be provided with the tools and opportunity to learn how to handle these problems in order to increase the productivity and joyousness of their relationships with clients, colleagues, family, and friends. For additional information see page 15. $170

Feeling and Movement

Heidi Schaffer, David Silverstein & Sandra Thompson

Through the combination of radix and neo-reichian methods with dance and movement, we will emphasize loosening and opening the body to the natural flow of its own energy. Participants can become aware of attitudes and muscular tensions that inhibit spontaneity and confine individual movement to a set or particular pattern. Radix intensives and deep feeling exercises will provide opportunities to release some of these tensions. Dance and movement experiences will offer a means of expressing the flow of energy that is freed by this release. $170

Week of January 25-30

A Week with Peter Caddy, Co-Founder of Findhorn

For workshop description see January 23-25. $350

Self Re-Parenting

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop focuses on finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to return to places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cutting off these experiences from awareness, we give ourselves a new opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that controls and rips off our aliveness and our power in the here and now. Experiments will progress from re-wombing, re-birthing, and re-infanting to re-adolescing. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $350

The Possible Human in the Possible Society

Jean Houston

The course will be for those deeply committed to social, personal, and spiritual transformation and willing to take the risks needed when they journey with such intention to the very edges of their lives. Together we will undertake a depth exploration of our cultural and spiritual heritage and then look to the evolutionary possibilities inherent for present culture and consciousness. We will seek the pattern that connects, thus finding ways to discover meaning, give impetus to our growth, and illumine our transitions. We will try to determine ways in which the possible human can help to create the possible society. $350

On the Way to Health: A Guide for Health Practitioners
Phillip Mac, MD

This workshop is designed to look at the stresses of the health provider in training and in practice. We will work toward developing greater personal health consciousness through self-awareness and self-responsibility, and creating a healing environment within ourselves. Body awareness, centering, and visualization will be some of the methods employed. For additional information see page 15. $170

Physics Weekend: Bell's Theorem and the Nature of Reality
Nick Herbert
Saul-Paul Sirag

Quantum theory is universally successful in describing nature at all levels accessible to experiment. However, this comprehensive practical success is accompanied by an unprecedented disagreement as to what quantum theory actually means, and a corresponding confusion as to what sort of reality supports the phenomenal world.

Controversy over the nature of deep reality has been sharpened by Bell's theorem, which proves that any conceivable objective reality underlying the facts of experience must be independent of space and time. Thus either there is no ultimate objective reality, or this reality is more peculiar than we have been led (by ordinary physics) to believe. The impact of Bell's theorem is just beginning to be felt in the world of physics, but it is rather like the situation of the Michelson-Morley experiment, which led to Einstein's theory of relativity. Just what this current controversy in the foundations of physics will lead to is not yet clear, but the various possibilities will be explored in this weekend presentation. $170

Trust Your Process—A Raku Sculpture Workshop
Paul Rebillot
& Richard Horan

"It is not pots we are forming but ourselves." —M.C. Richards, The Crossing Point

For seven days, we will follow the process of the ancient art of raku pottery as a symbol of our own inner process of self-transformation. Each afternoon we will meet with Richard Horan in the barn at Esalen. As we shape, dry, glaze, fire, and use our sculptures, we will, through gestalt and other disciplines, experience these same processes in relation to our lives. How do we form ourselves? How do we cleanse ourselves, rid ourselves of excess moisture—tears and other emotions? How do we decorate ourselves? What risks are we willing to take? How does the fire of our being influence the form we've made of ourselves? And what use—what expression—do we give to that form and fire, once united? The workshop will culminate in a final ritual in which we use the objects we've created, reflecting on the discoveries that we've made.

Trust in process is the secret of every art—whether it is pots we are making, or ourselves. $520

New Perspectives in Psychotherapy and Self-Exploration
Stanislav & Christina Grof
We will focus on the observations from modern consciousness research that have revolutionary implications for the theory and practice of psychotherapy. The suggested revisions include an expanded model of the human mind, new techniques and strategies of self-exploration, and powerful unconventional mechanisms of personality change. The participants will have the opportunity to explore the new principles in experiential sessions combining pranayama breathing, evocative music, body work, and mandala drawing. Special attention will be paid to the problems of handling spiritual emergencies as part of an effort to create a network of professionals offering help in transpersonal crises. $350

Transpersonal Practice
Léo Matos
In this workshop the participants will be introduced to psychological approaches developed by C.G. Jung, gestalt therapy, Tibetan Buddhist psychology, the psychology of the Mexican Indians, and various methods developed by ancient as well as "primitive" cultures. These methods have been studied and researched by transpersonal psychology and adapted to a scientific psychological context. Here in this experiential workshop we will explore different aspects of human existence, such as the experience of birth, and the psychological issues of rebirthing. $350

Weekend of February 6-8

The Gazebo$_{SM}$: An Alternative Education
The Gazebo Staff
The Gazebo is a model for restructuring educational systems, both physically and philosophically. It is a new concept of "school," involving the inviting of children back into society, the integration of generations, and the re-introduction of life into the content of learning.

The workshop will be both didactic and experiential. We will investigate alternative ways of financing education and plan ways to revitalize neighborhoods as viable teaching resources by generating community involvement. The form, structure, and activities of the Gazebo will be available to participants. So far our youngest student is 9 months old and our oldest is 75. Esalen's Gazebo is more than an idea. It is an actuality. Limited to 12 participants. $170

The Body and the Energy Body
George Leonard
Many ancient and modern disciplines of personal health, growth, and change depend upon concepts of energy flows in and around the bodies of living things. Using methods derived from the art of aikido, George Leonard will present his approach to the human biofield or "energy body." Through simple mental and physical exercises, participants will experience their energy bodies in interaction with nature and other people, and will practice centering and heightened awareness with special attention to stress reduction and good health. They will be introduced to alternative ways of dealing with everyday life situations—especially those involving tension and expectation—and will explore ways of getting in touch with their own hidden powers. There will also be discussion of these experiences as they relate to education, sports, and social transformation. $170

Couples Workshop: Intimacy and Personal Growth
Betsy Hand & Gerald Smith
This workshop will focus on deepening contact and strengthening mutual support while expanding as individuals. Some of the time will be spent using structured approaches for enhancing communication, being separate, trusting, and fighting fairly. The approaches will be tailored to what each of you brings to the weekend. $170 per person.

Beyond Biofeedback
Elmer and Alyce Green
Biofeedback means getting immediate ongoing information about one's own biological processes or conditions, such as heart behavior, temperature, brain-wave activity, blood pressure, or muscle tension. Information is usually fed back by a meter, by a light or sound, or subjects simply watch the physiological record as it emerges from the monitoring equipment. Biofeedback training means using the information to change and control voluntarily the specific process or response being monitored. Contemporary biofeedback research suggests that any aspect of a person's chemistry or physiology that can be brought to awareness directly or through instruments can become accessible to conscious control. Our biofeedback investigations at the Menninger Foundation lead us to believe that humankind has more talents and more potential for self-regulation than we use or take credit for. This weekend seminar will not involve training exercises with biofeedback equipment but rather will be an inquiry into the realms of human possibility beyond biofeedback. We will discuss the relationship between biofeedback and parapsychology, holistic medicine, and bodily transformation. A particular focus will be the deepening understandings of human consciousness and spiritual awareness toward which biofeedback practice points. $170

Opening the Feelings
Ron Andes, Renan Sercarz & Julie Wright
We will use radix (neo-reichian) methods to free the body's capacity for feeling expression and aliveness. As deeply held emotions of pain, anger, and fear are experienced and expressed, chronic unconscious patterns of tension can soften and the participant can allow deeper contact both with himself and others. With this can come a new capacity for love, trust, and joy. We mainly work with breathing and movement, asking the participant to allow whatever comes up. We will work with no more than ten participants to one facilitator, and each participant will receive two intensives. $350

Beyond the Physicalist-Vitalist Conflict: Toward a New Philosophy of Nature

Paul Lee

The physicalist-vitalist conflict in science is one of the deepest conflicts in our culture and helps account for the rise, triumph, and self-destructive collapse of industrial society, a "world above the given world of nature" and therefore lacking in vital roots. Vitalism holds that the processes of life are not explicable by the laws of physics and chemistry alone and that life is in some part self-determining. The defeat and rejection of this doctrine, it can be argued, began in 1828, the year of the artificial synthesis of urea. Biochemistry brought about the alliance of chemistry and biology on the foundations of Cartesian and Newtonian mechanics and mathematical physics, preparing the way for the discovery of DNA, genetic engineering, and the ability to manipulate the secret of life. In a series of consecutive steps, it is possible to document the physicalist takeover in the development and formation of the sciences and to see how each step exemplifies the structure of the physicalist scientific revolution and the overthrow of vitalism. This workshop will examine how, since 1970, this nearly exclusive trend has come under a critical check based on the revival of vitalism in the ecology/environmental and holistic health movements and allied movements. The remaining two decades of this century may witness radical paradigm shifts in the sciences as the physicalist hegemony is undermined by the collapse of industrial society as we know it in the fossil-fuel economy. This workshop will explore various movements from molecular biology to homeopathy in order to ascertain the significance of a revived vitalism for a new philosophy of nature. $350

Integrity David Schiffman

In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will, and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength, and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical, and mental potentials and how they affect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others. $520

Weekend Massage Intensive

Esalen Massage Staff

We will assist you in acquiring the basic tools you will need to begin to explore massage. By demonstrating for you and practicing with you it is our intent to introduce you to the major muscle sets of the body and to help you to establish a sense of an effective beginning, development, and closing of a full-body massage. Emphasis will be on our own grounding and internal awareness, on learning to recognize the areas in ourselves and others that need relief, and on learning to be aware of the quality of our own touch. $170

The Politics of Mind Control and Consciousness

John Marks

This workshop will explore the possible uses and abuses of mind control and consciousness techniques. It will trace the U.S. government's, particularly the CIA's, covert involvement with LSD, mushrooms, electroshock, hypnosis, and personality assessment research. From there the workshop will move into a more generalized discussion of the overt impact that this technology is having on today's world.

Recommended reading: The Search for the Manchurian Candidate by John Marks (McGraw paperback, $4.95.) The ABC Television documentary, Mission: Mind Control, based on this book, will be shown. $170

Bodymind Health, Longevity, and Optimal Performance

Ken Dychtwald & Staff

In this seven day experiential workshop we will combine the beauty of Big Sur and the Esalen facilities with some of the most successful methods for enhancing health and optimizing bodymind functioning gathered from the holistic health, human potential, and physical fitness fields. This comprehensive program has been especially designed to allow each participant an opportunity to rest, refresh, and renew mental and physical functioning while simultaneously learning practical stress-management, self-care, and life planning skills.

The daily fourteen hour (optional) program will include: running, stretching, and aerobic dancing clinics; meditation, relaxation, and stress-reducing classes; health walks/hikes; sensory awareness and creative visualization instruction; massage classes at the Esalen baths; nutritious meals prepared in the Esalen kitchen; and evening seminars on such topics as life planning, longevity, time management, optimal fitness, diet and nutrition, stress-management, and holistic health care. $520

Week of February 15-20

Reichian/Gestalt Intensive

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This workshop combines neo-reichian breath and body work to facilitate physical/emotional release, with gestalt work to facilitate contact, integration, and self-responsibility.

We provide the time, the space, the opportunity to move at your own pace from dis-ease to ease, from fragmented to whole, from self-discounting to self-validating, from role-playing to authentic self-expression, from helpless victim to active participant in your personal destiny, or from wherever you happen to be coming to wherever you're growing. You might explore your dreams, your tensions, your madness, or your options; take room to breathe or to explode, soak in nurture or exorcise demons, finish past unfinished business or examine present concerns.

First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to experiment with the quality of interpersonal contact through group interactions. $350

The Hero's Journey
Paul Rebillot

The hero's journey is a dynamic form designed to facilitate people through life changes. Your world is viewed through the lens of fantasy, dramatized and experienced in a rite of passage based on a universal ritual used to celebrate this metamorphosis: the myth of the hero.

Your hero is structured from the absolute "yes," your demon from the absolute "no" of your personality, externalizing your inner conflict. The two confront each other on the hero's journey, a dramatic struggle ensues until a synthesis of the opposing forces is reached. $350

Working With Dreams
Montague Ullman

Based on the mastery of a few essential principles, getting close to one's own dreams is both possible and useful. The purpose of the workshop is to engage the dreamer in a process of self-discovery through the connections one can make between dreams and waking life.

The dreamer and the group will interact in working through the personal meaning of the dream. We will explore the language of the dream through a series of exercises designed to illustrate how the dreamer uses imagery to express feelings, how to identify events in waking life that trigger the dream, and how past memories are integrated into present concerns. In the course of this the participants can acquire an appreciation of the artistry of the images they create, the accuracy with which these images can light up long hidden aspects of their own past, and the way in which these processes come together to shed light on their waking experiences. Dreams are exquisitely sensitive instruments for helping us recognize and respond to novelty in our lives. $350

Leading the Symbolic Life:
On the Transforming Power of Symbols to Enrich Life's Meaning
Alice Howell

A participatory experience devoted to new ways of thinking and practical means of living richly what Jung called the "symbolic life." Archetypal symbols speak through a silent language of image and magic connecting the outer world of event with the inner world of meaning as they represent processes at work in nature and in the individual psyche. An adventure joining wisdom and humor with attacks of insight. $170

The Passions
Jay Ogilvy & Robert Solomon

How can we control our emotions? In what sense are we responsible for them? Can one choose to fall in love? Is it better to just let it out or hold in our feelings? Most views of emotions—including many popular guidebooks and therapies—are based on a tragic misunderstanding of feelings and emotions. Two philosophers will help sort out these issues in a way that relates to participant's own experiences. Jay Ogilvy is author of Many Dimensional Man (Harper Colophon, 1979), and Robert Solomon is author of The Passions (Doubleday, 1976). $170

Reichian Gestalt: A Workshop for Contact and Release
Ma Prita (Laura De Nuccio)

This workshop provides a safe environment to experience consciously the process of our own unfolding—physically, emotionally, energetically, sexually, spiritually.

As we become aware of the ways we hold back our self-expression (flow of life energy) we then have the choice to let go. By contacting tension (stuck, accumulated energy) and allowing emotions which have been locked and frozen in our bodies, often since early infancy, we then have the opportunity to open ourselves to the creative flow of life energy within each of us. As we contact and allow our hurts and pain, we can then increase our capacity for pleasure and joy. As we allow our expression of anger, which is a powerfully expansive, outward directed energy, we can open and deepen our capacity for love and compassion. As we contact and allow our expression of fear, we can then move toward expanding our capacity for trusting ourselves and others. Learning to trust our bodies, our responsiveness and movement, is a liberating experience.

Utilizing reichian emotional release, gestalt practice, bioenergetics, feldenkrais, massage, reflexology, dance, meditation, and various other bodymind approaches, we can move toward expanding our capacity for trust and fulfillment. $350

Stanislav & Christina Grof

We will combine observations from modern consciousness research and from various traditional practices to explore the process of spiritual awakening. The participants will have the opportunity to confront transpersonal areas within themselves in various experiential exercises, combining evocative slide-shows, music, controlled breathing, mandala drawing, and individual work if appropriate. Special attention will be paid to the understanding of and approach to "spiritual emergencies" which can occur in the context of the kundalini process and other forms of personal evolution. $350

Life Change, Career Change
John Caple
& Mary Harper

Most of what we are taught about changing careers springs from the poverty mentality of the thirties; little of it relates to our unfolding as human beings. In this workshop we will integrate career change processes and personal growth processes. We will explore ways to achieve success in the world without sacrificing wholeness. We will use guided imagery and communication exercises, centering strategies, and role playing. Some time will be spent on individual career/life problems. $170

The New Vision of Reality
Fritjof Capra

We shall explore the fundamental paradigm shift that is going to dominate the eighties—a shift from a fragmented, mechanistic world view to an organic, holistic, and ecological view. The new paradigm, or vision of reality, includes: the new concepts of space, time, matter, and energy developed in subatomic physics; the emerging systems view of life, mind, consciousness, and evolution; the integration of western and eastern approaches to psychology and psychotherapy; and an ecological perspective which is spiritual in its ultimate essence and will lead to profound changes in our technology and our economic and political structures. $170

Let Go/Let Be Betty Fuller

Movement is a primary means to learning about my self, about my relationships with others, and about my place in the universe. This workshop includes physical and mental stress reduction and alignment exercises, guided imagery, nutritional information, and moving meditations, as well as the integrative bodymind approaches of trager, feldenkrais, and rolf-nolte. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual followup are presented. The schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths and participation in the work of the Esalen community. $170

A Psychic Training Program
Anne & Jim Armstrong
This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training techniques to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professios are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $350

Self Care and Professional Competence: A Workshop for Health Professionals
Julian Silverman & Cynthia Rogers
This workshop is concerned with teaching/learning a point of view and a method for being at ease in one's day-to-day health care work environment:
—contacting and communicating with others comfortably
—being careful with one's self so as to be able to care for others more effectively. For additional information see page 15. $350

Your Own Myth-Body to Live By!
Joseph Campbell & Al Chung-liang Huang
We will explore and recreate ancient myths in our daily lives—in our thoughts and in our bodies—as we integrate intellect and movement into one harmonious living practice.

Recommended readings:

by Campbell—Myths to Live By (Bantam), The Flight of the Wild Gander (Gateway), The Complete Grimm Fairytales (Pantheon)

Medical Self-Care: The Role of Health Professionals in Supporting Self-Provided Health Care
Tom Ferguson, MD & David Sobel, MD
About 80% of illness care—and an even higher percentage of preventive care—is self-provided, yet this most important part of our health care system is largely ignored by many health care professionals. Health workers are trained to rely almost entirely on expert-provided interventions.

This workshop will provide an overview of the field of self-care. Topics will include the present extent of self-care, what people can learn to do for themselves, self-care classes, self-diagnostic tests, self-help groups, social support systems, health promotion, self-care in the schools, the literature of self-care, the effectiveness and safety of self-care, self-care in the clinic, dealing with the sophisticated medical consumer, the developing technology of self-care, special problems health professionals have in taking care of themselves, and more. Participants will have an opportunity to meet others with similar interests and to share their personal and professional experiences in self-care. For additional information see page 15. $170

The Art of Yoga: A Mind/Body Approach
Joel Kramer
This workshop is for beginners or anyone interested in experiencing an approach to yoga which involves exploring the edge or frontier of the self, both mentally and physically. Yoga is presented not as a removal from life, but as an adventure in living. In a short time this approach can provide a powerful mode of exploration—no matter what your flexibility—in the physical, psychological, and spiritual domains of life. $170

Holomovement: T'ai Chi and Hologram

Play/Work: Taking the Game of Your Life Into the Arena of Your Work
Skip Andrew

The more I become clearer about who I am, the more I touch my true center, the more I describe my whole self, the more I need to recreate work befitting the real me. All of us uniquely combine our own values, skills, special knowledges, people preferences, environmental choices, and monetary aspirations. Much of the so-called job market claims we cannot be our unique, powerful, special, and humanistic selves in the "real world." In this weekend we will explore ways to deal with and overcome this concept and to encourage our true selves to emerge in work as well as in play. Suggested reading: *What Color is Your Parachute? Exploring Self-Acceptance
David Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self-concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter methods, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $170

Meditation and Prayer Workshop
Daniel O'Hanlon

This workshop provides introductory instruction and guidance in a variety of practices, drawn from the Christian traditions of East and West, from Hindu and Buddhist disciplines, and from the recent explorations of the human potential movement.

The workshop will encourage and assist each participant to discover his or her own path. The work will move in two stages:

1) Guided experience in a variety of ways of deepening contemplation: breathing awareness, breath as gesture of prayer, body awareness meditations, mantras, the Jesus prayer, chanting, hatha yoga, visualization and fantasy, etc.

2) Under personal direction, more intense work with that practice or those practices most suited to each individual.

Suggested reading: New Seeds of Contemplation (Merton), and Zen Mind, Beginner's Mind (Suzuki). $350

Myth and the Body
Joseph Campbell & Sam Keen

The human animal gives birth to myths and symbols which shape bodily life. We are myth-making animals. We live the myths we create, and the myths create our humanity. They touch every aspect of our lives: religion, sexuality, politics, economics.

The relation of myth and the body will be approached from three perspectives: a) The pivotal myth of East and West about the body; the way that soul and body, mind and matter, and resurrection have shaped Western culture. b) The personal myths emerging out of our life process that are expressed as our biographies and body form. c) The possibility emerging from contemporary philosophy and psychology that biological and symbolic experience are interdependent expressions of a common process.

The workshop will center on the theme of how one participates in the personal and cultural world of mythology as both symbol-maker and body simultaneously. $370

French Intensive/Biodynamic Gardening
David Field
Based on the belief that a fuller understanding of nature will yield fertility in the garden, French intensive/biodynamic techniques approach plants and soil through a balance of spiritual and practical points of view. Supreme drainage and abundance are realized through careful cultivation, fertilization, and propagation in conjunction with cyclic forces. The flow of life is encouraged. Workshop participants will actively engage in all processes which lead to health of the soil, including double-digging, filthing, and dressing of raised beds; preparation of seed flats, sowing of seeds, and transplanting; composting; the importance of herbs; and specifics of climate and plant variety selection for various geography. $350

Put Your Memories, Fantasies, and Dreams to Work for You: A Reichian/Gestalt Approach to Energy Release
Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent
"To understand is to tremble. To recollect is to reenter and to be riven."—Harold Brodkey
This workshop focuses on releasing the energy locked in our memories, fantasies, and dreams so that this energy can be made available for present relationships and life situations in a way that makes our existence in the present less encumbered by unfinished business of the past as well as self-programmed, self-fulfilling prophecies of doom for the future. First priority is on intensive intrapersonal work in a supportive group setting. There will also be opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $350

Experiencing Astrology
Robert Hand

The basis of astrological symbols lies within the psyche, and every symbol in astrology can be experienced in terms of feelings and sensations. Being in touch with the symbols of astrology at this level gives one knowledge of what the horoscope means at much more than an intellectual level.

The workshop is aimed at persons who have anywhere from a minimal to an advanced level of astrological knowledge. The object of the workshop will be to get an inner experience of the symbolism of one's individual horoscope through guided meditation exercises. In these the participant will gain, through visions and fantasies, a non-intellectual knowledge of the symbolism in his or her own chart, and what it signifies.

The only requirement for this workshop is that the individual know his or her own birthdate, and, if at all possible, time and place as well. Each individual will be working with his or her own horoscope as well as sharing the horoscopes of others.

When applying, please send the office your birth date, and time and place, if possible, well in advance of the workshop dates so that your chart may be cast before the workshop. $350

Thinking Body/Moving Mind: A Soft-Systems Approach to Psychophysical Fitness and Training
Betty Fuller & Russell Nichols

This innovative workshop skillfully combines trager mentastics, feldenkrais, stretching/strengthening, and numerous other anti-exercises designed to increase self-awareness, prevent injuries, and enhance athletic performance (open to all levels of physical fitness). There will also be guided opportunities to integrate these creative systems through walking and running in Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis throughout the weekend will be on creating a truly integrated thinking body/moving mind. Here is a unique learning experience for getting in touch while getting in shape while having fun. $170

Hypnosis and Parapsychology
Lee Pulos

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced techniques of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering techniques such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lecturettes explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the "fun" part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's vision inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $170

Flesh Consciousness
Michael McClure & Frank Wildman

This workshop will be an experience in the liberation of our verbal imagination working in harmony with the sensing of our personal anatomy of feelings and physique. The evolution of biological structure, tissue, and movement will be explored in coordination with a set of "alchemical" verbal methods and writing experiments.

Workshop members will enact in graduated steps the evolution of movement. By exploring the human skeleton from a phenomenological perspective we can discover a meaning in the human frame—a history of bone, meat, and motion blending into imagination. Our focus will be to demonstrate that tissue, structure, and body are consciousness and that we do not need the language of duality to express our images and feelings. $170

Transpersonal Psychology: New Approaches to Therapy and Self-Exploration
Christina & Stanlislav Grof

We will explore theoretically and experientially the rapidly developing area of transpersonal psychology. Using a combination of controlled breathing, evocative music, body work, and mandala drawing, the participants will have the opportunity to confront various unfinished biographical issues, elements of the death-rebirth process, and the spectrum of transpersonal experiences. This experimentation with powerful new approaches to personality change will be complemented by discussion of a conceptual framework based on modern consciousness research and the world-view emerging from modern physics. Special attention will be paid to the process of kundalini awakening, the concept of spiritual emergency, and to techniques of assistance in transpersonal crises. $350

A Weekend Primer on Constitutional Holistic Medicine
Focusing on Homeopathy, Acupuncture, and Deep Tissue Work

Al Drucker
& Staff

This workshop will examine energetic medicine, that which deals directly with the energy field and the vital force. The three principal systems that will be discussed and demonstrated are different healing paths with a common curative goal—the complete restoration of health through the law of cure. We will study the subtle transforming role of disease in the spiritual evolutionary development of the individual, seeing it as the catalytic agent that puts us back on track with our deeper life's purpose and mission. But we will also explore ways of pure healthful and heartful living and sensitive attunement which permits us to achieve our life's goals without illness. For additional information see page 15.

Transformations: An Energy Release Workshop

Maureen Lavender

In this workshop we will focus on freeing our musculature from emotional reactiveness. Then the energy tied up in holding patterns of "cannot" and "have not" can be transformed into responsible action. We will look at ways in which we misuse energy and explore the power inherent in conscious ways of breathing, moving, and thinking. In trying to avoid pain or pleasure we frequently shrink from or impulsively discharge our energy. Overcontracted or extended, we make poor containers for the life force. To restore potency we will facilitate emotional release through bioenergetic, reichian, and rebirthing breath-movements. We will also experiment with tantric encounter, chakra balancing, and purification through symbolic rites. $170

Energy Awareness and Creative Sexuality

George Leonard & Annie Styron

We begin with a modern dilemma. How is it that sex, which is allied with creation itself, can so easily fall into stereotype and predictability? Must we keep switching partners to stay erotically alive? Or is it possible to discover a way of loving that is both creative and enduring?

In this workshop, we use the simple movement exercises and visualizations of energy awareness to explore communications and creativity in the erotic realm. The purpose here is not to prescribe new methods or techniques but rather to transform the way you experience your sexuality, as inspired by George Leonard's forthcoming book, Love and Creation: An Exploration of Sex Beyond Ideology. The workshop is appropriate for individuals as well as couples. $170 per participant

Week of April 12-17

Gestalt, Bioenergy, and Human Contact; Old and New Learning Integrated

Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self and our interdependence with physical and social environments. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $350

Choosing to Change

Harry Sloan

Changing is discovering that something new is trying to emerge and integrating that next step into our daily lives. In this process we often encounter parts of ourselves that do not nourish change. We resist, either by preventing ourselves from seeing beyond where we are, or by blocking ourselves from integrating and expressing the next step.

In an atmosphere of tenderness and humor, this workshop will combine individual work with discussion of principles and concepts which nourish the process of change. Personal work will stress deepening awareness of our own unique sense of direction and the obstacles in the way. We will focus on learning to allow change through exploring the implications of our choices and seeing how we retard or encourage the expression of our emerging self.

The basic approach will include psychosynthesis and transpersonal and cathartic methods which emphasize learning, and developing skills and tools to release and transform blocked energies. Our purpose together will be to align our motivation and will with the natural process of change and integration. $350

Five Days with Dan Casriel: The New Identity Process

The new identity process has been evolving for the last fifteen years. The core of this system is the rediscovery and reunderstanding of emotions, focusing on their biological and psychological significance as well as biochemical and neurophysiological implications. The workshop will be both experiential and didactic, with screaming used as a tool to reach deep seated feelings. Verbal-emotional expression (bonding) between individuals will be stressed. $350

Body Harmony

Gary Holtzman

Our bodies are continually harassed by tensions and toxins in our environment. The subtle rhythms of our bodily functions become inharmonious. This discord affects the tone of our muscles and the health of our skin and hair. The workshop is designed to restore the harmony in our bodies and encourage its presence throughout our daily routine.

Each morning we will exercise to awaken centers, align body structure, and tone and stretch the muscles. The exercises are choreographed to various types of music to soothe and encourage while we work.

An afternoon at the hot sulphur baths will be enhanced by the application of Dr. R. Hauschka homeopathic skin preparations. These remedies were developed under the philosophies of Dr. Rudolph Steiner. They encourage the skin to function as a coherent organ through self-correction. A series of kinesiological tests will determine the specific preparations to suit your individual needs.

The evenings will be devoted to body movement designed to harmonize the relationship with our surroundings and others to our environment. Leotards and tights or sweat clothes are required for exercise and movement. $350

Death and Rebirth for Couples
Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent
This workshop is for couples who feel willing to risk relationship for the possibility of enriching and deepening it. In this very intense weekend we use gestalt, encounter, and family process to uncover and differentiate the specific interactions that deaden and depress the energy of relationship from contact that enlivens and excites, so that couples can begin to make enlightened choices for themselves on an ongoing, moment to moment basis. $170 per participant

Energy Systems and Gestalt Process
Alan Schwartz
Read the April 12-17 description. This will be a weekend to explore and understand our individual energy systems and their relation to how we both make contact and inhibit contact. One focus will be on integration via energy release techniques. Another will be on the simple task of being present, physiologically and emotionally, being aware that contact refers to our consistent awareness process and the autonomous expression of who we are. $170

Towards a More Sensitive Relating
Charlotte Selver & Charles Brooks
An introduction to sensing, for more meaningful contact with our own nature and with the world around us.

How we relate to our deep inner needs, to other people, or to different tasks and situations depends on how we perceive them and how we trust our own findings. When perception is clear and full, we cannot make mistakes. Our whole organism is geared to respond appropriately. We have come, however, to see through a fog of preconceptions, a bewildering fabric of the ideas and judgments of others. Our own experience has been belittled; our perceptive faculties have lost their edge. The true I and the true you no longer meet. Both life and death have become often threatening fantasies.

Sensory awareness is a practice for rediscovering and reviving full sensory functioning. Through the gradual quieting of premature and inappropriate intellectual activity, it directs our attention both inwards and outwards to the actuality of the present moment. As perceptivity revives, true relationship become possible. Each everyday occasion in living gains its own freshness, its own uniqueness. We can become content again, like healthy children, as quality begins to make quantity unimportant.

The few hours of a weekend workshop may, and often do, permit a glimpse of something so exciting, so enriching, that a person may wish to change his life in order to follow it up. $170

Death and Resurrection
Paul Rebillot
This workshop offers the opportunity to experience, rather than avoid, one of life's most real situations and its only inevitability: your own death. On a wider scale, it explores ways to move creatively through life's many transitions, letting go of the old and welcoming the new.

We will prepare to experience our deaths by reviewing our lives, completing unfinished business, writing wills. We will plan and celebrate our own funerals. Attachments to persons, things, and self-images are gradually severed until, surrendering all to the ultimate unknown, we are able to experience the birth of the truly new. Reborn, we can begin to create a new life the way we want it. $170

Movement and Transformation
Nitza Broide Miller

Movement is change and change requires movement. In this workshop we will experience movement as a process of becoming and accepting fully who we are. We can begin to sense the impasses in our bodies. We will explore ways to appreciate the ancient wisdom of our body memory and to utilize its knowledge to release energy and restore strength. Movement can facilitate transformation through time and space and can teach us how to channel our energies toward meeting life's demands more effectively. Through guided movement, music, and imagery, we can learn to become more sensitive to the internal freedom of our bodies and to become more attuned to our interactions with the outer reality. $170

The Emergent Paradigm
Jay Ogilvy & Peter Schwartz

How do you filter the information you need to live? Like contact lenses you can't take off, a paradigm effects the way you see—and the way you think and feel. More universal than a model, less conscious than an explicit worldview, a paradigm colors one's entire experence of self and world. We believe our culture is undergoing a shift of paradigms. Traditional patterns of meaning and order are crumbling. We have been exploring common patterns of change across thirteen different disciplines from art to chemistry, philosophy to biology. We see a new pattern emerging, one that makes sense aid gives coherence to apparently fragmented lives. Chemical and biological systems generate higher orde from apparent disorder. Political and religious systems sometimes function better with several centers. We will summarize evidence for a polycentric paradigm, then explore its meaning for relationships, for work, fo play, for the business of being human. $170

Spiritual Healing
Alan Young

This workshop will be experiential, and will explore such questions as:

What is spiritual healing? How does it vork?
Why isn't everyone healed? What are he inner causes of disease?
How can we discover the underlying caus in each case?
How can I help my own healing? How can I develop the ability to be a channel for the healing of others?

It will include exercises in sensing the energy adiating from your own body, and from that of others. It will culminate in a demonstration healing in which al will be invited to participate.

The workshop is designed to interest: (a) Those wno want to learn about healing themselves, or at least assist in the healing process; (b) Those who wish to become a channel for the healing of others; and (c) Those who want to learn more about spiritual healing as a matter if interest or personal growth. $170

Attachment and Separation: Loving and Letting Go
George Kohlrieser

Life involves a series of attachments and separations. This experiential workshop will focus on attachments—parents, family, children, spouses, lvers, places, things—and the corresponding grief reactions to separation. Life energy is connected to the quity and depth of emotional contact. Depression is a signal that something is wrong in the attachment system, nd burn-out occurs when people are negatively attached or cannot attach to either people or goals.

Joy is the physiological and psychological outcome of positive emotional attachments, and the unresolved grief of past separations can interfere with making ne attachments and the experience of joy. Saying hello can only occur after saying goodbye. Patterns of attachment and separation learned in childhood, including symbiotic relationships, will be identified and related to how participants make attachments and separate in the here and now. The formation and celebration of positive emotional attachments and the emotional resolution of past separations will be encouraged within the supportive atmosphere of the group. $350

A Course in Miracles: A New Thought Form for Our Time
Julian Silverman This seminar is concerned with an understanding of A Course in Miracles—a formulation of a wholesome way to be in the world.

without attack and defense,
without negative emotions,
without the feeling of being separated from one's source

The Course specifies a practice as well as a conceptual model. It elevates one's self worth by teaching total self-responsibility.

It teaches health. $170

Being Healthy is More Than Not Being Sick: A Workshop in Holistic Health
Emmett Miller A modern attitude toward health and wellness involves recognizing the interplay between our self-image, our emotional state, our relationships, and our health. Symptoms are thus used as guides to direct our awareness to aspects of our lifestyles which need attention.

High level wellness can be said to have been reached when symptoms become fewer and fewer. Wellness is maintained through regular applications of the principles of selective awareness, deep relaxation, aerobic exercise, rest, and proper nutrition. Moreover, these principles are used in such a manner as to produce continuous personal growth—mentally, physically, emotionally, and spiritually.

We'll begin by using simple techniques for evaluations of our present level of wellness. We will then explore the concepts of high level wellness, and learn ways to develop and maintain it through balancing and attuning mind, body, emotions, and spirit. We'll also explore the use of deep relaxation, mental imagery, and movement to unstress and to project a positive self-image and a lifestyle of high level wellness. This workshop is designed for those who enjoy guided imagery and dance movement. $170

Tools for Transformation of Self and Society
Donald Keys In this workshop we will use group discussion, guided fantasy, lecture presentations, and meditation to bring to our awareness specific ways in which we can begin and continue the process of personal transformation and the transformation of our society. Among the topics we will discuss are: the ways of transforming society; the role of communities and new age organizations such as the Findhorn Foundation, and the special role of the United Nations in the world community. $170 + $5 for reading material

Beyond Ego: Transpersonal Dimensions in Psychology

Frances Vaughan & Roger Walsh

Transpersonal psychology is concerned with the farther reaches of human nature, especially optimum health and wellbeing. As concepts of mental health have expanded, the study of consciousness has assumed a central place in the theory of human behavior. A comprehensive transpersonal framework is now emerging for the first time. Since an intellectual understanding of the field is dependent upon an adequate experiential basis, this workshop will offer participants a combination of theoretical and experiential approaches to consciousness research. Personal practice in consciousness disciplines is stressed as essential to both self-knowledge and conceptualization in transpersonal realms.

In this five day period we will explore the roots of wellbeing in consciousness, seeking a balance between inner and outer experience, utilizing both Eastern and Western techniques for deepening awareness. We will examine the process of transformation from both philosophical and practical standpoints, giving participants an opportunity to practice and apply mindfulness and other skills that facilitate assuming responsibility and relinquishing limiting beliefs in both personal meditation and interpersonal communication and interaction. $350

Space and Intelligence: A Fundamental Practice of Meditation for Living and Dying

Sogyal Rinpoche

In the nature of mind, which is the all-encompassing space, like the clear, limitless sky, a complete realization arises that enlightenment is naturally self-existing within us. As this basic intelligence spontaneously awakens, one recognizes that thoughts are but the play of clouds, simply happening there. Free.

Managing Your Life on Purpose: A Workshop for Business and Health Professionals

Julian Silverman

"The test of everything on earth is simply this: 'What is it for?' The answer makes it what it is for you. It has no meaning of itself, yet you can give reality to it, according to the purpose that you serve. Here you are but means along with it." from A Course in Miracles, vol. 1, p. 479

The format of this workshop is based upon a model of well being which has three essential components:

The identification and experience of one's point of self—a point of easiness, of no-struggle,

Communication with others through one's point of self, and

The identification of one's core values and the translation of these values into goals and then into programs for attaining these goals.

The workshop is limited to business executives and health professionals who manage fairly large groups of people. Please send resume along with workshop application. For additional information see page 15. $350

Pleasure, Sensuality, and Your Body

Barbara Clemens

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact and nurturing, sensitive giving, and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, tenderness awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean, and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $350

T'ai Chi Chih—A Gift of Life
Catherine Elber

First presented to the public in 1974, t'ai chi chih is based on ancient movements that were a closely guarded secret of the Chinese emperors and their clansmen for over a thousand years.

Easier than t'ai chi chuan, these 19 gentle movements are becoming one of the simplest and most effective methods available for realizing within one's self how truly beautiful the gift of life really is.

By adding the principles of these motions to your life, you can experience a continual unfoldment of your potential while providing an enrichment to your life on every level. The effects of these movements enable you to experience the beauty and honor of personal transformation as your body, mind, and soul reap the benefits of harmony and balance—physical health and grace, mental peace and clarity, spiritual infinity. $350

A Workshop in Creative Movement
Anna Halprin
& Daria Halprin-Khaligi

"The fact that there has always been dance compels us to accept it as an old, deeply rooted human activity whose foundations reside in the nature of human beings. It will continue as long as the rhythmic flow of energy operates, and until man/woman ceases to respond to the forces of life and the universe. As long as there is life, there will be dance."—Margaret H. Doubler

This workshop is designed to inspire and guide an exploration through movement and dance of one's own life resources and themes. The learning process will be aimed at integrating emotional and physical expression, utilizing dance, and also incorporating gestalt principles and visualization exercises. Learning principles of movement ritual will be an important focus. The development and expansion of personal and group creativity as a way of promoting health, increasing communication skills, and facilitating change is the intention of this workshop.

The Esselens

Malcolm Margolin

The Esselens were the Indian people whose villages once dotted the Big Sur Coast. In this seminar we will imaginatively reconstruct life in these villages. We will visualize living in rush-covered houses among grizzly bears, antelopes, bald eagles, and wolves. We will imagine relating to a world in which trees, stones, and other "objects" had power and intelligence, and in which the deer we hunted were seen as a kind of "people." We will imagine growing up in a society almost without strangers and in a landscape so intimately known that every large rock and prominent tree had a name and story attached to it. We will tell the stories and sing the songs that once moved the Indian people of Central California. We will also discuss religion, shamanism, art, population control, tribal politics, humor, games, childrearing, and the question of how a quarrelsome people managed to live for hundreds of years without major warfare. $170

Zero Balancing

Fritz Smith

Zero balancing is a body handling system utilizing structural acupressure to deal directly with the interface between body structure and energy flow. The workshop will be both didactic and experiential.

Traditional anatomy, physiology, and kinesiology will be reviewed and then reinterpreted from an alternative viewpoint indicating the often overlooked imbalances which occur within our foundation joints. These imbalances may lead to chronic body pain, and frequently represent an ongoing energy drain from the body. Based on laws of nature, zero balancing is both a pleasure to give and to receive, and results seen are immediate, gratifying and often inspiring, with seemingly little effort on our part. While there will be both theoretical presentations and practical demonstrations, the main emphasis of the workshop will be toward individual instruction. This workshop is limited to persons certified in the healing profession. $350

Energy Awareness and Personal Transformation

George Leonard

In the world of energy awareness, problems become opportunities and pain becomes a gift of energy. Through simple movement exercises, we practice centering, relaxation, and blending, and learn alternative ways of dealing with conflict and stress. To quote The Ultimate Athlete, "Simply by considering possibilities commonly ignored by our culture, we find ourselves in a far more fascinating universe. We discover adventures that do not require the burning of fuel or the rape of the planet: sensing the energy field of a friend or a tree, making connections that defy conventional space and time . . . We realize, with the sorcerer don Juan, that our world is awesome, mysterious, and unfathomable, and that our life is filled to the brim and altogether too short." $170

Opening the Feelings
Siri Mishler & Dale Cummings

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this workshop. We will be employing radix neo-reichian methods of emotional release, the most important of which is the radix intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, which can provide a lot of emotional support among participants. Grief or pain, fear and rage that have been held in since childhood can emerge. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he or she may discover a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience may change as feelings of tenderness and sexual feelings intensify and merge. $350

Awareness and Freedom Through Feldenkrais Method and Dance
Ruthy Alon & Nitza Broide Miller

This workshop is for people who are willing to expand their patterns of movement and dance for improving their feeling of well being in body and spirit.

The group will experience many feldenkrais processes that are like the grammar of spontaneity. In meditative exploration through various options, you will have an opportunity to restore organic motions, coordination, and grace.

A natural flow of motion will facilitate relaxation and images. Through effortless movement and dance we'll let our images be restored and create a dance, allowing our body to free itself gently from old patterns. We'll learn to release tensions through movement and change postures that were created as a result of inhibited expressions within our environment.

We'll relearn the natural fluency, reviewing the primal evolution of the developing baby—enjoying its body sensations and pleasures, and its relationships to others through dance. $350

The Reality of the Self: Eastern and Western Perspectives on Human Identity
Theodore Roszak & Philip Whalen

One of the most puzzling questions dividing Eastern and Western thought is the reality of the self. The differences seem to be radical and irreconcilable. Western philosophy, religion, and psychotherapy teach that there is a unique and immortal soul—or person—in each of us which is meant to be discovered, asserted, and saved. In the Eatern cultures, the self is spoken of as a tragic illusion from which we must be liberated.

Is there a common ground between these views? Where does egotism leave off and authenticity begin? What is the value of originality and creativity? Is the uniqueness of people a delusion or a precious virtue? Does the "story of life" have any important meaning? Does real self-knowledge lead us into the self or beyond the self? $170

Special Programs

Gazebo Visitor Program

Esalen's Gazebo, an alternative educational environment, invites parents, grandparents, children, and teachers to come together on a multigenerational common ground. Visitor rates are $50 per day, which includes room, board, and access to all Esalen community activities. Arrangements are flexible, including sleeping bag accommodations and reduced rates for those over 65 years old. This can be a time for families, whether traditional, single parent, or extended, to relax and renew. For information and reservations please contact Bette Dingman, (408) 667-2335.

Conscious Childbirth

We are beginning a series of weekend workshops for pregnant couples interested in exploring conscious childbirth. Issues and themes to be covered in the series include conception and pregnancy, nutrition and exercises for pregnant mothers, labor, delivery, and post partem. Emphasis will be on education, responsibility, and awareness of choices. Workshop sessions will include pre-natal yoga, massage, and psychological process work. The use of ritual will be explored as a way to honor birth as a rite of passage. For further information, write or telephone Peggy Morrison Horan, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, Ca. 93920, (408) 667-2464.

Deep Tissue, Gestalt, and Holistic Health

This residential training program will be offered at Esalen during two identical four-month periods:

February 20, 1981 thru June 14, 1981
September 4, 1981 thru December 27, 1981

The coordinators are Al Drucker and Polly Kirby. A part-time faculty of about twenty will be involved in different aspects of the teaching program.

The workshop is designed primarily for health care professionals and students in the health field. It is intended to give participants new knowledge and skills in various holistic health and healing practices which they can use in their own health care settings.

The program will focus on 10 major areas of study and practice. These are:

- massage
- gestalt
- homeopathy
- t'ai chi
- bach flowers
- deep tissue
- acupuncture
- anatomy
- nutrition
- community health

During each 4-month period, participants will receive in-depth training in the 10 deep-tissue sessions. (See deep-tissue description in the Sept. 1980-Feb. 1981 Esalen catalog.) In addition to the deep-tissue classes held on twelve 3-day weekends, an ongoing gestalt practicum will be offered during four other weekends, focusing on training in gestalt process. The program will commence with a massage training weekend which is preparatory to the deep-tissue classes. Massage sessions will also be scheduled at intervals throughout the semester. The t'ai chi form will be taught during the deep-tissue weekends. All other classes will be held during the week at times so as not to interfere with work resdents' work schedules. Regularly scheduled community health sessions will meet weekly where participants can observe the integration of these holistic practices. There will be frequent opportunities for meditation, chanting, and contemplative practices. These will not concentrate on any given spiritual motif. The intention is to deepen the participant's own inner awareness.

During this time there will also be regular ongoing community sessions, which are open to all residents in the Esalen community. In the past these have included morning yoga practice, zazen meditations, feldenkrais exercises, various forms of energetic release work, movement and dance, body-stretching exercises, intra and inter-personal process work, and video-tape and movie presentations. For further information on this deep-tissue, gestalt, and holistic health program, a course outline may be obtained by writing to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, Ca. 93920.

Cost of the program, including tuition, room, and board, is $5200 for the 4-month period. Rooms will be shared. Included in this fee are the cost of four 5-day catalog workshops of the participant's choice which can be used any time during the program. An arrangement whereby participants become work residents and pay $3000 is also available. This requires a 16-hour weekly work commitment in the Esalen community. First priority in acceptance to the program will be given to full-paying individuals. The number of work residents, whose participation is considered a work scholarship, will be limited and will be assigned on the basis of need. Please write a letter outlining your situation if you are applying for this part of the program. Also please indicate any special work skills you may have.

A $500 deposit is required to reserve a place in the pogram. Early registraton is recommended. The deposit is refundable in full if you are not accepted into the program.

Esalen is not a degree, diploma, or certificate granting institution. This program is offered for professional and educational enrichment. Participants must make their own arrangements to assure compliance with their respective state license requirements. Verification of attendance will be given to nurses and physicians in the program desiring continuing education credit for thisworkshop.

The Spiritual Path: Promises and Pitfalls

A four-week interdisciplinary training program organized jointly by the Esalen Institute and the International Transpersonal Association (ITA), this workshop is designed for professionals and students in psychiatry, psychology, anthropology, religion, and philosophy interested in exploring the transpersonal realms and the techniques of reaching them. Special attention wi be paid to the similarities and differences between psychosis and mysticism and to the problems relatd to the evolution of consciousness and its vicissitudes. This program is part of a systematic effort to createin international network of individuals trained to facilitate the process of personal evolution and to assist in spitual emergencies. The program will focus on the following thematic areas:

1. Ancient Technologies of the Sacred: Shamanism and the Great Spiritual Traditions

The participants will have the opportunity to explore the shamanic techniques under the guidance of Dr. Michael Harner, an anthropologist who combines Western scholarship and first-hand training with South American shamans. Visiting shamans will share the knowledge with the group and conduct sacred rituals. Other spiritual traditions will be represented by t'ai chi, hatha and siddha yoga, Vipassana Buddhism, aikido, and the kundalini tradition.

2. Techniques of Transpersonal Psychology

We will explore theoretically and experientially a spectrum of modern techniques that can mediate access to the transpersonal realms: guided imagery with music, controlled breathing, mandala drawing, gestalt practice, exploration of psychic abilities, jungian psychology, Dora Kalff's sandplay, massage, acupuncture, and transit astrology.

3. Psychosis: Disease or Transpersonal Crisis?
We will discuss new understanding of the psychotic process emerging from psychedelic therapy, jungian analysis, kundalini research, and modern clinical and laboratory studies. An attempt will be made to distinguish psychosis from a spiritual emergency. We will experiment with techniques of constructive assistance in transpersonal crises. The recent convergence of quantum-relativistic physics, modern consciousness research, and mysticism will be explored as a possible scientific basis for the transpersonal orientation.

4. Self-Exploration and Group Process
The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with personal experience. The Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators for the participants throughout the program. $1400

Still Points, Turning Points: A New Curriculum for Change

"Anything which is forced or misunderstood can never be beautiful." —Xenophon

People, like plants, need special care and attention to thrive and blossom. To naturally grow beyond what we've been requires strength, sensitivity, and a deeply compassionate awareness. What are the most important elements that support this transformation and renewal? And how might this process be effectively shared with others? Out of the answers to these basic questions has emerged the dream of combining the best of Esalen's human potential practice work with the spirit of adventure found in Outward Bound's wilderness programs along with the gracious informality of living and working together in one of the most beautiful and peaceful settings in the world.

The aim of this unique curriculum will be to explore and develop a new model for learning, one that not only deepens the experience of traditional therapeutic process, but also breaks new ground in erasing the line between intensive group and individual work and the ordinary world of everyday life.

Among the areas we will touch on during this month are:

The Body and its Functions: As a temple for the spirit; as a reflection, and as a turning point from past habits, fears, and attitudes; as a source of grace, ease, and fluidity in movement and in contact; as a kinetic homebase for exuberance, playfulness, and balance; and as a healing source of touch.

The Emotional Realm: Exploring and opening the limits of our temperament; redirecting negative feelings for inspiration and power; cultivating passion and strength as the core of our integrity; resolving inner and outer turmoil simply and peacefully.

The Mind: Developing the powers of the imagination for self-affirmation and creativity; deepening our ability to see, hear, and understand so that we can range easily from the practical to the transcendental; strengthening our sense of fair-witness and developing the skillful use of the will; using the perspective of humor to heal separation.

Coming together in the spirit of being simply and lovingly at home in ourselves, we will create a community whose foundation is based on trust, goodwill, and authenticity.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own style and artfulness as an individual guide and group facilitator doing in-depth training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthetic methods, and the meditative arts. The program will be structured to include intensive individual work; creative music and movement; wilderness and equestrian experiences; group rituals and celebrations; and supervised observations; practicum work in group leading and individual counselling skills; video feedback; and illustrated lectures and didactic theoretical sessions.

The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective that will bring buoyancy and lightness into our life and work. The group is designed for people from all walks of life. $1400

Body, Self, and Soul: An Experimental Training Workshop
This workshop will start wherever you are in your inner journey. The work is an in-depth integration of body therapies, gestalt practice, and the transformative process of consciousness.

The course will cover:

Psychology of the Self: working with early unfinished situations that interrupt our sense of well-being and interfere with our relationships in the present. Sexual implications of this work will be dealt with in body work and in lecture.

Body Work (Gestalt Body Approach): theoretic and practical application, combining classical reichian work, yoga, and bio-energetics with psychological process.

Transformative Process of Consciousness: As our inner journey progresses our figure/ground awareness is shifted from "doing" and "having" to "being" and to our relationship with the eternal, and we will explore ways to integrate and sustain these new awarenesses in our everyday life. $1050

Mysteries of Death and Rebirth
12 day Mediterranean Cruise
Historical and anthropological literature presents ample evidence about the cultural significance of psychological death and rebirth. Throughout ages, every major ancient and pre-industrial culture has offered its members a structured, supportive, and socially sanctioned framework in which they could experience the healing and transformative power of the confrontation with death and subsequent transcendence.

On this 12 day Mediterranean cruise aboard the luxurious M. S. Golden Odyssey we will visit areas that were known in antiquity for their traditions of death and rebirth mysteries.

Our journey begins in Athens, Greece with the rites of Dionysus, Attis, and Adonis, and continues to Istanbul and the converging rites of the Byzantine empire. We then sail south to Ephesus, Turkey, and the Holy Lands of Israel where the Christian version of the death-rebirth process is seen through Christ's suffering, death, and resurrection. At the pyramids of Egypt we see the journey of the soul through the eyes of the Egyptian Book of the Dead and the temple mysteries of Isis and Osiris. Visits to the Greek islands of Mykonos, Hydra, and Rhodes are also part of our incredible journey.

Seminars at sea will explore cross-culturally the death-rebirth process and will include a review of modern consciousness research, particularly psychedelic work and jungian psychology as it relates to psychopathology and its relevance to human life.

Total cost of this 12 day Mediterranean cruise aboard the Golden Odyssey, including round trip air fare from the west coast to Athens and all seminars, is $2598 to $3498 per person, depending on choice of cruise accommodation. Participation limited to 40.

For further information write Timeless Travels, 323 Geary St., Suite 413, San Francisco, Ca. 94102. Or phone weekdays 10 to 3 PST (415) 981-8518.

Inner and Outer Paths to Adventure: Hawaii

During this seven day adventure, we explore the largest of the chain of the Hawaiian Islands—Hawaii, sometimes called the "Orchid Island." We begin our journey in the Hawaiian Volcanoes National Park at the 4000 foot summit of the active shield volcano, Kilauea, in whose caldera Pele, the legendary and mischievous goddess of volcanoes, is said to reside.

Leaving the smouldering volcano, with its lava tubes, we descend through lush, tree fern forests, cross deserts of hard-crusted lava, soft volcanic ash, and cinder, and pass through low shrub and grasslands on our way to the beautiful sandy beach of Halape, where we swim in the warm, transparent waters, marveling at the fantastic marine life.

Camping at night in simple trail shelters, we learn all the skills needed to live comfortably in the wilderness. Woven into our week adventure will be group process work, combining a variety of human potential practices. There will be time for relaxing, journal and photography work, natural history and ecology study, Hawaiian history and mythology, and simply enjoying the incredible variety of terrain, plants, and animals. Applications must be received by January 5. $525 (plus airfare)

Woman's Challenge: A Dance of Adventure

Easter is a time of renewal in the Ventana/Big Sur wilderness—a time of joyous new life, spring's bright songs and colors. During this seven-day adventure, starting at Arroyo Seco, we hike westward with the sun through chapparal, spreading oaks, and fields of wild flowers, emerging from the redwoods on the edge of the continent—the spectacular Big Sur coast.

During our journey we explore our inner world, our feminine roles and archetypes, the dominant and shadowy parts of ourselves, our vulnerability and strengths, our heroism and our adventurousness. Woven into our week are group process work, traditional wilderness skills, rock climbing, rappelling, and rolfing movement integration, designed to open ourselves to balance, grace, and fluidity. Each of us spends 24 hours alone in reflection and contemplation near the end of the trip.

The full moon, bright stars, and crackling campfires make for evenings of storytelling, rituals, dance, and laughter.

We can emerge from this exploration at a new place of inner power and wisdom.

We will camp out at Esalen our first night and return Easter morning to spend time in the baths. Lunch will be our final meal together. No previous experience necessary. Complete equipment list will be sent on registration. $350

The Rites of Passage: A 5-day Pilgrimage On Horseback through the Big Sur Wilderness

Turning the clock back to a more gently paced time, we will share a profoundly simple style of life together.

Beginning our journey from a remote beautiful ranch on the river's edge in Arroyo Seco, we'll travel along winding canyon trails through the unspoiled back country of the Ventana Wilderness.

We'll carry all our essentials with us, making stops in some of the loveliest spots in the Ventana.

The trip will combine elements from human potential practices, group process work, and traditional equestrian and wilderness skills. It will be a time of simplification and cleansing.

The group will be limited to ten participants. $650

Meet the Wilderness, Yourself, and Each Other:
A Seven-day Wilderness Experience from Esalen to the Tassajara Zen Center

Nature can provide us with opportunities to stretch our mind and, paradoxically, explore our internal wilderness. By doing what is most risky, even uncomfortable, we can give ourselves the greatest potential for personal growth. By living without the conveniences that remove us from our source, giving priority to feeling and honest exchanges, we can greatly and dramatically expand our sense of self and depth of being.

We spend a day and night at Esalen, joining ourselves as a group, preparing for the wilderness, building the foundation for spontaneity, trust, and self-responsibility. We leave the next morning hiking through the rugged Ventana wilderness, travelling as "light" as possible. There is basic training in minimum impact camping and outdoor living, along with a simple orientation to the ecology, geography, and cultural history of the Big Sur coast and Ventana. We cook simple, organic meals and eat communally. Throughout the seven days we give whatever time is necessary to working with any feelings that may emerge. Our experience together, sometimes nudging personal boundaries, encountering ourselves, each other, and nature, culminates in a 24-hour period completely alone and without food. We reunite on the seventh day to celebrate and share our discoveries. We also spend some time on this day at the Tassajara Zen Center for a communal bath and meal, and drive back to Esalen to finish whatever personal business we may still have to complete together.

Back packing experience is not necessary, but participants should be prepared for the challenge of vigorous physical activity. More information will be sent upon registration. $325

Friends of Esalen

Friends of Esalen provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available on a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

☐ I wish to become a Friend of Esalen and I enclose my check for the category circled.

The Pattern That Connects

The natural history of Gregory Bateson's mind. A two year project of filmmaker Kai de Fontenay and Gregory Bateson. This work is now in the editing state and will be completed this next spring. Inquiries should be addressed to The Pattern That Connects, P.O. Box 8, Forest Knolls, Ca. 94933, (415) 488-0135.

The Gregory Bateson Tape Recordings

When a great man dies, his recorded thoughts, those that were spoken and those that were written, become a legacy for the ages.

Gregory Bateson was somewhat lenient as far as the spoken word was concerned, considering it relatively evanescent and subject to all kinds of error; but he was very much concerned about the importance of exactness of meaning and truth in the printed word. He gave permission for recording — but not for transcription: time was precious and transcriptions always needed revision and correction.

Nevertheless, during his years when first he visited Esalen and then came to live here, he was very generous with his time and his energy, sharing his thinking in informal seminar groups, or with staff and community in the living room of his home. He usually spoke about what he was most concerned with at the time, rather than any prepared subject. And sometimes he found himself talking with individuals who only partly grasped what was happening or who went to sleep in the process. Always he was gracious.

The recordings that he left us become now part of the archives and belong to his estate. Material from these tapes may not be transcribed, broadcast by radio, or prepared for printed publication in any form without prior permission from the estate.

Registration Information

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esalen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute-By Reservation Only.

Reservation Information: In order to reserve a space in any workshop we require a reservation fee of $50 for weekend groups, $100 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups, payable in U.S. currency only. Balance of payment is due on arrival. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs, to be used within one year of receipt.

Please mail all reservations to:

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation. Allow at least three weeks for processing as we have many applications. If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15-September 15 programs or for weekend programs.

Ongoing Residence Program: Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $1400 per 26-day period.

Room and Board: Bed spaces not required for workshop participants are sometimes available for room and board. Accommodations are shared and the rate is $40 per person per day, which includes dinner on the day of arrival and breakfast and lunch the following day. Private rooms for couples are sometimes available at $75 per day per couple. Please phone the office for additional information.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive any time after lunch.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen. Esalen limousine service is not available at any other time.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff, usually in the kitchen. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Accreditation: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs.

Contributions to Esalen Institute are tax-deductible.

The expenses of attending Esalen, including travel, are deductible for federal income tax purposes as an educational expense if incurred to maintain or improve professional or work skills. (See Income Tax Regulation 1.162-5.)

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to stimulate, encourage, synthesize, and attempt evaluation of these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one with a psychiatric problem, whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some people, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find our programs difficult, trying, or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

Attitudes, Understanding, and the Perception of Mental Disorder

In principle, most of us regard as "true" that which has been confirmed in a scientific or otherwise orderly fashion. In actuality, what is believed by someone to be "true" depends upon that person's point of view. A point of view is based upon attitudes; attitudes are presuppositions which we use to think with; they are critical determiners of what is perceived to be "true." A person's basic attitudes about life constitute a position. (Webster's Seventh Collegiate Dictionary includes this definition of attitude: "The position of something in relation to a frame of reference.") To have a point of view—a position—in regard to something means to have an attitude in relation to it. All too often, we regard it as a waste of time or as burdensome to examine our core attitudes. E.F. Schumacher explains it this way:

"There is nothing more difficult than to become critically aware of the presuppositions of one's thought. Everything can be seen directly except the eye through which we see. Every thought can be scrutinized directly except the thought by which we scrutinize. A special effort, an effort of self-awareness, is needed: that almost impossible feat of thought recoiling upon itself—almost impossible but not quite. In fact, this is the power that makes man human and also capable of transcending his humanity." (Schumacher, 1977, p. 44)

Routinely what we do we do on the basis of attitudes of which we are only dimly aware, at best; yet we shape our lives by what we do.

Kathy Thornod

"For it all depends upon how we look at things and not how they really are."

The consequences of having particular attitudes about the nature of mental disorder are especially broad. They affect the ways in which we behave toward and evaluate both significant and nonsignificant people in our lives, the ways in which we make sense of our personal dis-eases, and the particular adjustments we choose during periods of our own marked imbalances.

A study by two University of Connecticut psychologists, Jeffrey Fisher and Amerigo Farina, is most interesting in this regard. The report of their research, entitled "Consequences of Beliefs About the Nature of Mental Disorders," was published in 1979 in the Journal of Abnormal Psychology. The subjects in the study were 81 undergraduate students who were enrolled in two Abnormal Psychology classes. The two classes were chosen because the professors teaching them presented markedly different viewpoints.

In one class, the conception of mental disorder as essentially a biologically (and, in part, socially) determined disease was presented throughout the semester; in the other class the viewpoint espoused throughout was that mental disorders were the result of socially learned patterns of behavior.

For example, in the class with the social learning point of view, the "abnormal" individual was characterized as a person who does not fit comfortably into society (i.e. as a misfit with maladaptive behavior patterns). In analyzing the cause of such problems, the instructor focused upon the individual's social system (e.g. family). In comparison, although the role of learning was considered in the biologically-oriented class, major emphasis was placed upon genetic factors and upon the relationships between somatic states and behavior. Further, and in contrast to the social-learning class, substantial value was attached to The American Psychiatric Association diagnostic categories in the biologically-oriented class.

It was important to note that the scientists capitalized on pre-existing differences in point of view between the instructors and no attempt was made to influence the conduct of the classes. The professors were not aware of the experimental hypothesis being tested, and since the classroom experience of the subject was not affected by the study, it was deemed unnecessary (and possibly inadvisable) to inform students that they were "participating in an experiment."

Pre-existing differences in the professors' points of view were measured by having them respond to a specially designed questionnaire. On those questionnaire items in which differences were found, the two instructors differed in the expected manner. Specifically, the biologically-oriented instructor reported mental disorders "to be more like an illness" and indicated that mental disorders tended to be more degrading, less under personal control, and more responsive to medical intervention than did the social-learning instructor.

To test the effects of exposure to the two different points of view, both classes were administered a questionnaire during the last meeting of the semester. The questionnaire was presented to the students as an inquiry by the University Mental Health Clinic. The students were requested to fill out the questionnaire in order to provide information that would be useful to mental health professionals at the university. The data was, in fact, made available to the mental health professional staff at the university. The primary use of the data was not disclosed to the students at that time, although they were subsequently informed about the experiment and its results at the final examination. "It was felt by all concerned that withholding this information would in no way constitute any harm to the participants. Finally, the students were guaranteed and afforded complete confidentiality, and were specifically assured that their instructors would not view the data."

Significant differences between the two student classes were found as follows:

- Students in the biologically-oriented class tended to view emotional problems more as diseases than students in the social-learning class.
- Students in the biologically-oriented class were less likely to admit that they might seek help at the University Clinic.
- Students in the biologically-oriented class were less likely to feel that it was valuable for them to expend effort on identifying causes and solutions for their emotional problems.
- Students in the biologically-oriented class were more likely to have used drugs and/or alcohol to relieve their emotional upsets during the semester.
- Students in the biologically-oriented class were more likely to believe that increased availability of over-the-counter calmatives was a constructive aid for the relief of emotional problems.
- Students in the biologically-oriented class were more likely to believe that the cure to mental health problems is, in general, out of the individual's control.

These results, as well as the results of earlier research by the same investigators, led them to formulate the following conclusions:

"A social-learning orientation to mental disorders is more likely to lead to attitudes conducive to active attempts to improve one's situation than is an orientation incorporating medically related factors." Further, students with social-learning points of view tended "more to believe that they could do a great deal to help themselves when experiencing emotional distress."

In effect the social learning condition appeared to leave individuals "with a feeling of having a great deal of internal, personal control, whereas the bio-social condition may make them externally oriented and personally helpless."

"For it all depends upon how we look at things and not on how they really are."—C.G. Jung

Homeopathy and the Future of Medicine

As many of us have discovered, modern medicine leaves much to be desired in terms of holistic and humanistic values. For over a century the materialistic, technological, cause-effect worldview has held sway in the field of medicine, producing its most noticeable successes in bacterial diseases, childbirth, physiochemical and radiological diagnosis, surgery, and anesthesia. In attempting to deal with many chronic diseases facing our advanced societies, however, modern medicine is often inadequate. Many of us know from painful experience about rising costs, therapeutic toxicity, over-specialization, and dehumanization of care.

As a consequence of these disappointments a revolution is occurring in public, corporate, and even governmental attitudes toward health and disease. Common sense is returning people to a health-oriented, holistic view emphasizing natural, nurturing, gentle modalities such as nutrition, body therapies, detoxification, etc. These approaches have proven highly useful for general well-being and prevention of disease, but many people receive only partial relief from the nurturing therapies without reversing the degenerative process itself. After two decades of frustrating experience with these disorders in the holistic and humanistic movements, we find ourselves looking for a solidly-based, scientific, yet natural and gentle therapeutic system which is actually effective in curing chronic diseases.

It is against this background that holistic practitioners and patients alike are turning to the science of homeopathy, a nearly two centuries old method of specifically stimulating healing forces in order to bring about cure of whatever ailment may be present. In the homeopathic system, all symptoms of "dis-ease"—on not only physical but emotional and mental levels as well—are understood to be manifestations of the defense mechanism trying to return to a balanced state of health.

Throughout human history two therapeutic approaches have been recognized: the method of contraries (the basis of standard medicine) which applies treatments to counteract or suppress symptoms, and the methods of similars (the basis of homeopathy) which administers medicines designed to enhance the healing processes reflected by symptoms. The underlying principle in homeopathy is: Any substance which produces a spectrum of symptoms in a healthy person will cure those symptoms in a sick person. In nearly two centuries, the homepathic profession has developed over 2000 remedies (mostly herbs, earth salts, and animal products) by administering minute amounts of substance to human volunteers, and recording in painstaking detail every nuance of physical, emotional, and mental symptoms produced. The total collection of these symptoms then becomes the basis for choosing which specific remedy will bring about a curative response in a particular patient.

In classical terms, the homeopathic remedy is understood to be directly stimulating the vital force of the patient—the very life force which makes the difference between a moment of life and the next moment of death, and which is also responsible for animating and balancing our organism under all circumstances. When the vital force has been weakened through hereditary factors, improper life styles, excessive stresses, or other causes, disease on physical, emotional, or mental levels results. Symptoms, then, are manifestations of the vital force trying to heal itself within its own limited strength and through the stresses placed upon it. A properly selected homeopathic remedy, based upon the totality of symptom expressions on all levels, directly stimulates the vital force. The disease process is thereby eliminated naturally—according to the wisdom of the strengthened vital force itself.

To use a more modern analogy, homeopathy can be viewed as the therapeutic science of resonance. Each of us is completely unique, with peculiar responses to various conditions of life. Some of us are bothered by heat, some by cold; some crave salt, others sweets; some are elated by sunny days, others feel best on cloudy days; some are sociable, open, and cry easily, while others are more closed, self-contained, and expressive through ideas; some are anxious, others angry; some sleep on their right side with their feet sticking out from the covers, while others sleep on their left side fully covered. Each of us as individuals resonates either harmoniously or disharmoniously with all of the infinite physical, social, and mental/spiritual stimuli he or she encounters in each moment.

The task of the trained homeopathic prescriber, then, is to record in great detail all the unique resonances of the individual patient (regardless of the specific diagnosis that patient may carry) and then find a single homeopathic remedy that most precisely fits that unique patient at that moment in time. Considering the complexity and subtlety of people you can imagine the enormity of the task confronting the homeopath—and the extent of supervised training required to become a competent homeopathic practitioner. Nevertheless, the rewards of homeopathic training are great for its practitioners, since chronic disease cures occur without direct toxicity or harm to the patient, without the use of standard medicines or surgery, and at a fraction of the total cost of standard medical care!

The rejuvenation of homeopathy in its most effective, modern form has been sparked by George Vithoulkas, founder of a homeopathic school in Athens, Greece, and author of The Science of Homeopathy, a modern text. In October 1980 he conducted a one-month intensive seminar for American doctors at Esalen, the ramifications of which will be felt for decades to come. This group of doctors from all over the U.S. (and a few European countries) have committed themselves not only to the personal discipline of learning homeopathy, but also to the public activism required to create full-time professional schools for the training of future homeopaths.

George Vithoulkas founded the International Foundation for the Promotion of Homeopathy (IFPH), a non-profit, tax-deductible organization designed to create a professional school, carry out public educational activities, publish books and journals, conduct seminars and congresses, etc. Top priority is the creation by 1982 of a full-time, five-year, professional homeopathic school in the San Francisco Bay Area. A faculty has been trained, student interest identified, texts written, curriculum planned, and physical plant located. Funding is the primary remaining obstacle. Tax-deductible donations and/or further inquiries are welcome: IFPH, Cynthia Lanahan (Executive Director) 4 Sherman Ave., Fairfax, CA 94930.

Rolfing

Ida Rolf came to Esalen at a time when the human potential movement was finding its feet and taking the first solid steps toward an expanded understanding of human development. New ideas of what is normal were being articulated and the emphasis was shifting from "what is wrong" to "what is possible." This atmosphere provided a receptive environment for Dr. Rolf's work.

Joyce Rogers

It was at the invitation of Fritz Perls, who had experienced the release made possible by her work, that Ida Rolf first came to Big Sur. She was in her late 60's and had worked quietly and diligently for 40 years developing the theory and techniques that would come to be known as "Rolfing." At Esalen she found the audience she had been looking for and began training students in her work.

Ida Rolf was fond of pointing out that, "aiming at new solutions may involve beginning with new assumptions," and her work is an expression of this. She was not interested in walking further down the road that modern medicine had defined. Educated as a biochemist, she appreciated medicine but wanted a technology that was not oriented toward the treatment of symptoms. She was interested in promoting individual, conscious evolution or, as she discovered in Big Sur, human potential.

The vehicle for her work was the structure and geometry of the body. She saw that accumulated injuries and inhibited expression are accompanied by contraction in the body which, in turn, produces thickening in the web of connective tissue that holds the body's parts together. This thickening distorts the body's structure and puts it at a disadvantage in gravity which, acting continuously to shape the body, further distorts it. By carefully and systematically releasing this thickening in the connective tissue with her hands, she was able to release the contractions, allowing the body to assume a more balanced posture. Graceful and upright posture, she maintained, is a sign of a harmonious relationship to the environment. When accumulated contractions are systematically released, the body moves naturally into accord with gravity and, she maintained, is uplifted by it.

Shortly before her death in 1979, Dr. Rolf was asked what she regarded as her major accomplishment. After thinking a moment, she replied, "creating productive, intelligent work for people to do." Her vision and the interest of her students have combined to create the work currently known as "Rolfing."

After three years, Dr. Rolf had trained enough students and attracted enough interest to necessitate some formal structure for her work. Together with her students, she founded the Rolf Institute, a non-profit educational corporation. The Rolf Institute was incorporated in 1971 and by 1974 had moved into permanent quarters in Boulder, Colorado.

The Rolf Institute has become the training and certifying organization for practitioners of "Rolfing" or "Rolfers" as they are known. Because the work of Rolfing was unique and outside existing categories of state licensing, Dr. Rolf and her students agreed to control their work and their professional standards themselves. To accomplish this, the names "Rolfing" and "Rolfer" were registered with the U.S. patent office as descriptive of the work developed by Ida Rolf and controlled by the Rolf Institute. A community of her students carry on her work, both within and outside of the Rolf Institute. They continue to develop her ideas, to refine their techniques, and, as a community and as individuals, to further explore what can be done to promote the conscious evolution of our bodies.

Dr. Rolf preserved her scientific orientation throughout her career and through the Rolf Institute conducted research into the effects of "Rolfing." Research done at Agnews State Hospital with Dr. Julian Silverman, at Rancho De Los Amigos Hospital in Los Angeles with Dr. Margaret Jones, and at U.C.L.A. with Dr. Valerie Hunt all evidence that her work produces demonstrable, beneficial change. She was known for her commitment to the concrete during a period when the energies of expansion threatened to loosen many from their moorings.

The accomplishments of Ida Rolf and Rolfing are significant. 250 practitioners have been trained and they have "Rolfed" over 150,000 people throughout the United States and Europe. An organization has been created that provides a creative learning community for Rolfers and upholds their professional standards. Preliminary research has been done to demonstrate and explore the effects of Rolfing. All this has been initiated and inspired by a woman who, after working largely unnoticed for 40 years, began this process in her 7th decade.

The reputation of Rolfing has been colorful and the press has done much to emphasize the dramatic aspects of the work. Throughout it all, however, there has seldom been a question as to the efficacy of Rolfing. Dr. Moshe Feldenkrais wrote to Dr. Rolf on her 81st birthday, "You are a woman of your word. What you have said you would do, you have done."

There is still much to do. As many of the techniques and theories of the human potential movement are assimilated into the culture and put to use, there is a need to be mindful of first principles and to assure that the knowledge gained is put to good use. As we make yet another cultural transition, it is important that we place these useful techniques in an appropriate cultural setting that will preserve their integrity and encourage their use by as many as will benefit from them.

There is now the opportunity of carrying these ideas and techniques into the more broadly based social context of preventive health care that seems to be the outgrowth of the human potential movement. It is here that the idea of conscious evolution, personal responsibility, and non-symptom oriented care can make a contribution. This is a process in which we are all involved.

. . .somatic platonism perceives, evaluates, and works with the individual human body by comparison to some idealized design.

Somatic Platonism

Platonism refers to a way of thinking about the world which has permeated human history at all levels of society from the peasant thinking about the significance of his life to the rulers of nations plotting the manipulation of world politics. Classically formulated by Plato (who was a radical critic of his own position), it is a tendency to consider the concrete, singular, tangible objects of our experience to be deficient, "unreal" instances of a more perfect world which transcends our senses. The location of this world was uncertain for Plato; existed in the creative mind of God for the medieval theologians; and, since Immanuel Kant, has been more popularly located in the minds of idealistic human beings.

The specific form of somatic platonism perceives, evaluates, and works with the individual human body by comparison to some idealized design. This type of thinking pervades most of the contemporary schools of somatic therapy, including some, like bioenergetics, which claim to reject it.

One day during a class for senior Rolfers some years ago, Ida Rolf asked us to strip to our underwear and stand together in front of her. As she looked at the ten of us, her shoulders began to droop and her expression became sad. "What a mess," she said, "there's not a one of you in this room whose feet are right." I remember sharing her sadness, feeling depressed that after all the years of working on my body and of being a successful therapist, I still wasn't anywhere near being "correct." At that moment it mattered little to the ten of us that we had all lived relatively fulfilling lives (most of us were over 40) and that our bodies worked unusually well. And it mattered little to Dr. Rolf that she had made a profound contribution to our lives, and, through us, to the lives of our clients. We were all sad because our feet just weren't right.

Our feet were not right because they did not look like the ideal developed by Dr. Rolf symbolized by the "blocked boy" which is the logo of the Rolf Institute. This abstract design does not exist anywhere in the world of fleshy, sweaty feet: a fact which displeases somatic platonists. It exists only in pen-and-ink drawings and in the mental activity of people thinking about this ideal. Other abstract designs exist in relation to which faithful disciples judge themselves and others to be "right," "balanced," "sexually responsive," or, by contrast, "blocked," "out of line," "a mess," "not really human." Sharing with Dr. Rolf the attempt to develop a precise design for an upright body integrated with gravity, one finds such people as F. Matthias Alexander and Bess Mensendieck. Finding these spines too rigid, the founders of bioenergetics, Lowen and Keleman, developed another ideal based on the infantile body: protruding abdomen, loose jaw, bent knees, tilted pelvis. Each metaphysical tradition in the East—the different forms of yoga, Taoism, Zen Buddhism, etc.—teaches a characteristic model towards which its somatic practices are oriented.

These various ideals, though different from each other, sometimes radically and contentiously, are based on a characteristic mode of thinking about the body which has these qualities: (1) the ideal is the same for all, (2) the ideal is a specifically designed, visual representation. It is what might be called an idealism of content or image, in contrast to a healthy idealism of process or function. One can have as his goal, say, the ideal spine as designed by Alexander, or simply the goal of having a more flexible spine. The first goal is visually oriented, external to the person; the second is more internal, coming from a person's experience of his or her unused possibilities.

Somatic platonism in current therapeutic practice is subject to several criticisms:

(1) Like its religious and moral counterparts, somatic idealism provides a constant backdrop of invalidation for human life. We are never quite right: there's always a vertebra out here, a hip slightly out there. Life is not thought of as a sloppy process involving stress, nourishment, anger, joy, depression, pleasure. It's rather thought of as an ever more futile attempt to become like X, to act like Y, with gravity, indolence, and egoistic passion winning the day. The experience of lack is so strong that it blinds one, like Ida Rolf looking at our feet, to the rich complexity of modest achievement.

(2) At the level of practice, somatic platonism hinders perception. Rolfers, Alexander teachers, bioenergeticists, and others see not my body, but the body as defined by their particular viewpoint. Even to approach a purified perception of what is requires a long discipline in clarifying the egoistic barriers that separate us from the other person. An idea of how the other person should look is a major barrier to this process.

(3) The narrowing of perception which flows from somatic platonism is coupled with a rigidity of therapeutic practice. A creative, unpredictable response to this person's unique being here and now is replaced by a recipe applicable to all.

(4) In a similar way, these approaches contribute to rigidity of behavior. In place of immediate organic responses to new situations, one's behavior is constantly mediated by ideas of how one should look. Bioenergetic disciples are careful not to lock their knees or tighten their bellies. Rooms of Rolfers convey the stillness and rigidity of a group of people trying to be as tall and symmetrical as they possibly can. Even the responses to deep energy release during therapeutic sessions are mediated by the somatic ideal: there are predictable responses of people in primal therapy which differ from those involved in co-counseling, different again from practitioners of zazen.

(5) At its most dangerous limit, somatic platonism, like its more generalized form, is a tool both for political and personal power. The somatic ideal divides an elite who understand and work towards it from those who don't, especially from those who can't.

The founder of a contemporary school of body movement has designed a model of the body which is specific to the point of dictating an ideal location in space for each part of the body for each movement. One day I proposed to him this case of a young girl with whom I've worked for several years, who has cerebral palsy. When she first came to me at seven years old, she had great difficulty doing the simplest things: writing, walking, playing simple games. Her teachers frequently complained about her behavior in school. I sensed in her an unusually loving and brilliant spirit. Over a period of four years of working with me and a number of other therapists, she skis, skate-boards, plays the piano, and does well in school. But, I say to the founder of this school of body movement, she doesn't look anything like your ideal, nor will she ever. He looked at me with a poignant smile and replied, "We must realize that certain people are not fully human."

In the somatics community we have outstanding examples of a different epistemology. Moshe Feldenkrais teaches not how the body should look, but how to discover what the range of possibilities are for this body. The tradition originated by Elsa Gindler, spread by her pupils Charlotte Selver, Magda Proskauer, and Carola Speads, is a monument to the innate wisdom of the organism and its abilities to discover and heal itself. At a time when the very existence of the planet is threatened by the clash of various ideologies, these men and women stand with those who witness the beauty of simplicity of perception and modesty of goal against the various manifestations of megalomania. For centuries powerful minorities have manipulated the mass of humanity in the name of exalted moral and religious ideals. Our own life-span contains a long list of results of the attempts to create some sort of superior race. It is no service to humanity to participate in this madness even at the basic level of moving connective tissue.

Changing Education ~ Let's Do It!

Fantasy Headline:
Chrysler Corporation Turned Into A Family University

The Chrysler Corporation will be turned into a University of All Ages. The corporation will become the "UNIVERSITY FOR INVENTIVE MECHANICS." Many of the former Chrysler employees will become the faculty for the University. The products, forms, and structures of UFIM are among the basics of the curriculum. For its first five years of life it will be funded by the Rockefeller Foundation, the est Hunger Project, several very generous private donations, and tuition. At the end of the first five-year period it will then be evaluated as to whether it will remain a non-profit establishment or change to profit making. It may incorporate both.

Can you visualize the above? Can you visualize walking into the plant? Everything is still—nothing turned on. Tools and furnishings are in a ready position. Former employees, with skill and patience, await your questions and are available for skill counseling and guidance. Can you imagine all the different departments? Where would you go? What would capture your imagination, your spirit to explore what you have never done before? How does it work?

In attempting to make school interesting, all sorts of things were jammed into the classroom and ripped from their context. The situation gradually became distorted and expensive as well as exclusive of the resources of the surrounding community. These resources were not only excluded but in time became invisible. NOW is the time to SEE the many sources existing in the local communities that can provide learning with substance, content, and a context.

Technology is not going away, but certainly it can be used differently. The community as an ACTIVE, VIABLE learning field is there to be seen and used; children and young adults moving in and out as apprentices—a very respectful way to learn. There is a local center to coordinate schedules and transportation. There is a local center to be used for abstracting and researching. Reading is not a difficult skill to acquire. It is difficult and harmful when we create blocks and inhibitors, when the content and context is irrevelent to the experiential knowledge of the child learning.

The ways in which children receive information in public schools is very often boring, for most of those ways are not immediate. The information cannot be returned to expressive energy, it is put on HOLD. Many children have difficulty with the "hold" pattern. It is a constipating system. (Think of the billions of dollars spent on "Preparation H" and "Ex-Lax.")

Children need to translate information immediately, exploring it, taking it apart, shaking it, banging it, tasting it, and touching it. They need to then return to the local center for digesting time, assimilation time, reflection/selection. After abstracting experiences, it's back to the action of more direct exploration. In all the schedules, time is provided for struggling with concepts, context, and content.

Children learn to read in many different ways.

Within the last few decades more and more areas of learning have been removed from their living context and put into "the classroom." Children were confined, incapsulated, and some incarcerated. The dreamer was punished and the energetic labled for "cure." They were gradually NOT welcomed into the community. Shortly after birth they were put away into the nursery. Strangers abounded.

ISOLATION BECOMES A PROBLEM AMONG TEENAGERS. Children protected out of "life," contained, detained, retained in "school." Some learned to be controlled. Some fought their way out and became addicted to fighting. Some spent a great deal of time looking for control in some bizarre ways. Some would do anything to belong, to be held.

There was a time when children learned by working along side adults. They saw, they experienced, and felt the abilities of skilled people. Then there were abuses to children in sweatshops, with few choices for the children. Some imagined choices, stored their anger, and used it later, some for "good" and some for "bad." Our "solution" to the abuses of schedules: children should not work, they should go to school, come home, do more school work or take special lessons, take out the garbage, set the table, and get allowances.

Removing direct experience removes the ability to evaluate, reflect, select, elect. Many young people without these abilities follow strange paths to gain "experience." Young people with no experience in selection are highly susceptable to suggestion. They have no background for healthy skepticism and questioning. We made school a place where the student was to "know" instead of LEARN. We made school pure and safe.

Some children have ended up with no ability to evaluate, following strange and tragic paths, and parents who had imagined "doing all the right things" have ended in grief and confusion. Experience relates to the "self" and we are now coming out of the "self-only search" period. The time has come to put that "self" into a context that contains life. Children are always in relationship to an environment. As long as we refuse to respect differences in living approaches and abilities we will continue a tacit support of violence.

Discipline is learned side by side with children experiencing themselves as PART of the picture and not in isolation within a "holding tank."

The socialization process of children is the context for the content and the major process in the creation of the quality of the future.

Gently teaching the use of the word "NO."
The giving and the receiving.
It is a very valid word
Without no
The yes—eludes and deludes.

Ways of Being at Esalen

There are various ways to experience Esalen, ranging from a visit to the hot springs on a week-night to a long-term stay as a student or resident. The weekend and five-day workshops described throughout the catalog are the standard route for coming to Esalen and learning the various methods of personal growth and self-exploration that are available here. The Experiencing Esalen workshops are a kind of smorgasbord introduction to some of these many practices (such as gestalt, massage, sensory awareness, etc.), from such a sampling, the participant can then choose that approach which feels most appropriate and pursue it in subsequent seminars. For those who wish an extended stay of a month or more, there is an Ongoing Residence Program. Other long-term programs include the "month-longs" coordinated by individuals such as Stan Grof, Al Drucker, and David Schiffman, which frequently involve didactic seminars as well as experiential workshops. These can be particularly useful for professionals and graduate students.

A very popular way of being at Esalen, and one that allows a much greater involvement with the place and its community at a lower expense, is the Work-Study Program, which entails working with the Esalen staff as well as participating in an on-going workshop designed specifically for that program. See page 12 for more information and an application form.

In addition, there are other events which enrich life at Esalen. There are frequent forums where various writers and thinkers, both visiting and resident, share their ideas with the community. On Wednesday nights, there are lectures, films, dance performances, choirs, puppet shows, or other forms of entertainment. Bodywork of various kinds is available by appointment with individual practitioners, including massage, deep-tissue, polarity, and rolfing. Individual sessions are also available for various types of process work, including gestalt, neo-reichian emotional release, vision-improvement, music gestalt, etc. Finally, there is a Community Workshop program which goes on daily, and provides many opportunities for engaging in personal self-exploration or learning new approaches to human growth.

The Bateson Seminars Series

The uniqueness of Gregory Bateson's thought came from its broad range and its generality. In an age characterized by fragmentation and over-specialization, Bateson challenged the basic assumptions and methods of several sciences by looking for patterns behind patterns and for processes beneath structures. He declared that relationship should be the basis of all definition and his main aim was to discover the principles of organization in all the phenomena he observed—"the pattern which connects," as he would put it. The seminar leaders in this series share and express in their own work Gregory's holistic and dynamic vision of reality, his ecological perspectives, and his social concerns. Each of them knew Gregory and his work in a unique way, and each has brought original insights to bear on the questions and issues which were at the center of Gregory's life. More such seminars are planned and ideas are welcomed.

In his poem "The Manuscript," Gregory said: "And if you read between the lines/You will find nothing there/There should be nothing there/For that is the discipline I ask/Not more, not less." He saw it as inevitable that the ramifications of his thought would be considered and debated by those who came after him. Yet he called upon us to bear "the lonely Skeleton of Truth" in its precision and stark simplicity. This workshop series is dedicated to the kind of clear-headed exploration which Gregory embodied and which his legacy demands.

Mind, Matter, and Consciousness

What is matter made of? What is the relation between mind and matter? What is consciousness? This seminar will discuss some new concepts provided by modern science to answer these age-old questions. The discussion will begin with the holistic and dynamic view of matter implied by subatomic physics and will then be expanded to include the emerging systems view of living organisms and some recent developments in psychology. Gregory Bateson's concept of mind will be central to the whole discussion. $200

Nature, Mind, and Consciousness: Gregory Bateson and the New Paradigm

In this seminar, we will explore the scientific contributions and personal philosophy of Gregory Bateson, one of the most original thinkers of our time. After reviewing his "double bind" theory of schizophrenia and analysis of psychotherapy, hypnosis, and ritual, we will focus on his more recent ideas about nature and evolution. Special attention will be paid to those aspects of Gregory's work in which he formulated concepts that are now being supported by new developments in quantum-relativistic physics and modern consciousness research. We will use material from Gregory's books, his contributions to our Esalen month-long seminars, and insights gained from several years of personal friendship. $200

The Rhythms of Relationship

"At the heart of each of us," George Leonard writes in The Silent Pulse, "there exists a silent pulse of perfect rhythm, a complex of wave forms and resonances, which is absolutely individual and unique, and yet which connects us to everything in the universe. The act of getting [illegible] with this pulse can transform our personal experience and in some way alter the world around us." In this workshop, Leonard will explore the Batesonian concept of relationship in terms of polonomy (that which is discrete and unique in every individual) and holonomy (that which is universal to every individual). Discussion of this subject will be augmented by visualization exercises and simple movement experiences. $200

The Work-Study Program

The Work-Study Program is for those who are interested in immersion in the total environment of Esalen/Big Sur. It is a work-oriented program, emotionally and physically, and only rarely is it restful. There will be a coming together in the evenings to share, contact, play — alone/together. Professional services such as massage and rolfing are available at staff rates.

Participants make a commitment to work 32 hours per week in such areas as gardening, landscaping, the farm, maintenance, kitchen, and cabins. No participants will be accepted as work scholars in Gazebo until they have fulfilled a minimum of one month in one of the aforementioned departments. Scheduling consideration is given to the community labor needs, and work assignments are made according to these requirements. The cost of the program is $500 for the first month, $450 for the second month, and $400 for the third. A $250 deposit is required with your application.

Accommodations are shared, with up to three people to a room, usually at South Coast Center, a staff living complex which is 1½ miles north of Esalen. The Work-Study Program, lasting 28 days, is a full time workshop in itself. The work commitment to the community, group process work, and teaching seminar makes up a busy schedule for participants. Enrolling in the Esalen catalog workshops is therefore discouraged, since the extra involvement tends to interfere with the fulfillment of the Work-Study Program.

Available dates: October 4-November 1; November 1-November 29; November 29-December 27; December 27-January 24; January 24-February 21; February 21-March 21; March 28-April 25; April 25-May 23; May 23-June 20; June 20-July 18; July 18-August 15; etc.

In addition to the regular program, Esalen is now offering an intensive three-month course in basic organic horticulture. The cost of the program will be $1350. A $350 deposit is required. In filling out the Work-Study application, please indicate your preference of landscaping, gardening, or small scale farming.

NOTE: This application is not a registration in the program. Registration is made only after approval of application and upon receipt of deposit. Please return this form with $250 (or $350) deposit to:

Work-Study Program, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California 93920. Telephone: (408) 667-2335.

The balance of the fee is due on arrival. $75 of the original deposit is non-refundable, and may be transferred to other Esalen programs within one year of receipt of deposit.

Esalen Seminars

Experiencing Esalen

Experiencing Esalen Staff
Coordinated by Janet Zuckerman Boeve

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificence of the Big Sur coast.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls).

Gestalt Practice

Esalen Gestalt Staff
Coordinated by Christine Price

The Way, when declared
Seems so thin and flavorless.
Nothing to look at, nothing to hear—
And used—is inexhaustible.
—Lao Tzu

Gestalt is as old as the world.
—Fritz Perls*

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not patients but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The leader functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is enfoldment, wholeness, growth, rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment.

Although open seat work is the primary form of this practice, guided fantasy, breath meditations, and movement sessions may be included. Each gestalt practice group will have a member of the Esalen gestalt staff as its primary leader. Other leaders may be involved in single sessions.

Suggested reading: Gestalt Therapy Verbatim (Perls); Tao Te Ching (Lao Tzu); The Power of Mindfulness (Nyanponika Thera); Exploring the Crack in the Cosmic Egg (J.C. Pearce); Illusions (Richard Bach).

Weekend of May 1-3

The Emergent Paradigm
Jay Ogilvy & Peter Schwartz

How do you filter the information you need to live? Like contact lenses you can't take off, a paradigm effects the way you see—and the way you think and feel. More universal than a model, less conscious than an explicit worldview, a paradigm colors one's entire experience of self and world. We believe our culture is undergoing a shift of paradigms. Traditional patterns of meaning and order are crumbling. We have been exploring common patterns of change across thirteen different disciplines from art to chemistry, philosophy to biology. We see a new pattern emerging, one that makes sense and gives coherence to apparently fragmented lives. Chemical and biological systems generate higher order from apparent disorder. Political and religious systems sometimes function better with several centers. We will summarize evidence for a polycentric paradigm, then explore its meaning for relationships, for work, for play, for the business of being human. $170

Movement and Transformation
Nitza Broide Miller

Movement is change and change requires movement. In this workshop we will experience movement as a process of becoming and accepting fully who we are. We can begin to sense the impasses in our bodies. We will explore ways to appreciate the ancient wisdom of our body memory and to utilize its knowledge to release energy and restore strength. Movement can facilitate transformation through time and space and can teach us how to channel our energies toward meeting life's demands more effectively. Through guided movement, music, and imagery, we can learn to become more sensitive to the internal freedom of our bodies and to become more attuned to our interactions with the outer reality. $170

Exploring Self-Acceptance
David Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self-concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter methods, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $170

Spiritual Healing
Alan Young

This workshop will be experiential, and will answer such questions as:

What is spiritual healing? How does it work?
Why isn't everyone healed? What are the inner causes of disease?
How can we discover the underlying cause in each case?
How can I help my own healing? How can I develop the ability to be a channel for the healing of others?

It will include exercises in sensing the energy radiating from your own body, and from that of others. It will culminate in a demonstration healing in which all will be invited to participate.

The workshop is designed to interest: (a) Those who want to learn about healing themselves, or at least assist in the healing process; (b) Those who wish to become a channel for the healing of others; and (c) Those who want to learn more about spiritual healing as a matter of interest or personal growth. $170

Integrity David Schiffman In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will, and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength, and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical, and mental potentials and how they affect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others. $350

Experiencing the Esalen Garden
Sherry Ackerson & the Esalen Garden The focus of this workshop will be the experience of nurturing and being nurtured by the earth and her plant life. During the day, specific methods for gardening, including plantings, bed preparations, and composting, will be taught. We will also learn the healing aspects of herbs, and enjoy an herbal bath. Our evenings will include guided fantasy, meditation, drawings, and movement. Come and celebrate the gentle dance of earth, air, sunlight, water, and our bodies in our year-round organic vegetable garden.

Since much emphasis is on experiencing what we learn, make sure to bring overalls and workboots. $350

Attachment and Separation: Loving and Letting Go
George Kohlrieser Life involves a series of attachments and separations. This experiential workshop will focus on attachments—parents, family, children, spouses, lovers, places, things—and the corresponding grief reactions to separation. Life energy is connected to the quality and depth of emotional contact. Depression is a signal that something is wrong in the attachment system, and burn-out occurs when people are negatively attached or cannot attach to either people or goals.

Joy is the physiological and psychological outcome of positive emotional attachments, and the unresolved grief of past separations can interfere with making new attachments and the experience of joy. Saying hello can only occur after saying goodbye. Patterns of attachment and separation learned in childhood, including symbiotic relationships, will be identified and related to how participants make attachments and separate in the here and now. The formation and celebration of positive emotional attachments and the emotional resolution of past separations will be encouraged within the supportive atmosphere of the group. $350

Weekend Massage Intensive
Esalen Massage Practitioners We will assist you in acquiring the basic tools you will need to begin to explore massage. By demonstrating for you and practicing with you it is our intent to introduce you to the major muscle sets of the body and to help you to establish a sense of an effective beginning, development, and closing of a full-body massage. Emphasis will be on our own grounding and internal awareness, on learning to recognize the areas in ourselves and others that need relief, and on learning to be aware of the quality of our own touch. $170

A Course in Miracles: A New Thought Form for Our Time
Julian Silverman This seminar is concerned with an understanding of A Course in Miracles—a formulation of a wholesome way to be in the world:

without attack and defense,
without negative emotions,
without the feeling of being separated from one's source.

The Course specifies a practice as well as a conceptual model. It elevates one's self worth by teaching total self-responsibility. $170

It teaches health.

Being Healthy is More Than Not Being Sick: A Workshop in Holistic Health
Sandra & Emmett Miller A modern attitude toward health and wellness involves recognizing the interplay between our self-image, our emotional state, our relationships, and our health. Symptoms are thus used as guides to direct our awareness to aspects of our lifestyles which need attention.

High level wellness can be said to have been reached when symptoms become fewer and fewer. Wellness is maintained through regular applications of the principles of selective awareness, deep relaxation, aerobic exercise, rest, and proper nutrition. Moreover, these principles are used in such a manner as to produce continuous personal growth—mentally, physically, emotionally, and spiritually.

We'll begin by using simple techniques for evaluations of our present level of wellness. We will then explore the concepts of high level wellness, and learn ways to develop and maintain it through balancing and attuning mind, body, emotions, and spirit. We'll also explore the use of deep relaxation, mental imagery, and movement to unstress and to project a positive self-image and a lifestyle of high level wellness. This workshop is designed for those who enjoy guided imagery and dance movement. $170

Tools for Transformation of Self and Society
Donald Keys In this workshop we will use group discussion, guided fantasy, lecture presentations, and meditation to bring to our awareness specific ways in which we can begin and continue the process of personal transformation and the transformation of our society. Among the topics we will discuss are: the ways of transforming society; the role of communities and new age organizations such as the Findhorn Foundation; and the special role of the United Nations in the world community. $170 + $5 for reading material

Massage and Movement
Esalen Massage Practitioners

In our daily massage sessions we gently nudge our bodies and hands back to sense-ability, clearing up old energy blockages, restoring spontaneity. We share with you the tools that have worked for us in our many years of massage practice.

Through movement we explore our dynamic support structures and how we relate to our environment as we move more freely into our own life dance. We blend the basics of t'ai chi, structural awareness, and contact improvisation to stretch our self-perception. $350

Surrender to Self
Merri Goldenson (Devarani)
John Majuri
& Vivian Gary

Inside each of us there lives a free, loving, creative, and spontaneous child. Our life histories and repressed feelings of anger, fear, sorrow, and pain are locked in our body armor. Our focus in this workshop will be to discover new ways we can soften, let go, and surrender to ourselves.

In a supportive and safe environment we will utilize individual reichian intensives, group interaction, bioenergetics, imagery, hypnosis, dance, and massage. We can, once again, feel the flow of our sexual energy and the harmony of our being. $350

Beyond Ego: Transpersonal Dimensions in Psychology
Frances Vaughan
& Roger Walsh

Transpersonal psychology is concerned with the farther reaches of human nature, especially optimum health and wellbeing. As concepts of mental health have expanded, the study of consciousness has assumed a central place in the theory of human behavior. A comprehensive transpersonal framework is now emerging for the first time. Since an intellectual understanding of the field is dependent upon an adequate experiential basis, this workshop will offer participants a combination of theoretical and experiential approaches to consciousness research. Personal practice in consciousness disciplines is stressed as essential to both self-knowledge and conceptualization in transpersonal realms.

In this five day period we will explore the roots of wellbeing in consciousness, seeking a balance between inner and outer experience, utilizing both Eastern and Western techniques for deepening awareness. We will examine the process of transformation from both philosophical and practical standpoints, giving participants an opportunity to practice and apply mindfulness and other skills that facilitate assuming responsibility and relinquishing limiting beliefs in both personal meditation and interpersonal communication and interaction. $350

Sogyal Rinpoche

In the nature of mind, which is the all-encompassing space, like the clear, limitless sky, a complete realization arises that enlightenment is naturally self-existing within us. As this basic intelligence spontaneously awakens, one recognizes that thoughts are but the play of clouds, simply happening there. Free.

This is the perspective of Dzogchen, the ultimate teaching of Buddha, the heart essence of Padmasambhava, which even welcomes chaos and neuroses as nourishment for its indestructible sanity. $170

Songs of Innocence, Songs of Experience
Nancy Kaye Lunney

This weekend is a voyage into song for people who want to sing but are afraid or worried about what others think, for shower singers and choir members who dream of hitting the big time, as well as for accomplished singers who want to improve their performance. Piano accompaniment and video feedback will be part of a supportive environment for self-expression. Bring your own favorite song titles or choose from a variety at Esalen. Most important, bring your own styles, your voices, and a willingness to explore your creative potential. Each of us has a song to sing and the courage to share it with others. $170

Opening Feelings: A Path to Consciousness
Clair Killen

As individuals in a group we watch each other, we project, we displace, we watch ourselves, we identify, we play, and we create an environment of relative trust.

Using radix neo-reichian emotional release methods, movement, meditation, and massage we experience our body armor, we discover ways we control our lives, we feel alive, we have fun, and we consider new choices for living. $350

Pleasure, Sensuality, and Your Body
Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact and nurturing, sensitive giving, and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together, feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean, and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $350

T'ai Chi Chih
Catherine Elber

T'ai chi chih was first presented to the public in 1974. Easier than t'ai chi ch'uan, these simple motions allow us to recreate in ourselves the essence of an ancient gift long practiced in secrecy. The essence of balancing and blending our inner and outer life allows qualities to bloom. The beneficial effects of this motion encompass our existence in a deeply personal unfoldment, encouraging physical health and grace, and mental peace and clarity. $350

The Shamanic Journey and Healing: An Experiential Workshop
Michael Harner

The shamanic journey is one of the most ancient visionary methods used by humankind to enter nonordinary reality and explore the hidden universe otherwise known mainly through myth and dream. Participants will undergo an experiential initiation into the journey, aided by traditional drumming and dancing. Using the spirit canoe and other methods, they will learn how the shaman's journey can be used to restore power and health, to acquire knowledge, and to solve personal problems. Participants will be introduced to shamanic seeing, to shamanic interaction with the powers of nature, and to the practical application of shamanism in their daily lives. $170

Put Your Memories, Fantasies, and Dreams to Work for You: A Reichian/Gestalt Approach to Energy Release
Joan Fiore
& Jeffrey Kent

"To understand is to tremble. To recollect is to reenter and to be riven."—Harold Brodkey

This workshop focuses on releasing the energy locked in our memories, fantasies, and dreams so that this energy can be made available for present relationships and life situations in a way that makes our existence in the present less encumbered by unfinished business of the past as well as self-programmed, self-fulfilling prophecies of doom for the future. First priority is on intensive intrapersonal work in a supportive group setting. There will also be opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $350

A Workshop in Creative Movement
Anna Halprin
& Daria Halprin-Khaligi

"The fact that there has always been dance compels us to accept it as an old, deeply rooted human activity whose foundations reside in the nature of human beings. It will continue as long as the rhythmic flow of energy operates, and until man/woman ceases to respond to the forces of life and the universe. As long as there is life, there will be dance."—Margaret H. Doubler

This workshop is designed to inspire and guide an exploration through movement and dance of one's own life resources and themes. The learning process will be aimed at integrating emotional and physical expression, utilizing dance, and also incorporating gestalt principles and visualization exercises. Learning principles of movement ritual will be an important focus. The development and expansion of personal and group creativity as a way of promoting health, increasing communication skills, and facilitating change is the intention of this workshop.

Recommended Readings: Movement Ritual I, by Anna Halprin, available at Esalen bookstore. Collected Writings II, by Anna Halprin, available by writing the San Francisco Dancers Workshop, 321 Divisadero Street, San Francisco, Ca. 94117. $350

Choosing to Change
Harry Sloan

Changing is discovering that something new is trying to emerge and integrating that next step into our daily lives. In this process we often encounter parts of ourselves that do not nourish change. We resist, either by preventing ourselves from seeing beyond where we are, or by blocking ourselves from integrating and expressing the next step.

In an atmosphere of tenderness and humor, this workshop will combine individual work with discussion of principles and concepts which nourish the process of change. Personal work will stress deepening awareness of our own unique sense of direction and the obstacles in the way. We will focus on learning to allow change through exploring the implications of our choices and seeing how we retard or encourage the expression of our emerging self.

The basic approach will include psychosynthesis and transpersonal and cathartic methods which emphasize learning, and developing skills and tools to release and transform blocked energies. Our purpose together will be to align our motivation and will with the natural process of change and integration. $350

& Fred Boeve

This workshop is designed to encourage both of you to express all the pent-up negative, hostile, and abrasive energies you have bottled up in your bodies—non-verbally—so that you can make room for all the joy, caring, and nurturing you're entitled to as a couple sharing some of your life together. $170 per participant

Close Encounters: An Experiment in Meeting and Contacting Other Human Beings
Joan Fiore
& Jeffrey Kent

This workshop provides an opportunity for you to pay attention to the quality of your interpersonal contact, particularly to your willingness to take risks and to your ability to stay true to your own feelings while meeting and contacting others.

You may discover your own rhythm of contact and withdrawal; you may discover how you sabotage yourself from having more satisfying relationships; you may discover you're getting exactly what you want from your relationships. You may discover anything; you may discover nothing. You may even discover that you're in charge. $170

The Esselens
Malcolm Margolin

The Esselens were the Indian people whose villages once dotted the Big Sur Coast. In this seminar we will imaginatively reconstruct life in these villages. We will visualize living in rush-covered houses among grizzly bears, antelopes, bald eagles, and wolves. We will imagine relating to a world in which trees, stones, and other "objects" had power and intelligence, and in which the deer we hunted were seen as a kind of "people." We will imagine growing up in a society almost without strangers and in a landscape so intimately known that every large rock and prominent tree had a name and story attached to it. We will tell the stories and sing the songs that once moved the Indian people of Central California. We will also discuss religion, shamanism, art, population control, tribal politics, humor, games, childrearing, and the question of how a quarrelsome people managed to live for hundreds of years without major warfare. $170

Opening to Creativity: A Gestalt Workshop
Nancy Kaye Lunney

This workshop is for those who have a desire to create something, yet are stopped by self-criticism, frustration, or fear. The focus of these five days will be on developing the awareness and confidence which are necessary for free flowing creativity. Using gestalt process we can uncover negative programs which may be inhibiting creative expression. Individual projects in music, writing, drawing, or movement can be developed during the workshop based on each person's major interest. The emphasis, however, is not on "production," but on self-awareness; not on the project, but on the person doing it. $350

Zero Balancing Fritz Smith

Zero balancing is a body handling system utilizing structural acupressure to deal directly with the interface between body structure and energy flow. The workshop will be both didactic and experiential.

Traditional anatomy, physiology, and kinesiology will be reviewed and then reinterpreted from an alternative viewpoint indicating the often overlooked imbalances which occur within our foundation joints. These imbalances may lead to chronic body pain, and frequently represent an ongoing energy drain from the body. Based on laws of nature, zero balancing is both a pleasure to give and to receive, and results seen are immediate, gratifying, and often inspiring, with seemingly little effort on our part. While there will be both theoretical presentations and practical demonstrations, the main emphasis of the workshop will be toward individual instruction. This workshop is limited to persons certified in the healing profession. $350

Energy Awareness and Personal Transformation
George Leonard

In the world of energy awareness, problems become opportunities and pain becomes a gift of energy. Through simple movement exercises, we practice centering, relaxation, and blending, and learn alternative ways of dealing with conflict and stress. To quote The Ultimate Athlete, "Simply by considering possibilities commonly ignored by our culture, we find ourselves in a far more fascinating universe. We discover adventures that do not require the burning of fuel or the rape of the planet: sensing the energy field of a friend or a tree, making connections that defy conventional space and time . . . We realize, with the sorcerer don Juan, that our world is awesome, mysterious, and unfathomable, and that our life is filled to the brim and altogether too short." $170

Advanced Massage Intensive
Esalen Massage Practitioners

Whether your massage experience is professional or avocational, our aims in this course are to take you deeper into your own work and to provide whatever instruction we can to add to your understanding of the body and to your repertoire of techniques. In addition to morning and afternoon practice sessions with various instructors, we will use yoga, movement, evening lectures and discussions, and demonstrations of specific practices to stimulate ourselves out of our old patterns of working and increase the range of conditions with which we can deal effectively.

The following concerns will receive emphasis: how to sustain your energy through a day of treatments; how to clear yourself of the negative energy released by your client; how to use weight and leverage to your advantage; and so on. As we reach more and more deeply into one another, emotional changes can be triggered by the unravelling of blocked muscular energy. As these emotions present themselves, they will provide us with some first-hand practice in productive ways of moving through them.

The format and pace of this course will presume some previous massage experience—at least an introductory five-day intensive or its equivalent in your own practice. $350

Body Memory: Your Historical, Unique Dance
Nitza Broide Miller

Each one of us is born with a unique body, with which we perceive the world. All our experiences are stored in our bodies. Experiences of joy, pain, fear, anger, sadness, excitement are an integral part of our daily life. Some of these feelings are expressed freely while others are hidden and become part of our repressed history.

In this workshop we'll renew the dialogue with our history. Through visualization, effortless movement, and gentle touch we shall draw on the body memory; we'll allow this stored energy to move through us, enriching our lives and enhancing our tender, sensual, playful selves in a joyful and trusting way. $350

Opening the Feelings
Dale Cummings

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this workshop. We will be employing radix neo-reichian methods of emotional release, the most important of which is the radix intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting, which can provide a lot of emotional support among participants. Grief or pain, fear and rage that have been held in since childhood can emerge. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he or she may discover a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. In time the sexual experience may change as feelings of tenderness and sexual feelings intensify and merge. $350

A Psychic Training Program
Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training methods to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years' experience in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their styles and trust the psychic input they normally receive. One of the basic objectives of the workshop is to de-mystify the intuitive/psychic process and train you to use it in all areas of your life—personal, professional, and spiritual. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $350

The Reality of the Self: Eastern and Western Perspectives on Human Identity
Theodore Roszak & Philip Whalen

One of the most puzzling questions dividing Eastern and Western thought is the reality of the self. The differences seem to be radical and irreconcilable. Western philosophy, religion, and psychotherapy teach that there is a unique and immortal soul—or person—in each of us which is meant to be discovered, asserted, and saved. In the Eastern cultures, the self is spoken of as a tragic illusion from which we must be liberated.

Is there a common ground between these views? Where does egotism leave off and authenticity begin? What is the value of originality and creativity? Is the uniqueness of people a delusion or a precious virtue? Does the "story of life" have any important meaning? Does real self-knowledge lead us into the self or beyond the self? $170

Open Psychodrama Encounter
Walt & Mauricia Anderson

This workshop is a flexible weekend's work and play using a variety of encounter, gestalt, and body-movement approaches, with emphasis on psychodrama—the enactment of improvised life scenes as a way of expressing feelings, gaining insight, working through interpersonal conflicts, developing more openness and spontaneity, and having fun. The degree of active involvement is up to the individual. $170

Experiencing Esalen for Health Care Professionals
Coordinated by Polly Kirby

This workshop is designed for health care professionals who have not previously been to Esalen. The emphasis is on experiencing a variety of approaches to self awareness, self care, and new healing modalities. Experience may be grouped in three broad areas: A) Caring for the body, including work in sensory and body awareness, movement, nutrition, and different methods of body work, such as massage, rolfing, deep tissue work, and shiatsu; B) Intra/interpersonal awareness, including exercises in meditation and centering, and gestalt awareness training, and C) Specific health-care-related issues, including values and attitudes about the nature of health and disease, the importance of self-reference and self-responsibility, and the understanding of the nature of human interactions. For additional information see page $350

Let Go/Let Be Betty Fuller

Movement is a primary means to learning about my self, about my relationships with others, and about my place in the universe. This workshop includes physical and mental stress reduction and alignment exercises, guided imagery, nutritional information, and moving meditations, as well as the integrative bodymind approaches of trager, feldenkrais, and rolf-nolte. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual followup are presented. The schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths and participation in the work of the Esalen community. $350

Family Encounters: A Weekend of Family Process for Families in the Process of . . .

Joan Fiore
Jeffrey Kent
& Karin Powlen

This workshop gives each family its own time to explore intrafamilial relationships in a support group of other families similarly engaged. Families participate collectively in an introductory meeting, followed by sessions, each one of which focuses a period of time exclusively on one or another of the families and its process. Limited to 6 families of any persuasion (traditional, single-parent, joint custodied, etc.). See June 21-26 for description of working methods. For scholarship information, contact the Esalen office. $170 per person

Is Your Neck the Bottleneck of Your Energy?

Ruthy Alon

We introduce processes of mindful movements from the feldenkrais method that nurture the body intelligence and make available choices and qualities of coordination that are obscured from us in our culture of pressures and demands.

We re-educate the function of the neck by exploring the relationships of movement patterns throughout the whole body. In its process of ever-needing to adjust, the neck may lose its freedom, compensating for and absorbing tensions and expressions from toe to head. The healing of the neck takes place when a family therapy of the total organism clarifies its interactions in order to bring relief to the sensitive member.

You will experiment with many practical ideas to take home that will support you on a self-care path of gratifying ways of using your body so that your neck may work for you and not against you. $170

You in Your Family/Your Family in You: Five Days of Family Process for Families in the Process of . . .

Joan Fiore
& Jeffrey Kent

This workshop gives each family maximum opportunity to explore intra-familial relationships in a support group of other families similarly engaged. There is time allotted for each family member to work individually and in various combinations within the family, and to relate to, share with, confer with, play with, other families. We address with great respect traditional family structures as well as the many varieties of new forms brought about by divorce, remarriage, step-parenting, single-parenting, joint custody, and by the changing value systems of a changing culture. We use family process, gestalt, encounter, psychodrama, and whatever else works to move toward increasing tolerance, setting limits, and cleaning up communications. We make no issue sacred, including the examination of love as gift or weapon. Limited to 10 families. For scholarship information, contact the Esalen office. $350 per person

Herbs: The Sacraments of Love

Michael Tierra

This seminar is designed to help you learn how to better love and care for yourself and others in a world of increasingly rapid change. You will be shown how to administer herbal therapies, massage, baths, and other purifications for body, mind, and spirit. During leisurely walks through the lush gardens of Esalen and the surrounding forested wilderness we will focus on learning to identify the many common herbs and plants which can be found growing in abundance here. Demonstrations will illustrate traditional methods of gathering, drying, and preparing them for use both as food and medicine. We will share the magic of herbs through storytelling and mythology, and explore the mysteries of herbal preparations: elixirs, aphrodisiacs, extracts, oils, syrups, balms, salves, cosmetics, tinctures, etc. The workshop is appropriate for both the interested lay person and the holistic practitioner. $350

Medical Self-Care: The Role of Health Professionals in Supporting Self-Provided Health Care

Tom Ferguson

About 80% of illness care—and an even higher percentage of preventive care—is self-provided, yet this most important part of our health care system is largely ignored by many health care professionals. Health workers are trained to rely almost entirely on expert-provided interventions.

This workshop will provide an overview of the field of self-care. Topics will include the present extent of self-care, what people can learn to do for themselves, self-care classes, self-diagnostic tests, self-help groups, social support systems, health promotion, self-care in the schools, the literature of self-care, the effectiveness and safety of self-care, self-care in the clinic, dealing with sophisticated medical consumer, the developing technology of self-care, special problems health professionals have in taking care of themselves, and more. Participants will have an opportunity to meet others with similar interests and to share their personal and professional experiences in self-care. For additional information see page 10. $170

Sexual Jealousy and Personal Growth

Ayala Pines
& Elliot Aronson

What is sexual jealousy? Is it a sign of love or an indication of insecurity? What are the reasons for it? How prevalent is it? What are some of the emotional, physiological, and attitudinal reactions to it? What people and what situations are likely to elicit jealousy? What are its negative and positive effects, and—most important—how can it be coped with more effectively? How can we learn more about ourselves by examining our jealous feelings?

These are some of the questions addressed in this workshop. Through lectures, discussions, personal exploration, and role playing, we will explore critical issues related to jealousy, share current information about this subject, and gain a better understanding of it.

This workshop is intended for couples who wish to deal with the issues of jealousy in their relationship, for therapists and marriage counselors, and for individuals who experience jealousy as a personal problem. $170

The Way of the Breath: The Gentle Way
Judyth Weaver
Our breath is the deepest, purest, most vital connection to our core. It is the process that links our consciousness to deeper, more subtle levels, and is the key to many of our emotional, mental, and physical blocks. The breath can also be our most sensitive teacher and our means for understanding and releasing energy blocks and stress patterns.

This workshop will teach a section of the t'ai chi ch'uan form, and focus on how to utilize t'ai chi principles in everyday life as a way of learning the possibilities of gentle exercise. Reichian breathing, jin shin jyutsu, deep sensing, meditations, movement, and massage will also help bring us to a better understanding of our organism's present needs, and allow us balanced use of our own resources. $350

Julian Silverman
"The test of everything on earth is simply this: 'What is it for?' The answer makes it what it is for you. It has no meaning of itself, yet you can give reality to it, according to the purpose that you serve. Here you are but means along with it." from A Course in Miracles, vol. 1, p. 479

The format of this workshop is based upon a model of well being which has three essential components:

The identification and experience of one's point of self—a point of easiness, of no-struggle,

Communication with others through one's point of self, and

The identification of one's core values and the translation of these values into goals and then into programs for attaining these goals.

The workshop is limited to business executives and health professionals who manage fairly large groups of people. For additional information see page 10. $200

The Wisdom of the Body
Peter Levine
Whenever any of us are hurt, we build our own fortress around the wound and thus insulate ourselves against further pain. An armor develops in the muscles of our bodies and breathing becomes controlled to reduce our level of feeling. The strength of these walls depends upon the degree of the hurt. Some fortresses have walls so thin that with a little help we can easily move through them and we are out again. Others are much deeper and have a life and tenacity of their own. They are reflected in rigid roles and are solidified in our bodies as chronic tensions and patterns of bodily attitudes.

We try to break out of these citadels often with intense, even violent force. This can help to restore some sense of feeling, bringing us "out of our heads" and more into our bodies. These emotional explosions can, however, become habitual, even mechanical ways of releasing tension. In this workshop we will explore other avenues toward re-discovering deep softer feelings, pleasure, and self-esteem. So rather than storming our citadels, we will look at softening the body armor, at allowing the body to express itself in its own language within its own rhythm. This return toward grace, which is our birthright, is the wisdom of the body. $200

Self and Beyond
John Zeigler
"... the key is to open a way whence the imprisoned splendor can escape."—Browning
"Love is nature's psychotherapy."—Eric Berne

Come celebrate your limitlessness and restore the original you: loveable, capable, and unscarred by destructive parental/societal belief systems. Invoke a serene and perfect inner self that can give expression to a natural clarity, aliveness, and creativity. We will use a synthesis of intensive body and gestalt work for deep emotional release, self-hypnosis for reprogramming a negative consciousness, and other ancient and modern body/mind/spirit methods. Through supportive group interaction you can experience problems for what they really are: opportunities that can create a spontaneous and unconditional love of self, others, and an abundant universe. Through the options of massage, movement, t'ai chi, music, singing, improvisation, and laughter you can awaken to the miracle you already are. $200

Intimate Relationships: Meeting the Challenge
John Welwood
& Joanne Martin
How can we salvage long-term relationships in a world where their traditional rationale has disintegrated? How can two people continue to grow with each other over a lifetime? We need a new vision of the meaning and challenge of the man/woman relationship for our times—one that includes both Eastern and Western wisdom and that understands love as an unending process of discovering our genuine humanness. This workshop will include both talks and experiential work to explore and clarify what is going on in our relationships and what we really want from them. We will study the dynamics of intimacy—passion, surrender, ambivalence, vulnerability, resonance, struggle, need, compassion, polarity, discipline, mindful sexuality—within a context of relationship as a transformative journey of self-knowledge and wisdom. $200

Transpersonal Psychology: New Approaches to Therapy and Self-Exploration
Christina & Stanislav Grof
We will explore theoretically and experientially the rapidly developing area of transpersonal psychology. Using a combination of controlled breathing, evocative music, body work, and mandala drawing, the participants will have the opportunity to confront various unfinished biographical issues, elements of the death-rebirth process, and the spectrum of transpersonal experiences. This experimentation with powerful new approaches to personality change will be complemented by discussion of a conceptual framework based on modern consciousness research and the world-view emerging from modern physics. Special attention will be paid to the process of kundalini awakening, the concept of spiritual emergency, and to methods of assistance in transpersonal crises. $400

As we explore our innate qualities more fully we can gain a fresh perspective as new possibilities open to us. Participants will be considered as unique individuals in their own process of development, a process to be honored and encouraged for further growth.
The gestalt method is the basis of the work, supported by various body oriented disciplines including sensory awareness, bioenergetics, rolfing, and aikido. $400

A Workshop in Shiatsu Massage: A Holistic Approach to Change

Patricia Caldwell

Shiatsu is the oriental massage art in which the thumbs and hands are used to apply deep, gentle pressure to certain acupuncture points and meridians over the entire body.

We will focus on seeing and treating people as wholes, expanding body awareness through centering practices, and using the body itself as a living portrait, learn to look at, recognize, and take responsibility for the condition (patterning) of one's own body and life experience. Through self-help methods and work with partners we can learn to let go of old physical / emotional / mental patterns and open to the experience of alternative, more flexible ways of being in our bodies and minds.

This workshop will give the student both theoretical and practical knowledge of a complete shiatsu balancing treatment suitable for both personal and professional use. Charts will be provided. $400

"Remote-viewing" is a demystified version of what is sometimes called traveling clairvoyance or out-of-body experience. It is a natural extrasensory perceptual skill which appears to be widely distributed throughout the population. The essence of the remote viewing experience is to form mental images of target situations which are separated from normal sensory contact. Gestalt Synergy: An Integrative Approach to Self Actualization

Ilana Rubenfeld

The sea always has waves . . . waves are the sea . . . sea and waves are one. To speak of waves apart from the sea is a delusion—so mind and body are one!

The focus in this workshop will be on experiencing one's own body and emotions as a total organism. Emotions and memories are often stored in our bodies, resulting in tension and imbalance. A unique blend of gestalt, alexander technique, and feldenkrais exercises will be used as a gateway to contacting, expressing, and working through deep feelings. Massage staff will be on hand to assist the workshop.

We have the choice to contact ourselves and each other with joy, sadness, compassion, humor, ideas, and with the body—the whole person. $400

Self Acceptance—The Freedom to Be

David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness, as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $400

Reichian Gestalt: A Workshop for Contact and Release

Ma Prita (Laura De Nuccio)

This workshop provides a safe environment to experience consciously the process of our own unfolding—physically, emotionally, energetically, sexually, spiritually.

As we become aware of the ways we hold back our self-expression (flow of life energy) we then have the choice to let go. By contacting tension (stuck, accumulated energy) and allowing emotions which have been locked and frozen in our bodies, often since early infancy, we then have the opportunity to open ourselves to the creative flow of life energy within each of us. As we contact and allow our hurts and pain, we can then increase our capacity for pleasure and joy. As we allow our expression of anger, which is a powerfully expansive, outward directed energy, we can open and deepen our capacity for love and compassion. As we contact and allow our expression of fear, we can then move toward expanding our capacity for trusting ourselves and others. Learning to trust our bodies, our responsiveness and movement, is a liberating experience.

Utilizing reichian emotional release, gestalt practice, bioenergetics, feldenkrais, massage, reflexology, dance, meditation, and various other bodymind approaches, we can move toward expanding our capacity for trust and fulfillment. $400

From Burnout to Personal Growth: Increasing Effectiveness and Enjoyment in Work and Life
Elliot Aronson & Ayala Pines
This workshop is designed for people who work with people and who have experienced or are experiencing burnout. It deals with the impact of burnout on both the service provider and the client, ways of finding and recognizing support resources on the job, and positive techniques of dealing with burnout and life tedium. Through lectures, group discussions, and input from the participants themselves, individuals will have the opportunity to increase their understanding of those aspects of their own work and life which could cause burnout. In addition they will be provided with the tools and opportunity to learn how to handle these problems in order to increase the productivity and joyousness of their relationships with clients, colleagues, family, and friends. For additional information see page 10. $200

Buddhist Psychology
Kendra & Huston Smith
Fritz Perls, Ernest Becker, and other writers in humanistic and transpersonal psychology often refer to Buddhism. This workshop will describe in Western idiom the Buddhist view of the self/Self and its dynamics. The way it relates to existential and gestalt therapy and psychosynthesis will be noted, as well as differences with the historical greats (Freud, Rank, Jung).

Huston Smith's filmed interview with Daisetz Suzuki will be shown. $200

Adventures in Self-Exploration
Christina & Stanislav Grof
Focused self-exploration in this workshop will be based on the model of the unconscious that emerged from psychedelic research. It includes not only biographically determined areas but also the dynamics of the death-rebirth process and transpersonal experiences. We will use a combination of music and guided affective imagery, mandala drawing, yoga, massage, and individual work when indicated. $200

The Necessity of Heightened Awareness of Human Beliefs: Religious, Scientific, Concensual, Self, and Non-Human

John & Toni Lilly

Each of us seems to be motivated by beliefs, either outspoken or hidden from others and even from self. Tours of one's inner realities are belief-limited. The belief defines the territory and the domain.

In the internal reality the map is the territory. In the external reality the map is not the territory. In general, maps are generated by beliefs, and maps generate beliefs. In the isolation tank, for example, after the initial adaptation periods, one can explore the maps of beliefs and the beliefs about maps in the religious, scientific, concensual, non-human, and self domains.

Beliefs about one's mind and self: is our mind a product of brain activity only? Is the mind contained in the brain? If so, how did it evolve, under what orders? Is the mind uncontained by a brain? Are brains leaky, allowing information to go out and in, without the use of the known twenty-or-so senses? Is a human mind only a node in a network of universal minds interconnected across a species as well as with other human minds?

We intend, with the help of the group and its interactions, to explore these questions and to relate them to the problem of communication with dolphins.

Books for suggested readings: Simulations of God: The Science of Belief; The Center of the Cyclone; The Human Biocomputer; The Scientist; Communication Between Man and Dolphin; The Dyadic Cyclone; Lilly on Dolphins; The Deep Self. These books can be obtained from the Human/Dolphin Foundation, Box 4172, Malibu, Ca. 90265. Metalanguage

Heinz Von Foerster & John Lilly

If we were ignorant about our ontogeny, i.e., how we came about, our navel would remain an inexplicable curlicue on our body: ontologically the navel makes no sense. Ontogenetically, however, it is a necessity. Something similar takes place when we use the word "language," for this word speaks about itself. Because one needs language to explain language, language remains an inexplicable curlicue in our body of behavior: ontologically, language makes no sense.

In tracing the ontogeny of language in the broadest sense, i.e., the root of all communicating, conversing, discoursing, etc., we shall take the epistemological position of a constructivist, that is, one who takes the unpopular position that the world as we know it is of our making, hence is our responsibility. $200

The Singing Earth: The Art and Practice of Shamanism

Prem Das & Rutuima Das

For five days we will explore shamanic methods of communicating with the earth, sun, stars, and the deeper levels of our own being. Singing and dancing together we will open the channels of healing energy which surround us, and thus vitalize our physical, emotional, mental, and spiritual self. Through a review of belief systems (Huichol Indian, Hindu-Gyan, and Vedanta, as well as our own transindustrial-technological), we will study the possibilities of remote viewing, out of the body experience, time travel, and opening the inner doorway to experiencing higher levels of consciousness and intelligence. In culmination, we will have a ceremony/celebration focusing upon positive thoughts, prayers, and songs dedicated to the earth and all of her children, of all nationalities and species.

Serpent Power and the Holy Spirit: An Energy Transformation Workshop

Maureen Lavender

We tend to experience tension, the polarity between opposing forces, as conflict. Yet we can, if we will, use this energy as fuel for transformation. In this workshop our choice is freedom through intention to tolerate charge, and a faith in the healing power of the breath/spiritus.

We will go directly to the "core" to release pelvic congestion and chakra blocks through spinal undulation, fire breath, and connective tissue work. Purification with pranayama, polarity, silence, primal dance, and symbolic rites of death and rebirth aid in directing the kundalini force to higher centers.

Previous deep body release, intensive breath work, and responsible devotion are required for attendance. Maximum participants: 8. $400

A Weekend Primer on Constitutional Holistic Medicine Focusing on Homeopathy, Acupuncture, and Deep Tissue Work
Al Drucker & Staff
This workshop will examine energetic medicine, that which deals directly with the energy field and the vital force. The three principal systems that will be discussed and demonstrated are different healing paths with a common curative goal—the complete restoration of health through the law of cure. We will study the subtle transforming role of disease in the spiritual evolutionary development of the individual, seeing it as the catalytic agent that puts us back on track with our deeper life's purpose and mission. But we will also explore ways of pure healthful and heartful living and sensitive attunement which permits us to achieve our life's goals without illness. For additional information see page $200

The Painting Experience
Michell Cassou & Stewart Cubley
In this workshop we will focus on the process, what happens between us and the painting, not what we get as a result. It is very rare for most people to dare to see if they want to do something, and then to do it. We have lost contact with this daring, this desire to connect with oneself in a way that's deeper than thought.

During the weekend the emphasis will be upon the practical experience of creative painting where people will be given the support and stimulation to touch deeper in themselves and dissolve creative blocks. We will explore the mechanisms and patterns that prevent creative expression in order to discover a natural experience of painting based directly upon feeling. The work will take place in an authentic studio setting with large white surfaces to confront the creative void, and a rich spectrum of colors and brushes. An audio-visual program will illustrate the development of inner expression during the painting process. No prior experience in painting is necessary. $200 plus $10 materials fee paid to leaders

Jerry Fletcher
Everyone can remember times when their personal performance was at a very high level. These peak periods are deeply satisfying, and they often contribute to the social good. Yet, since people do not know how to recapture or create anew the conditions and state of mind that allowed high level performance, they spend much of their lives operating with diminished capacity. This seminar will provide a broad variety of experiences for individuals to explore their own processes for achieving high levels of performance, to identify and deal with internal and external barriers, and to practice methods of facilitating high level performance in others. As many people are inhibited by the belief that high levels of personal performance and fulfillment are incompatible with the requirements of a competitive corporate environment, or a successful intimate relationship, or the larger social good, this seminar will present an intellectual basis for resolving this apparent paradox. $200

Families at Esalen
Robert Hunt & Janet Lederman
This workshop will combine many of the group experiences of Experiencing Esalen with special opportunities for dialogue and shared experiences within families. We will address issues of work and play in the family. Time will be allowed for individual reflection, for family communication, and for couples' renewal.

The workshop provides a vehicle for reviewing and enriching family experience through sharing daily experiences of Esalen, and through reflection on the family processes which occur at home. Supervised family meetings will be held daily with a focus on improving intimacy and communication between family members. Multi-family groups will also be provided daily which will enable families to benefit from each other's experiences in family process. There will also be an opportunity for role play and psychodrama. Music, dance, and art will enhance contact. Some scholarships will available for children under 18. Call or write to the Esalen office for scholarship information. $400 per participant

Five-Day Massage Intensive
Esalen Massage Practitioners
An introduction to the language of the body, this course will attempt to view the human interior through various windows: yoga, feldenkrais, movement, demonstration and work sessions, and evening lectures and discussions. Every major portion of the body will be given detailed attention, and your instructors will acquaint you with their individualized styles. In the morning and afternoon practice sessions the focus will be on your integrating this information in your own manner and evolving your own style of working with the body. Our intent is not to teach you to imitate, but to help you learn to become effective; the rest you will teach yourselves. $400

New Perspectives in Psychotherapy and Self-Exploration
Christina & Stanislav Grof

We will focus on the observations from modern consciousness research that have revolutionary implications for the theory and practice of psychotherapy. The suggested revisions include an expanded model of the human mind, new methods and strategies of self-exploration, and powerful unconventional mechanisms of personality change. The participants will have the opportunity to explore the new principles in experiential sessions combining pranayama breathing, evocative music, body work, and mandala drawing. Special attention will be paid to the problems of handling spiritual emergencies as part of an effort to create a network of professionals offering help in transpersonal crises. $400

The Wellness Community Experience
Jackie Doyle
Torkin Hibbard
Rick Ingrasci
David LaChappelle
Chuck Steinberg
& Peggy Taylor

The wellness community is a five-day residential experience in forming an intentional community to work together on a holistic approach to personal health. The wellness community is designed to create a caring, supportive community in a beautiful, natural setting where participants can learn to experience their own potential for self-healing and personal fulfillment. We will pay particular attention to the powerful healing energy that is created by a group of loving and caring people.

The wellness community experience will help you identify areas of imbalance in your own life and construct a plan to move toward full health. Health partnerships will be formed to focus on specific personal goals. Healing circles, in which many healing disciplines will be represented, will give participants an opportunity to gain experience in the use of their own healing energy.

Workshop sessions will be led by qualified professionals in the following fields: relationships, sexuality, personal health, and health in the workplace and in the environment. During the week you will have an opportunity to experience spiritual attunement, visualization, relaxation, movement, music, ritual, laughter, friendship, and healing. We will take advantage of the beautiful natural surroundings and hold many activities outdoors. $400

Reichian/Gestalt Intensive
Joan Fiore
& Jeffrey Kent

This workshop combines neo-reichian breath and body work to facilitate physical/emotional release, with gestalt work to facilitate contact, integration, and self-responsibility.

We provide the time, the space, the opportunity to move at your own pace from dis-ease to ease, from fragmented to whole, from self-discounting to self-validating, from role-playing to authentic self-expression, from helpless victim to active participant in your personal destiny, or from wherever you happen to be coming to wherever you're growing. You might expore your dreams, your tensions, your madness, or your options; take room to breathe or to explode, soak in nurture or exorcise demons, finish past unfinished business or examine present concerns.

First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to experiment with the quality of interpersonal contact through group interactions. $400

You Don't Have to Suffer to Feel Good
Harry Sloan

Frequently, people approach change with the attitude that you have to suffer to grow. The experience of growth becomes heavy and humorless. What is lacking is a creative perspective which could help solve the problems we feel stuck in.

In an atmosphere of tenderness and humor, this workshop will combine individual work with discussion of principles and concepts which nourish the process of change. Personal work will stress deepening awareness of our own unique sense of direction and the obstacles in the way. We will focus on learning to allow change, using humor as a vehicle for developing a spontaneous, flexible, and playful view of life and ourselves.

The basic approach will include psychosynthesis, transpersonal psychology, and cathartic methods which emphasize releasing and transforming blocked energies. Our purpose together will be to develop a creative perspective which aligns our will and motivation with the natural process of change and integration. $400

Alan Schwartz

Read the August 30-September 4 description. This will be a weekend to explore and understand our individual energy systems and their relation to how we both make contact and inhibit contact. One focus will be on integration via energy release methods. Another will be on the simple task of being present, physiologically and emotionally, being aware that contact refers to our consistent awareness process and the autonomous expression of who we are. $200

Achieving Peak Performance: Skills and Applications
Charles Garfield

Research and clinical applications in the human sciences conducted in the U.S., U.S.S.R., and Western Europe have dramatized the need for a serious reappraisal of our conceptions of human capabilities. Whether working more effectively with individual clients and organizations, mastering a body of knowledge, improving personal health and lifestyle, or enhancing creativity, we can all achieve and maintain heightened levels of performance. This seminar will focus on the skills necessary to develop maximum physical and mental performance. Charles Garfield will share his extensive clinical and consulting experience in applying these approaches to clients in the helping professions, organizations we work and consult with, and ourselves. The seminar will emphasize practical, proven "how-to" methods for teaching and applying performance enhancement skills. $200

Gestalt, Bioenergy, and Human Contact; Old and New Learning Integrated
Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self and our interdependence with physical and social environments. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material will be covered. $400

Introduction to Meditation
Daniel O'Hanlon

Sometimes we experiment with many growth processes, excellent in themselves, yet succeed in remaining opaque to ourselves. The breakthrough does not occur. This may mean that it is time to take on the challenge of silent work with ourselves—meditation. This brief introductory weekend will provide instruction and guidance in a variety of meditation practices, drawn from Hindu and Buddhist disciplines, from the Christian traditions of East and West, and from the recent explorations of transpersonal psychology.

Suggested readings: Journey of Awakening (Ram Dass) and Sadhana: A Way to God (Anthony de Mello). $200

Vision Improvement—Our Willingness to See
Ma Prita (Laura DeNuccio)

This weekend will focus primarily on the awareness continuum. Exploring various methods and systems, we can discover how we distort our perceptions in the here and now and how we are able to clear and re-educate our eyes and our selves to see. Utilizing deep emotional release, bioenergetics, gestalt, the bates system, nutrition, and various other body/mind approaches, we will have the opportunity to explore, discover, contact, experience and expand—enabling us to look newly at our selves and our world in which we live. $200

The Elements: Archetypes of Transformation and Healing
Ralph Metzner — The "elements" (four in the European tradition, five in Indian and Chinese) represent fundamental principles of life and nature. Their meanings extend into psychosomatic illness/wellness, personality types (Jung's functions, the humors, astrology), the alchemy of relationships, ecological awareness, and planetary unity. In this workshop we study their symbolic expressions in various traditions and experience how they can further the integration of body, psyche, spirit, and nature. Methods used will include meditation, guided symbolic imagery, audio-visual media, breath and movement, body and field energy awareness, polarity balancing, and sensory attunement. — $200

Opening . . . Changing
Sandra & Emmett Miller

For change to occur, we must allow ourselves to be aware of new information, either from the outside or from within. Openness and receptivity allow this new information to create, almost magically, desirable changes.

After eliminating obstacles to this process, through deep relaxation of the body and mind, our exploration of new possibilities will take place in stillness and in imagery, in movement and in touch, and in incorporating and echoing the environment around us. Finally, as desirable changes emerge, we may choose to reinforce them and to discover ways to integrate them into our lives. Music, dance, massage, and playful communication will be part of this workshop. $200

Motion and Emotion: A Week of Gestalt Practice and Improvisational Theatre
Christine Price & Susan Tanner

Gestalt practice is a form—nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental—evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls. With the use of guided meditations and individual open seat work participants have the opportunity to contact and explore their present experience, including unfinished situations from the past and fantasies of the future. Improvisational theatre provides an environment in which the players can bring their experience and life into creative expression through movement, music, and the creation of characters. By combining these two forms we hope to have a situation where the improvisation can be an expression, affirmation, and celebration of the experiences discovered in the gestalt process. $400

Still Point, Turning Point: A "Good Medicine Show" for Mind, Heart, and Body
David Schiffman

"Anything which is forced or misunderstood can never be beautiful."—Xenophon

People, like plants, need special care and attention to thrive and blossom. To naturally grow beyond what we've been requires strength, sensitivity, and a deeply compassionate awareness. The courage to let go of the self-defeating patterns of the past; the willingness to master fresh skills and create new dreams for the future; these are the turning points that nourish and sustain us. No matter how difficult or frightening they may seem initially, the felt sense that they share as we pass through them is that they are "good medicine" for our souls.

In this workshop we will come together in the spirit of being simply and lovingly at home in ourselves. We will create a community whose aim is to explore and move through our individual turning points, in a climate of trust, goodwill, and authenticity. The program will be structured to include intensive individual work, using practices from gestalt, psychosynthesis, and bioenergetics, as well as creative movement, music, guided imagery, group rituals, and celebrations. The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective that will bring buoyancy and lightness into our life and work. $400

Introduction to Vipassana Meditation
Jamie Baraz

Vipassana (insight) meditation practice is a systematic examination of the mind/body process through calm and focused awareness. Learning to observe experience from a place of stillness enables one to relate to life without fear or clinging. One begins to accept pleasure and pain, fear and joy, and all aspects of life with increasing equanimity and balance. Life is seen as a constantly changing process. Insight is the deepening experience of the process itself, free of interpretation, leading to wisdom and compassion. The seminar is designed for those who have had no previous meditation experience as well as for those who wish to deepen their practice. Meditation instruction, the philosophy behind the practice, group discussions, and actual practice periods will be offered. Special emphasis will be placed on how to integrate vipassana practice in daily life after the workshop is over. $200

See Yourself Release
Gael Switzer & Wendy Oser

See yourself as others see you and bring your physical manifestation into alignment with your inner sense of who you are. This is a workshop which leads to an expanded self-image and a freer, more graceful body. We use facilitated video feedback and integrated movement education to gently guide you toward releasing patterns of holding that contribute to tension, pain, and awkwardness, and a limited view of yourself. You may experience subtle yet powerful shifts, first in ordinary activities (breathing, walking, sitting), then in more sophisticated areas such as how you use your body in work, play, or any other movement discipline. You will be taught skills that will continue to enhance your elegance and allow you to see yourself with greater objectivity and compassion. $200

In the afternoons massage instruction and practice will take place at the baths with one special massage and picnic day at the beach. Our evenings will be filled with singing, dancing, laughing, crying, contact improvisation, playing theatre games, making music together, and helping each other uncover and express our creative selves. $400

Connecting with Our Hearts
Mari Krieger & Frank Rubenfeld

Connecting with our minds and with our hearts is essential. Most of us have mastered making contact with our minds, and have forgotten the ability we all had as children to come from our hearts. In the process of growing up, we learned to close our hearts, since that is what we imagined we had to do in order to survive. In this workshop, through gestalt and gentle bioenergetics, we will open our hearts and minds, and awaken our spirits. This will help us to contact the essence of our being and, from that place deep within ourselves, to connect with others. $400

Nuclear Nightmare
Howard Kornfeld

"Be here now, be here tomorrow to talk about it."—Ann-Marie Hogan, Berkeley, January 2, 1981

We have reached the point in human evolution at which a significant shift in human consciousness seems to be necessary for human survival. An element of this shift is manifest in various trends in which a segment of American society has embraced more natural, quiet, meditative lifestyles as a response to the more complex and dangerous domestic and global situation. Another needed element in this shift will be an awareness of the rising risk of nuclear conflict. To this end we will consider the objective and subjective elements of this paradigm shift. Lawrence Greene

This workshop is oriented toward teacher, school psychologists, and learning disabilities specialists. It will examine specific methods designed to help children process sensory information more efficiently. Criteria for diagnosing and ways of treating perceptual learning disabilities will be presented. The workshop will focus on establishing sensory-motor and behavior modification protocols which address such symptoms as poor reading comprehension, auditory and visual decoding deficits, hyperactivity, letter reversals, poor concentration, and gross and fine-motor coordination deficits. The workshop will also emphasize the emotional components of a learning disability and will explore methods for identifying and reducing stress and anxiety in children. Participants in the workshop are eligible to apply for one unit of graduate credit at San Jose University. $200

On the Way to Health: A Guide for Health Practitioners
Phillip Mac

This workshop is designed to look at the stresses of the health provider in training and in practice. The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples
David Schiffman

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery, as well as gestalt awareness methods. $200 per participant

Many Dimensional Self
Jay Ogilvy & Heather Maycock Ogilvy

The question "Who am I?" may have more than one answer. During this weekend we'll explore both the theory and practice of multiple selfhood. What is the self? What does it mean to allow several selves per person? What are the social implications, e.g., when one self makes promises that a person's other selves have to keep? Must there be one "captain of the ship?" What is the price of a well developed ego, a single identity? Do we bring on our identity crises, mid-life crises, dying relationships, over-consuming careers by such one-dimensionality? Might we instead evoke the many gods within us and free the energy of our shadow selves? We will approach these questions both cognitively and experientially using body, mind, and heart. Remembering myths other than monotheism, playing with theories other than ego psychology, working to hear more of our voices, we hope to find integration through communication rather than subordination.

Our Future, Our Health: An Invitational Colloquiem
Rick Carlson & Ken Dychtwald

To some, our health as individuals and as a society has never been better. To others, it has never been worse. Of course, it depends on your point of view. But two things are certain: there is a future, and we will either be healthy or not. This seminar, designed as a colloquiem, will look to the future within a context of alternative futures, and raise issues and questions about our health in the future. What will the critical factors related to health be? Will greater assumption of responsibility for health by more and more people lead to a healthier future? What about bio-hazards and environmental contamination? What about self-regulation? What will the medicine of the future look like? And finally, will the future belong to the sick or the well? These and other issues will be raised in the seminar. As enrollment will be limited, please send a letter stating your background and interests to Rick Carlson, P.O. Box 426, Mill Valley, Ca. 94942. $160

Expressing Your Attractiveness
James Oldham By finding the ways in which you inhibit your natural attractiveness, you can change how you feel and move. We will focus on specific ways people block themselves from enjoyment. Letting go of these inhibitions allows a wide variety of spontaneous attractive behavior to emerge naturally. This workshop will not attempt to provide formulas or predetermined strategies, rather, it will allow you to find your gifts. The approach will be gestalt, utilizing theatre awareness and special methods of movement awareness.

You may find at the end of this workshop that you are bringing people closer and evoking more interest in the people around you, without your understanding how you are doing it. $200

Back to the Beanstalk: Enchantment and Reality for Couples
Judith & George Brown Folk tales have been a traditional source for cultural wisdom on the essence of relationship. In this seminar we will apply the recurring motifs of folk tale relationships to what is happening today. Both experiential and discussion approaches will be used to discover alternatives for the stuck relationships which we so often program for ourselves. The themes of fears and expectations, fantasy vs. reality, communication, and control will be explored for singles, couples, and professionals. A Fellowship of Caring: The Volunteers
Charles Garfield "Volunteers are like ships. They could stay moored where it's safe and still justify their being, but they choose to cut through the rough waters, ride out the storms, and take their chances."—Erma Bombeck

Volunteers are the social conscience of the nation. The civil rights, women's, environmental and conservation movements, neighborhood improvement coalitions, and ethnic and religious organizations are all essentially volunteer efforts. They are good examples of human compassion, unselfishness, caring, patience, and just plain loving one another. Ghandi, Schweitzer, and Mother Theresa are examplars of the tradition of volunteerism. Using the SHANTI Project's experience with patients and families facing life-threatening illnesses as a model for all volunteer efforts, and beginning with the proposition that "none of us makes it unless we all make it," we will explore ways for ending citizen impotence through the dynamics of personal change. Topics include: understanding planetary problems on community, neighborhood, and personal levels; taking personal responsibility for human problems which move us as individual; selecting, training, and motivating volunteers; structuring and implementing volunteer and self-help services; examining the limits of mutual help and citizen participation; and asking the question of when a problem is "solved." As traditional political, social, and religious organizations face increasing difficulty in a more complex world, channeling our energies into effective grassroots action becomes a more potent force for changing the world—as well as one of the most passionate expressions of love. $400

The Body: Imagined, Sensed, and Observed
Don Johnson & Dennis Jaffe
We have certain images of how big or small we are, how fat or thin, how straight or curved, how attractive or repulsive, how strong or weak. We have certain ideals of how our bodies should be and notions of how others see us. We also have an "objective" body whose weight, height, muscular tensions, and range of movement can be measured in relation to others' bodies. The conflicts which often exist among these various modes of self-perception can muddle our intelligent activity in the world; in the extreme, they can produce illness. Using guided imagery, movement exercises, methods of perceiving body structure, and group process, we will work to achieve more harmony. — $200

Conscious Childbirth

We are sponsoring a series of weekend workshops for pregnant couples interested in exploring conscious childbirth. Issues and themes to be covered in the series include conception and pregnancy, nutrition and exercises for pregnant mothers, labor, delivery, and post partem. Emphasis will be on education, responsibility, and awareness of choices. Workshop sessions will include pre-natal yoga, massage, and psychological process work. The use of ritual will be explored as a way to honor birth as a rite of passage. The Spiritual Path: Promises and Pitfalls

A four-week interdisciplinary training program organized jointly by the Esalen Institute and the International Transpersonal Association (ITA), this workshop is designed for professionals and students in psychiatry, psychology, anthropology, religion, and philosophy interested in exploring the transpersonal realms and the methods of reaching them. Special attention will be paid to the similarities and differences between psychosis and mysticism and to the problems related to the evolution of consciousness and its vicissitudes. This program is part of a systematic effort to create an international network of individuals trained to facilitate the process of personal evolution and to assist in spiritual emergencies. The program will focus on the following thematic areas:

1. Ancient Technologies of the Sacred: Shamanism and the Great Spiritual Traditions

The participants will have the opportunity to explore the shamanic practices under the guidance of Michael Harner, an anthropologist who combines Western scholarship and first-hand training with South American shamans. Visiting shamans will share their knowledge with the group and conduct sacred rituals. Other spiritual traditions will be represented by t'ai chi, hatha and siddha yoga, Vipassana Buddhism, aikido, and the kundalini tradition.

2. Transpersonal Psychology

We will explore theoretically and experientially a spectrum of modern techniques that can mediate access to the transpersonal realms: guided imagery with music, controlled breathing, mandala drawing, gestalt practice, exploration of psychic abilities, jungian psychology, Dora Kalff's sandplay, massage, acupuncture, and transit astrology.

3. Psychosis: Disease or Transpersonal Crisis?

We will discuss new understandings of the psychotic process emerging from psychedelic therapy, jungian analysis, kundalini research, and modern clinical and laboratory studies. An attempt will be made to distinguish psychosis from a spiritual emergency. We will experiment with methods of constructive assistance in transpersonal crises. The recent convergence of quantum-relativistic physics, modern consciousness research, and mysticism will be explored as a possible scientific basis for the transpersonal orientation.

4. Self-Exploration and Group Process

The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with personal experience. The Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators for the participants throughout the program.

Still Points, Turning Points: A New Curriculum for Change

"Anything which is forced or misunderstood can never be beautiful." —Xenophon

People, like plants, need special care and attention to thrive and blossom. To naturally grow beyond what we've been requires strength, sensitivity, and a deeply compassionate awareness. What are the most important elements that support this transformation and renewal? And how might this process be effectively shared with others? Out of the answers to these basic questions has emerged the dream of combining the best of Esalen's human potential practice work with the spirit of adventure found in Outward Bound's wilderness programs, along with the gracious informality of living and working together in one of the most beautiful and peaceful settings in the world.

The aim of this unique curriculum will be to explore and develop a new model for learning, one that not only deepens the experience of traditional therapeutic process, but also breaks new ground in erasing the line between intensive group and individual work and the ordinary world of everyday life.

Among the areas we will touch on during this month are:

The Body and its Functions: As a temple for the spirit, as a reflection, and as a turning point from past habits, fears, and attitudes, as a source of grace, ease, and fluidity in movement and in contact; as a kinetic homebase for exuberance, playfulness, and balance, and as a healing source of touch.

The Emotional Realm: Exploring and opening the limits of our temperament; redirecting negative feelings for inspiration and power; cultivating passion and strength as the core of our integrity; resolving inner and outer turmoil simply and peacefully.

The Mind: Developing the powers of the imagination for self-affirmation and creativity; deepening our ability to see, hear, and understand so that we can range easily from the practical to the transcendental; strengthening our sense of fair-witness and developing the skillful use of the will; using the perspective of humor to heal separation.

Coming together in the spirit of being simply and lovingly at home in ourselves, we will create a community whose foundation is based on trust, goodwill, and authenticity.

During the month each participant will have the opportunity to clarify and develop his/her own style and artfulness as an individual guide and group facilitator doing in-depth training in gestalt practice, body work, psychosynthesis methods, and the meditative arts. The program will be structured to include: intensive individual work; creative music and movement; wilderness and equestrian experiences; group rituals and celebrations; and supervised observations; practicum work in group leading and individual counseling skills; video feedback; and illustrated lectures and didactic theoretical sessions.

The emphasis throughout will be on creating a personally integrated perspective that will bring buoyancy and lightness into our life and work. The group is designed for people from all walks of life. $1400

Body, Self, and Soul: An Experimental Training Workshop

This workshop will start wherever you are in your inner journey. The work is an in-depth integration of body therapies, gestalt practice, and the transformative process of consciousness.

The course will cover:

Psychology of the Self: working with early unfinished situations that interrupt our sense of well-being and interfere with our relationships in the present. Sexual implications of this work will be dealth with in body work and in lecture.

Body Work (Gestalt Body Approach): theoretic and practical application, combining classical reichian work, yoga, and bio-energetics with psychological process.

Transformative Process of Consciousness: As our inner journey progresses our figure/ground awareness is shifted from "doing" and "having" to "being" and to our relationship with the eternal, and we will explore ways to integrate and sustain these new awarenesses in our everyday life. $1050

Mysteries of Death and Rebirth 12-day Mediterranean Cruise

Historical and anthropological literature presents ample evidence about the cultural significance of psychological death and rebirth. Throughout the ages, every major ancient and pre-industrial culture has offered its members a structured, supportive, and socially sanctioned framework in which they could experience the healing and transformative power of the confrontation with death and subsequent transcendence.

On this 12-day Mediterranean cruise aboard the luxurious M. S. Golden Odyssey we will visit areas that were known in antiquity for their traditions of death and rebirth mysteries.

Our journey begins in Athens, Greece with the rites of Dionysus, Attis, and Adonis, and continues to Istanbul and the converging rites of the Byzantine empire. We then sail south to Ephesus, Turkey, and the Holy Lands of Israel where the Christian version of the death-rebirth process is seen through Christ's suffering, death, and resurrection. At the pyramids of Egypt we see the journey of the soul through the eyes of the Egyptian Book of the Dead and the temple mysteries of Isis and Osiris. Visits to the Greek islands of Mykonos, Hydra, and Rhodes are also part of our incredible journey.

Seminars at sea will explore cross-culturally the death-rebirth process and will include a review of modern consciousness research, particularly psychedelic work and jungian psychology as it relates to psychopathology and its relevance to human life.

Total cost of this 12-day Mediterranean cruise aboard the Golden Odyssey, including round trip air fare from the west coast to Athens and all seminars, is $2598 to $3498 per person, depending on choice of cruise accommodation. Participation limited to 40.

East and West: Ancient Wisdom and Modern Science

A four-week interdisciplinary training program organized jointly by the Esalen Institute and the International Transpersonal Association (ITA). This workshop is designed for professionals and students of psychiatry, psychology, anthropology, religion, and philosophy interested in the interface and recent convergence of mysticism and science. Special attention will be paid to a new understanding of the psychotic process and transpersonal crisis intervention. This training program is part of a systematic effort to create an international network of individuals qualified to facilitate the process of personal transformation and to assist in spiritual emergencies. It will focus on the following four areas.

1. Great Spiritual Traditions of the East and Ancient Shamanic Practices.
We will explore theoretically and practically siddha yoga, hatha yoga, the Tibetan vajrayana, the Buddhist vipassana meditation, and the shamanic methods of Mexican, North American, and South American Indians.

2. Revolutionary Paradigms in Western Science.
Participants will be introduced to modern developments in consciousness studies, brain research, and quantum-relativistic physics that make it possible to integrate ancient wisdom and modern science. Particular emphasis will be placed on spectrum psychology, psychedelic research, relationship between consciousness and matter, and the holonomic theory of David Bohm and Karl Pribram.

3. Psychosis: Disease or Spiritual Emergence?
We will discuss new understanding of the psychotic process, emerging from psychedelic research and modern laboratory and clinical studies. In this context, the focus will be on the shamanic process of transformation, kundalini awakening, John Perry's Diabasis, and the laingian approach. We will also consider the promises and pitfalls of the spiritual path and experiment with methods of constructive assistance in transpersonal crises.

4. New Approaches to Therapy and Self-Exploration.
The workshops of this series use an experimental educational format that combines didactic input with deep personal experience and group process. The Esalen staff and guest leaders will act as facilitators for the participants throughout the program. We will use evocative music, controlled breathing, mandala drawing, jungian sandplay (Dora Kalff), cultivation of psychic abilities, body work, and gestalt practice. $1600

Holistic Health Four-Month Residential Training Program

The workshop is designed primarily for health care professionals and students in the health field. It is intended to give participants new knowledge and skills in various holistic health and healing practices which they can use in their own health care settings. A part-time faculty of about twenty will be involved in different aspects of the teaching program.

The program will focus on 10 major areas ot study and practice. These are:

•massage •gestalt •homeopathy •t'ai chi •bach flowers
•deep tissue •acupuncture •anatomy •nutriton •community health

During each 4-month period, participants will receive in-depth training in the 10 deep-tissue sessions. (See deep-tissue description in the Sept. 1980-Feb. 1981 Esalen catalog.) In addition to the deep-tissue classes held on twelve 3-day weekends, an ongoing gestalt practicum will be offered during four other weekends, focusing on training in gestalt process. The program will commence with a massage training weekend which is preparatory to the deep-tissue classes. Massage sessions will also be scheduled at intervals throughout the semester. The t'ai chi form will be taught during the deep-tissue weekends. All other classes will be held during the week. Regularly scheduled community health sessions will meet weekly where participants can observe the integration of these holistic practices.

There will be frequent opportunities for meditation, chanting, and contemplative practices. These will not concentrate on any given spiritual motif. The intention is to deepen the participant's own inner awareness. During this time there will also be regular ongoing community sessions, which are open to all residents in the Esalen community. In the past these have included morning yoga practice, zazen meditations, feldenkrais exercises, various forms of energetic release work, movement and dance, body-stretching exercises, intra and interpersonal process work, and video-tape and movie presentations. For further information on this program, a course outline may be obtained by writing to Esalen Institute, Big Sur, Ca. 93920.

Cost of the program, including tuition, room, and board, is $6300 for the 4-month period. Rooms will be shared. In addition to the scheduled classes, a four-hour per week work commitment is required in various community projects. A work-scholarship fund is available for this program and will be assigned on the basis of need. Since scholarship funds are limited kindly apply as early as possible, detailing your situation, if this is a consideration for enrolling in the program. Participants in the program may wish to sign up for one or more regularly scheduled five-day or weekend catalog programs during the period of their four-month stay. This will be possible on a space-available basis by payment of the leader's fee.

A $500 deposit is required to reserve a place in the program. Early registration is recommended. The deposit is refundable in full only if you are not accepted into the program.

Esalen is not a degree, diploma, or certificate granting institution. This program is offered for professional and educational enrichment. Participants must make their own arrangements to assure compliance with their respective state license requirements. Verification of attendance will be given to nurses and physicians in the program desiring continuing education credit for this workshop.

The program will be repeated in the fall of 1982, with additional emphasis on gestalt and homeopathy, during the five-month period October 1 through February 20, 1983.

The Rites of Passage: A Seven-day Pilgrimage on Horseback Through the Big Sur Wilderness

Turning the clock back to a more gently paced time, we will share a profoundly simple style of life together.

Beginning our journey from a remote beautiful ranch on the river's edge in Arroyo Seco, we'll travel along winding canyon trails through the unspoiled back country of the Ventana Wilderness.

We'll carry all our essentials with us, making stops in some of the loveliest spots in the Ventana.

The trip will combine elements from human potential practices, group process work, and traditional equestrian and wilderness skills. It will be a time of simplification and cleansing.

The group will be limited to ten participants. $820

Meet the Wilderness, Yourself, and Each Other:
A Seven-day Wilderness Experience from Esalen to the Tassajara Zen Center

Nature can provide us with opportunities to stretch our limit and, paradoxically, explore our internal wilderness. By doing what is most risky, even uncomfortable, we can give ourselves the greatest potential for personal growth. By living without the conveniences that remove us from our source, giving priority to feeling and honest exchanges, we can greatly and dramatically expand our sense of self and depth of being.

We spend a day and night at Esalen, defining ourselves as a group, preparing for the wilderness, building the foundation for spontaneity, trust, and self-responsibility. We leave the next morning hiking through the rugged Ventana wilderness, travelling as "light" as possible. There is basic training in minimum impact camping and outdoor living, along with a simple orientation to the ecology, geography, and cultural history of the Big Sur coast and Ventana. We cook simple, organic meals and eat communally. Throughout the seven days we give whatever time is necessary to working with any feelings that may emerge. Our experience together, sometimes nudging personal boundaries, encountering ourselves, each other, and nature, culminates in a 24-hour period completely alone and without food. We reunite on the seventh day to celebrate and share our discoveries. We also spend some time on this day at the Tassajara Zen Center for a communal bath and meal, and drive back to Esalen to finish whatever personal business we may still have to complete together.

Back packing experience is not necessary, but participants should be prepared for the challenge of vigorous physical activity. More information will be sent upon registration. $325

Journeying: Whitewater Rafting the Owyhee River

The warm spring sun melts the snow pack in southeastern Oregon's mountains and for six to eight weeks the Owyhee River runs full and lively. It is a time of new beginnings and discovery, a time of wonderment and rebirth, a time to stretch our bodies and shake off the stiffness of winter.

For seven days we float the flats and rapids of the Owyhee in six person rubber rafts, sharing in the exhilaration of paddling and captaining our boats through rushing whitewater and drifting through sun-dappled calm stretches of quiet water. At night we camp on grassy river banks cooking together over campfires, recounting the ancient myths of the starry heavens while spinning our own stories.

As we float deep into the heart of the canyon our adventure becomes an interplay between the inner and outer journey. The notion that each person's life is a quest, journey, or pilgrimage is the heart of the myth of the hero. The wilderness journey becomes a profound metaphor of human experience as we chart the stars, rapids, rocks, and calms of our own lives. We learn about making and reading maps of unknown territory, locating ourselves in time and space, dealing with demons and monsters, developing a vision to guide our personal journey, and identifying sources of courage, strength, humor, and nourishment.

No previous experience required. You need to be in good physical health. We will meet in Ontario, Oregon May 24. Complete information on clothing, equipment, and travel will be sent upon registration. $475

Rites of Passage: A Mountain/River Adventure

This workshop is grounded in the notion that people's responses to the challenges of the mountain and river reflect their responses to the challenges of daily life. From the very real and immediate lessons of the wilderness, we come to see ourselves more clearly, enabling us to act with a greater sense of clarity, purpose, and direction.

As in rock climbing, when we move from balance, through imbalance, into balance again, this adventure is an opportunity to pause and take stock, reflecting on where we have been, where we are, and where we wish to go. It is a time for relaxation, for stretching limits, for extending ourselves, for seeking a new and revitalized sense of who we are.

For seven days we explore the remote and spectacular Marble Mountains wilderness in northern California. Carrying everything we need in our packs, we hike through broad green forests, lush meadows full of wildflowers, and camp by crystal mountain lakes. From a base camp in a small alpine basin, we experience beginning rock climbing and rappelling, ascend a nearby peak, relax in a sweat house, and each spend 24 hours completely alone in reflection and contemplation. We learn a variety of mountain skills including camp craft, [illegible] and compass travel, wilderness medicine, gourmet cooking, and mountain ecology.

At the end of seven days, we resupply with fresh food and move to the nearby Klamath River for two hal[illegible] whitewater rafting. Guiding our twelve-foot rubber rafts with paddles, we each have a chance to [illegible] boat through the rapids and delight in the exhilaration and timeless [illegible] of the river.

Though this workshop is an adventure in doing, we combine methods from group process [illegible] tion, and journal writing to help us ground our experiences so we may incorporate them [illegible]

No previous experience is required. You need to be in good physical health. Complete [illegible] on clothing, equipment, and travel will be sent upon registration. We will meet in Redding, Oregon [illegible]

Encountering in the High Sierra

During this seven-day workshop we will hike eight miles to a clear mountain lake (9600') off the main trails in the Minarets Wilderness Area of the High Sierra. Mules will carry in all of the food, camping equipment, and personal gear. We will camp by the lake for six days, eating outrageously good food (fresh or frozen rather than freeze dried) and working with body awareness, meditation, psychodrama, gestalt, and encounter, laughing a lot and getting to know the high country, one another, and ourselves. There will also be some time for doing nothing.

Mountaineering experience is not necessary, but applicants should possess a good sense of humor and be capable of hiking uphill at altitudes of up to 10,000 feet. A detailed information sheet will be supplied upon request or registration. Participants will meet in the Sierra on August 8. $335

Wilderness Encounter: Seven Days in the Mountains of Northern Yosemite

We go to the wilderness to get closer to its beauty; we go to face ourselves, to simplify, to have fun, certainly to empower ourselves; we go because we can greatly and dramatically expand our sense of self and depth of being. We believe that by doing whatever is most risky—even uncomfortable—we can give ourselves the greatest potential for personal growth. Explore with us, from the Hetch-Hetchy reservoir to the very remote and spectacular Lake Edith region. We will hike, fish, be challenged by beginning rock climbing, camp, tell stories, and sing songs. Throughout the seven days, we give whatever time is necessary to working with any feelings that may emerge. Our experience together, sometimes nudging personal boundaries and limits, encountering ourselves, each other, and nature, includes a 24-hour period completely alone.

River of Solitude: The Lower Canyons of the Rio Grande

This nine-day raft trip is the finest desert river experience in the United States. Through broad vistas and beneath soaring canyon walls, we float nearly 50 miles of the Rio Grande as it winds through the Big Bend country, forming the border between Texas and Mexico. We feel ourselves slowing, adjusting our pace to the river, floating in the warm water and shedding our cares as easily as we shed our clothing, to become a part of this timeless land of sun and rock and water. We camp at night on the riverbank to cook over campfires and sleep in the warm sand, beneath the brilliant canopy of the desert stars. We explore sinuous limestone side canyons and visit ancient Indian shelter caves. In six person rafts we paddle past stands of bright green river cane and we drink from crystal springs. We may make music, invent rituals, and tell stories of other journeys. We use relaxation, yoga, and process work to savor the days, breathing deeply and relaxing fully, to emerge at the end of the trip refreshed and renewed. We will meet in Midland, Texas on August 29th. Complete clothing, equipment, and travel information will be sent upon registration. $500

Woman's Challenge: A Dance of Adventure

Autumn is a time of gathering our unique gifts and vibrant colors, a time of renewing our personal power and fluidity of being. During this seven-day adventure, starting at Arroyo Seco, we hike westward with the sun through chapparal, spreading oaks, and fields of wild flowers, emerging from the redwoods on the edge of the continent—the spectacular Big Sur coast.

During our journey we explore our inner world: our feminine roles and archetypes, the dominant and shadowy parts of ourselves, our vulnerability and strengths, our heroism and our adventurousness. Woven into our week are group process work, traditional wilderness skills, rock climbing, rappelling, and rolfing movement integration, designed to open ourselves to balance, grace, and fluidity. Each of us spends 24 hours alone in reflection and contemplation near the end of the trip.

The full moon, bright stars, and crackling campfires make for evenings of storytelling, rituals, dance, and laughter.

We can emerge from this exploration at a new place of inner power and wisdom.

We will camp out at Esalen our first night and return Easter morning to spend time in the baths. Lunch will be our final meal together. No previous experience necessary. Complete equipment list will be sent on registration. $350

The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples

This workshop will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery, as well as gestalt awareness methods.

Humor and the Creative Process

All of us at one time or another become so identified with a role or concept we have of ourselves that we become stuck and unable to see beyond where we are. We lose perspective. Salting our lives with humor brings us into a balanced relation to conflict and problems.

The dynamics of humor intimately parallel the creative process and our ability to create. Those humorous moments that extricate us from a stuck situation are similar to the creative insight or "aha" experience, in which we see the whole or larger context. In this workshop we will penetrate into the nature of humor, using humor as both a metaphor to deepen our understanding of the creative process, and as a vehicle to further develop the qualities of perspective, wisdom, joy, and spontaneity.

The format of this intensive program will be geared for those who are willing to play, risk, and penetrate into the restrictive elements in their process that would tend to retard the "ha ha" or "aha." $200

Massage for Couples

This group is for partners (spouses, friends, lovers, or good neighbors) who would like a weekend to melt down, cool out, and lighten up with each other. We will ease into ourselves with massage, tantra, dance, chanting, and other effortless delights. Leave behind your schedules and duties and bring along someone you trust. $200 per person

The Gentle Art of Becoming—Together: A Workshop for Couples

For workshop description see Westerbeke Ranch Programs, May 22-25. $200 per person

August 21-23 Jack Downing

The Life of Joy: New Attitudes for Health and Sanity

Whatever your past has been, if you wish you can determine what you are now, and will be in the future. With greater awareness you have greater choice. The program will include methods for reprogramming your own biocomputer, moderate exercise, and meditation. $200

August 23-28
Anne & Jim Armstrong

A Psychic Training Program

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own psi abilities. Anne and Jim will use exercises and training methods to accomplish this goal. During the training exercises Anne will use her own "tracking" abilities acquired from over twenty years in this field to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their style and trust the psychic input they normally receive. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $400

August 23-28 David Schiffman

The Centered Equestrian: Riding from the Heart

The relationship between horse and rider is a remarkable combination of emotional poise, physical courage, skillful use of the will, and just plain old "horse sense." Our focus together will be on how to deepen our mastery of these qualities. Using a variety of practices including structural patterning, creative movement and visualization, basic riding skills, and group process, we will spend the week finding ways to deepen the experience of pleasure and harmony between ourselves as a group, with our horses, and with the beauty of our natural surroundings. No previous riding experience is necessary. $600

September 4-7 Harry Sloan & David Schiffman

A Light and Gentle Approach to Group Process and Individual Growth

In this three-day weekend celebration, two old and dear friends will rejoin forces to share with you what they have learned during 25 years of combined experience doing human potential practice work. Using a light touch and lots of laughter, they will bring together elements from psychosynthesis, gestalt, and bioenergetics, along with movement, music, and guided imagery. The group will have the opportunity to explore exercises and meditations that will open and deepen us to the experience of what we find meaningful.

It will be a time to explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical, and mental potentials and how they effect our sexuality, our relations to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of our selves and others. The emphasis throughout will be on how to create a gently buoyant perspective that will bring lightness and humor into our life and work. $250

Getting Well Again:
A Workshop for Cancer Patients and People with Other Life-Threatening Illnesses

This workshop is designed to help cancer patients, persons with other life-threatening illnesses, and significant others in their lives explore the role of attitudes, beliefs, and emotions in the onset and outcome of their disease. Processes will be taught linking the participants' reactions to stressful events in their lives and the course of their illness, as well as self-help methods utilizing the power of their minds in aiding their bodies' ability to vitalize their own healing energies, as well as increase the potency of medical treatment which they are already receiving.

The fear of death and dying and important relationships will also be explored openly, honestly, and in depth. Radix practices will be utilized to aid exploration of feelings, and regular massage will be administered to deepen and enhance the relaxation methods being taught. Self-help workbooks and tapes will be available to enable participants to continue reinforcing the processes learned in the workshop as they reenter life united in mind, body, spirit, and emotions. Reading requirements: Getting Well Again (Simonton & Creighton) and Feeling Good—How to Stay Healthy (Emmett Miller). $400

October 2-4 Lee Pulos

Hypnosis & Parapsychology

All participants will be taught to experience beginning and advanced methods of self-hypnosis. There will be a number of opportunities throughout the workshop to practice hypnosis for personal habit changes and to learn how to use hypnotic uncovering practices such as automatic writing and ideo-motor questioning. In addition to brief lecturettes explaining and de-mystifying hypnosis, the 'fun' part of the workshop will be the exploratory use of hypnosis as a bridge to other realities. Trance states for opening up psychic and telepathic channels will be experienced and these will lead into turning one's visions inward to the possibility of multiple dimensions and existences. A feature of the workshop will be to teach how to use hypnosis for health maintenance. $200

Films and Tapes

Tape Recordings of Human Potential Programs

The human potential movement continues to have unusual events which produce unusual recordings. Each issue of the Esalen Catalog lists a number of new titles and several from earlier years. Most are stereo, and all are recorded from live events. Available on cassettes only, each tape is $9.00 ($10.00 by purchase order) and length of recordings is normally 1 to 1½ hours.

David Schiffman: Group Process: Gestalt Etiquette
Alan Schwartz: Introjection and Our Energy Systems
Ken Dychtwald: Strategies for Stress Management
Franklin Merrell-Wolff: A Primitive View of the World
Daniel Bianchetta: A Story for Dylan

Rollo May & Daniel Ellsberg: Good and Evil
Ram Dass: Hang On Tightly, Let Go Lightly
Andrew Weil: Altered States Without Drugs
Linus Pauling: Vitamin C and Cancer
Al Drucker: Homeopathic Medicine

Huston Smith: The Nature of Reality
Jean Houston: (2 tapes) The Possible Human I-II
Peter Schwartz: Qualities of Life
Hazel Henderson: Politics of Reconceptualization
Bob Schwartz: Consciousness Evolution & American Business

Jack Kornfield: The Sword of Wisdom
Prem Das: The Singing Earth: A Huichol Apprenticeship
Christina Grof: Kundalini Awakening and Spiritual Emergency
James Fadiman: Sufi Stories
Fritjof Capra: Matter, Mind, and Energy

Please add $2.00 to your order for mailing. California residents include 6% tax. Mail order with check payable: WORKSHOP CASSETTES, Hot Springs Lodge, Big Sur, California 93920. Suggestions regarding recordings are appreciated.

The Dolphin Tapes (complete sets in vinyl albums)

Barbara Clemans: Explorations In Movement (3 tapes 6 lessons) $30 ($34 by purchase order)
Joseph Campbell & Al Huang: Movement And Myth To Live By (4 tapes 6 hours) $40 ($44)
Esalen 1979-1980 Stress And Caring Conferences (10 tapes 14 hours) $80 ($88)
Fritz Perls: The Perls Encounter: A Complete Weekend Seminar (6 tapes 9 hours) $60 ($66)
Moshe Feldenkrais: Awareness Through Movement; The Feldenkrais Method (6 tapes 10 lessons) $72 ($80)
Ruthy Alon: Awareness Through Movement; The Feldenkrais Method (6 tapes 12 lessons) $60 ($66)
Ken Dychtwald: Bodymind Health, Longevity, and Optimal Performance (8 tapes 8 hours) $80 ($88)
Julian Silverman: Commentaries on A Course In Miracles (8 tapes 10 hours) $72 ($80)
Buckminster Fuller: The Pajaro Dunes Tapes: A Weekend Seminar (8 tapes 12 hours) $80 ($88)
Joseph Campbell: World Mythology And The Individual Adventure (10 tapes 15 hours) $80 ($88)

Please add $2.00 to your order for mailing. California residents include 6% tax. Mail order with check payable: DOLPHIN TAPES, Hot Springs Lodge, Big Sur, California 93920.

Gregory Bateson Archive Tapes: "The Informal Esalen Lectures" (1975-1980)

With Gregory Bateson's passing, these recordings are now part of his estate. Radio broadcast, transcription, or publication of material from the tapes is expressly forbidden without permission from the estate.

Metaphors and Butterflies	May 1975	Interfaces: Boundaries Which connect	Feb 1980
The Story of the Double Bind	May 1976	It Used To Matter	Mar 1980
The Pattern Which Connects	Dec 1978	Simple Thinking	Apr 1980
What Is Epistemology?	Sep 1979	Neither Mechanical Nor Supernatural	Apr 1980
(2 tapes) Civilization and Addiction	Nov 1979	(2 tapes) It Takes Two To Know One	May 1980

The above complete set of twelve tapes comes in a vinyl album, accompanied by a summary of the contents of each recording prepared by a Bateson scholar and friend, plus a few other pages. Titles may be ordered separately at $9 per tape ($10 by purchase order), but the complete set of 12 is $88 ($98 by purchase order). Please add $2 to your order for mailing. In California include 6% tax. Write check payable: Dolphin Tapes, Hot Springs Lodge, Big Sur, California 93920.

Recordings from the Early Years

A catalog of tapes from the early years of Esalen's history as well as the human potential movement generally, is available for $1.00 from: Big Sur Recordings, PO Box 91, Big Sur, California 93920. Commercial use of Esalen program tapes is prohibited; all rights are reserved.

Films

Films of the work of Fritz Perls, Carl Rogers, Abraham Maslow, Rollo May, Virginia Satir, Alexander Lowen, and others are available from Psychological Films, 110 North Wheeler Street, Orange, California 92669. For color documentaries with Alan Watts, Huston Smith, Lama Govinda, Joseph Campbell, Edgar Mitchell, Margaret Mead, and others, write to Hartley Productions, Cat Rock Road, Cos Cob, Connecticut 06807. For a list of other humanistic film sources, write Association for Humanistic Psychology, 325 Ninth Street, San Francisco, California 94103. A film of Al Huang's work, T'ai Chi: The Watercourse Way, is available through KLB Productions, 490 Redwood Road, Corralitos, California 95076. Regarding the forthcoming documentary on Gregory Bateson, address inquiries to The Pattern Which Connects, PO Box 8, Forest Knolls, California 94933: (415) 488-0135.

The Esalen Catalog

THE ESALEN CATALOG is published quarterly. Subscription cost for one year is $6 for the United States, $9 for Canada and Mexico, $12 for Europe and South America, and $14 for all other countries. Please make all payments in U.S. currency. A single inspection copy of the current issue is available upon request from Esalen Institute, Big Sur, Ca. 93920.

☐ To obtain future issues of the Esalen Catalog and occasional mailings for one year, please send a check or money order in U.S. currency only to: Esalen Institue, Big Sur, Ca. 93920.

(Note: People who attend an Esalen workshop or conference will receive a free subscription for one year.)

Friends of Esalen

Friends of Esalen provides financial aid to people who are eager to attend our workshops but who cannot afford them.

We believe that one of our first priorities is to make our programs available on a broader basis. We have therefore decided to use membership contributions to fund such scholarships.

In addition to knowing that you have given someone else the opportunity to experience Esalen, you will receive regular mailings of the Esalen catalogs. We hope you feel your experience at Esalen was worth the sharing and that you will join us in extending Esalen into the lives of other people.

Registration Information

Esalen lies 300 miles north of Los Angeles and 175 miles south of San Francisco. It is directly over the shoreline of the Pacific with the Santa Lucia Range rising sharply behind. The property, which has natural hot baths, was once the home of a North American Indian tribe known as Esselen.

We are a 45-mile drive south from Monterey, 11 miles south of Nepenthe, on California Coast Route 1. From the south, we are 50 miles north of San Simeon. A lighted sign on the ocean side of the highway reads: Esalen Institute-By Reservation Only.

Reservation Information: in order to reserve a space in any workshop we require a reservation fee of $50 for weekend groups, $100 for five-day groups, $200 for two-week groups, $300 for three-week groups, and $400 for month-long groups, payable in U.S. currency only. Balance of payment is due on arrival. These fees are not refundable but, with five days' notice, may be transferred to other Esalen programs, to be used within one year of receipt.

Please mail all reservations to: Reservations, Esalen Institute, Big Sur, Ca. 93920

Reservations by telephone: You may make reservations by phone if you use your Mastercharge, BankAmericard, or American Express credit card number to charge your reservation fee.

Phone (408) 667-2335 Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday 9 to 3
Wednesday 9 to 12 Noon
Friday 9 to 8 PM
Sunday 12 Noon to 8

Senior Citizens' Discount Information: For individuals over 60 years of age, Esalen will be offering a special discount beginning July 1, 1981. The price of a weekend workshop will be $185, and a five-day will be $370. Please telephone or write the Esalen office for further information.

Scholarship Information: If you need scholarship assistance for an Esalen program, write for a scholarship application form before making a reservation. Allow at least three weeks for processing as we have many applications. If your application is approved, please make a reservation as soon as possible after receiving notice. No scholarship assistance is available for June 15-September 15 programs or for weekend programs.

Ongoing Residence Program: Offered from September through May, the Ongoing Residential Program is designed for those who would like to have time and space in the Esalen environment for an intensive workshop program over a long term. A minimum stay: 26 days (or four "weeks" and three weekends).

Participants may select any of the five-day workshops offered during their stay. Weekend workshops are available at special prices. Some programs are cancelled, so second choices are advised. Some special staff programs may also be open to residents. The cost is $1600 per 26-day period.

Room and Board: Bed spaces not required for workshop participants are sometimes available for room and board. Accommodations are shared and the rate is $55 per person per day, which includes dinner on the day of arrival and breakfast and lunch the following day. Private rooms are sometimes available at $70 per day, or $105 per day per couple. Please phone the office for additional information.

General Information: Workshop fees cover tuition, food, and lodging. Rooms are shared by two or three workshop participants. Camping on the grounds is prohibited.

Weekend programs begin with dinner on Friday and end with lunch on Sunday. Five-day and longer programs begin with dinner on Sunday and end with lunch on Friday. Rooms become available at 5 pm; however, guests are welcome to arrive any time after lunch.

Esalen's flourishing organic garden provides the kitchen with many of its vegetables and herbs. Our breads and pastries are made by Esalen bakers.

Limousine Service: Those traveling by air or bus can obtain limousine service to Esalen by notifying the office of time of arrival. Pickups are made at the Monterey Airport and the Greyhound terminal at 5 pm each Sunday and Friday. The cost is $15 per person one way, payable on arrival at Esalen. Esalen limousine service is not available at any other time.

Seminarians as Staff (Karma Yoga): Seminarians in residence at Esalen are expected to contribute several hours per week to work with the staff, usually in the kitchen. Your help enables us to meet the pressures of peak working times and enables you to experience Esalen from the inside out. A staff member will appear at your first workshop meeting to schedule volunteer help.

Accreditation: At present, we do not offer accreditation in the form of certificates or diplomas, such as those conferred by traditional schools. Many formal educational institutions do recognize the time spent at Esalen as being worthy of credit in their own curriculum. Check with your university or college for further information. We would be glad to supply information to your school regarding any of our programs or series of programs.

Contributions to Esalen Institute are tax-deductible.

The expenses of attending Esalen, including travel, are deductible for federal income tax purposes as an educational expense if incurred to maintain or improve professional or work skills. (See Income Tax Regulation 1.162-5.)

Esalen Institute is a center to explore those trends in education, religion, philosophy, and the physical and behavioral sciences which emphasize the potentialities and values of human existence. Our activities consist of seminars and workshops, residential programs, consulting, and research.

We exist to sponsor, encourage, synthesize, and prompt evaluation of work in these areas, both inside and outside our own organizational framework. Since we are a center for experimental education, we ask that persons come to our programs out of an educational interest. We ask that no one come whose interest is "cure." We point out here, as we have in workshops and seminars, that some people, particularly those with a history of psychiatric problems, may find some programs difficult, trying, or potentially risky. We recommend that in case of any doubt, a physician or trusted counselor be consulted.

THE SULPHUR BATHS

Henry Miller lived in Big Sur from 1944-1962 and described his life there in BIG SUR AND THE ORANGES OF HIERONYMUS BOSCH. Here follows another Miller piece written during his Big Sur Years.

When you are planning that trip from the wilds of Alaska to the wilds of Patagonia, along international route No. 1., be sure to make provision for a stop-off at Slate's (sic) Hot Springs, about three miles south of Anderson Creek where the editor of this Guide lives. Here you will find a spa which has not yet become internationally famous, chiefly because it has not been commercially exploited. (Founded some 50 years ago by Dr. H. C. Murphy of Salinas, it remains to-day almost the way it was when that wise physician made use of its therapeutic value in treating his patients.) Physicians themselves have come here to cure themselves of rheumatism, arthritis and kindred ailments — by drinking and bathing in the hot mineral waters.

William Webb

The bath-tubs are situated on a platform a few feet above the sea, protected only by a shed above. One can bathe thus, outdoors, any time of the year without the slightest risk of catching cold. Sleeping benches are provided for sun baths after a thorough soaking. To right and left stretches an incomparable panorama of mountain, forest and sea. The relaxation induced by the warm waters and the solar rays accounts for much of the cures which are effected.

An added factor, and a most important one, is the almost complete privacy which one is privileged to enjoy. There are no attendants, no masseurs, no swimming pool, no miniature golf course. And seldom any one to share your siesta with. You are alone with nature and your own thoughts; you can dream to your heart's content or idle away the time watching the gulls, the seals, or the ubiquitous kelp. If you wish to stay overnight, cabins and meals are available at modest rates. The cooking is especially good and has the home touch. There are no radios or television sets in the cabins. You will have no need of them either, for when you retire after a day at the baths you fall off immediately and sleep a dreamless sleep.

Some people come merely to get rid of a hang-over; some because they are fed up, sick of it all. But no matter for what reason one comes one leaves feeling like a new being and ready to face the new day with vigor and confidence. Some return to spend their vacation at the baths, knowing from experience that here they may really enjoy peace and solitude. One thing is certain, if you can stay a month and take the waters, you are almost certain never to visit a doctor again. The real danger is that, having once enjoyed a full measure of health, inner and outer, you may never return to your old ways.

As every one knows, the Greeks and the Romans, who were addicted, so to speak, to open air baths, were convinced that the waters not only healed and rejuvenated but increased one's virility. Even when, out of boredom, they committed suicide in the warm baths one must agree that they did it in the most delicious way. Not that we recommend the baths as a way out but only to contrast the art of living and dying as practised by the ancients with our own crude ways.

To the best of our knowledge no one has even thought of opening his veins at the Hot Springs, nor has any one been bitten by a rattlesnake, nor has a loosened boulder come crashing through the shed and squashed him like a bed-bug. At the worst one may find a tick or two in his clothes on retiring, but when one is thoroughly relaxed and at peace with the world, even a blood-sucking leech seems like less than a trifle.

We urge you to visit the baths before any grand improvements are made. Every year there is a rumor that the establishment will be completely renovated, but to date nothing has happened. The chances are that the baths will remain in their present state long after you are dead, long after the whole white race is extinguished. But before you die, before you concede that your problems are insoluble, try a week at Slate's Springs. It may alter the course of your whole life. It may not only cure your complaints, real or imaginary, but it may push you into a new way of life based on relaxation, tolerance and purposelessness.

THE SOVIET-AMERICAN EXCHANGE PROGRAM

By Michael Murphy & James Hickman

Mary Payne

Joseph Goldin (with microphone) and Jim Hickman respond to questions from the audience.

Since 1971, we have been interested in Soviet research programs that relate to human potentials. In our judgement these programs form a significant cultural development in the USSR, one that is similar to the human potential movement in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. Because this movement in the West has not been adequately understood by social historians, its counterpart in the Soviet Union goes largely unnoticed. Yet it is growing and we feel it should be appreciated. We feel it is a hopeful development because Soviet research of this kind will contribute to our understanding of the higher human possibilities. In addition, their work and ours can lead to cultural and scientific exchanges that might help to promote understanding and friendship between our nations.

Recently, Esalen initiated a Soviet-American exchange program to encourage the dissemination of information, the sponsorship of seminars, and the promotion of dialogues among scientists in these areas. Four of us have traveled to the USSR to attend scientific conferences and initiate future programs. In October, 1979, Jim Hickman and Mary Payne attended a conference on the unconscious in Tbilisi, Georgia. There they met Joseph Goldin, Scientific Secretary of the USSR Academy of Sciences' Commission for the Complex Study of Man, who is coordinating investigations into those human potentials the Soviets call "hidden reserves." Goldin arranged that we represent Esalen Institute at the International Conference on Sports and Modern Society that was held in conjunction with the 1980 Olympic Games. As guests of the Soviet Sports Committee, we were featured speakers at the conference, discussing the role of mind in exceptional physical performance. With Dulce Murphy and Mary Payne, we stayed in the Soviet Union for six weeks during July and August, 1980, meeting with scientists, journalists, artists, athletes, and political analysts who want to cooperate in a variety of Soviet-American projects.

There is a remarkable symmetry, we discovered, between Soviet and American interests in these fields. The Soviet term "hidden reserves," for example, is almost identical to the American "human potential" as a guiding idea. Soviet concern with "maximum performance" resembles American studies of "peak experience." Soviet research on "bioplasma," "biophysical effects," and "distant bioinformation interactions" resemble American studies of "energy fields," "dowsing," and "remote viewing." Here are some further examples of this symmetry:

- A significant portion of the medical community is actively pursuing a variety of alternatives to traditional health care. Their interests include homeopathy, acupuncture, psychic healing, biofeedback, physiological self control, and herbal medicine. In a recent editorial, the Minister of Health of the USSR emphasized the importance of studying healthy individuals to better understand disease.

- Interest in spiritual (or "mind-assisted") healing is widespread. A recent television special on this subject (in which Hickman appeared) was broadcast through the Soviet Union. Under sponsorship of the Ministry of Health a clinic is being constructed in Moscow where citizens can be treated by spiritual healers.

- The USSR Academy of Sciences' Commission for the Complex Study of Man recently sponsored a series of eight lectures on the relationship between sports and hidden human reserves. The speakers included atheletes, coaches, and scientists. Each lecture was attended by more than one thousand people.

- Several institutes are studying clairvoyance and psychokinesis. At Kazakh State University, Victor Inyushin and his colleagues are applying their studies of the "bio-field" to various agricultural and medical projects with apparent success. Some 5,000 people are treated at one of their centers each year. Inyushin links his work with the research of Alexander Romen, a pioneer in Psychical Self Regulation (PSR). PSR is defined by Romen as "a direct, purposeful regulation of the various actions, reactions, and processes of an organism realized by means of its own psychic (mental) activity." His system is a synthesis of yoga, hypnosis, autogenic training, and the martial arts.

- In Moscow, Dr. Igor Charkovsky teaches infants to swim. He believes that newborn children are natural swimmers and that through regular swimming exercises they will live longer and healthier lives than their nonaquatic counterparts. A recent study conducted by the Moscow Public Health Office showed that 18 out of 100 baby swimmers had slight colds during a particular year as compared with 82 nonswimmers who experienced heavy colds.

• Life After Life, Raymond Moody's bestselling American book on near-death experiences, has become a national bestseller in the USSR. The experience of continued consciousness after clinical death has been widely reported in the Soviet Union by patients who are brought back to life. Apparently the attending physicians and nurses are fascinated with the similarities between Moody's reports and their own observations.

• Thousands of Soviet citizens are reading such contemporary Western literature of transcendence and human potential as the books of Carlos Castaneda, John Lilly, Abraham Maslow, and Fritz Perls. Literature on yoga, Sufism, Cabala, lost knowledge of ancient civilizations, and other esoteric subjects finds a wide audience. We met several hundred people interested in these ideas and occasionally stayed up through the night in conversation with them. We were surprised by their relative freedom to explore such subjects, a dramatic change from visits we made to the USSR in 1971 and 1972.

UPDATE

James Hickman

As director of the Esalen Institute Soviet-American Exchange Program, I traveled to Moscow in January, 1981, to meet with personnel from several Soviet research institutes to discuss the possibility of an exchange over the next five years. My visit coincided with an educational experiment that took 200 Muscovites on an "Expedition to the Hidden Human Reserves." This event was a 12 hour experience to explore the dimensions of human physical, mental, and psychic capacities. Sponsored by the Cultural Department of the Municipality of Moscow and organized by Joseph Goldin, Scientific Secretary of the USSR Academy of Sciences' Commission for the Complex Study of Man, the "expedition" was conceived as the launching of an international exploration of neglected human potentials.

Formally the "expedition" constituted a series of dramatic events. Children demonstrated their athletic prowess by maneuvering through a rope "jungle" and exhibited their creativity with music, painting, and architectural designs. This stimulated a lively discussion on guidelines for developing a child's psychic and physical abilities and how to apply this particular experience to everyday life.

Several scientists gave short lectures about theoretical and practical approaches to developing hidden reserves. The audience's favorite was Cosmonaut Gretchko, Soviet Commander of the Appollo-Soyuz Space Flight, who emphasized the importance of developing "hidden human reserve capacities" in such fields as creativity, accelerated learning, non-traditional healing, stress management, and sports. I presented a slide-lecture about Esalen and, with Joseph Goldin, answered questions from the audience. At regular intervals a Moscow psychologist led relaxation exercises to relieve the group's fatigue.

In reflecting on that day I feel that I witnessed a unique moment in Soviet cultural history. A journalist, writing in the Soviet magazine Weekly, described the event as follows: "To evoke physical and psychic abilities doesn't infer turning every man into a genius. There are no tools or methods available to achieve that. . .But when hidden capacities reveal themselves in millions of people at one time, Humankind will acquire a new quality. I like to think that when, many years after, somebody asks what happened on that winter Saturday in 1981 a knowledgable person will answer: On January 17, 1981, this Moscow expedition started man on the voyage to his own self."

ESALEN AND ENERGY INDEPENDENCE

Jane English

Planning, engineering, and analyzing the Esalen Energy Program.

Esalen has developed and embarked on a cost effective energy program designed to drastically reduce outside energy purchases over the next several years while preserving the exquisite environmental specialness that is Esalen. Following a six-month study period, during which electric watt meters were installed on various buildings and appliances to measure electric power consumption, and propane gas meters were installed to measure propane consumption, a composite tabulation of all Esalen's energy requirements was obtained. An engineering analysis and exploration was then conducted to examine the economics and feasibility of alternative methods of supplying this energy, including solar, geothermal, wind, conservation methods, reduced consumption through insulation, and hydroelectric power generation. That investigation resulted in a four-element program approved in principle by the managers and trustees of Esalen. These four elements are as follows:

1) Geothermal space heating and hot shower needs.
All space heating and hot shower needs would be provided geothermally by excess hot springs water overflowing from the hot baths. The hot springs would flow through a heat exchanger, transferring heat to fresh water which in turn would be circulated by a small pump around the entire Esalen property. This hot water would enter each building and heat the rooms by means of a fin-and-tube heat exchanger. Since the hot springs are 117°F leaving the ground, and after all pipe losses are considered, a minimum water temperature of 100°F became the design criteria. Technical people familiar with heat transfer will recognize that this is far too low a temperature for practical room heating using conventional water fin-and-tube heaters. Enter a gifted Esalen work-scholar, David Pilati, with a Ph.D. in nuclear engineering. Working with a labor of love, a new fin-and-tube room heat exchanger was designed specifically for the low temperature water existing at Esalen and thus has made possible a practical means to heat all the buildings at Esalen. To verify the correctness of the design, a test laboratory was constructed in the Esalen swimming pool pump house, and various models of the new, quiet, low temperature fin-and-tube room heaters are presently being tested. At this writing, all systems look "go" for successful completion of testing by early summer, 1981.

The same circulating fresh hot water will supply the shower needs for all the rooms at Esalen.

Basically, the hot springs heat exchanger concept has been successfully utilized for the past three years in heating the Esalen swimming pool. Extension of that principle to space heating awaited only the development of a low temperature fin-and-tube room heater.

2) Solar hot water space heating for South Coast.
The space heating for South Coast would be converted to solar heated hot water, backed up by the existing propane system when the sun is obscured. The solar panels used in the system would be constructed by work-scholars assigned to the energy project approximately one year hence. Energy will be stored in the form of hot water in an insulated tank and extracted at night. A three-day energy supply can be stored in this manner.

3) Propane-powered, six-month electrical power generator.
With all space and hot water energy needs supplied geothermally on the Esalen property, the remaining small electrical needs for lights and motors can be supplied by an engine-driven electric generator fueled by stored propane.

The existing propane tanks on the Esalen property have sufficient capacity to provide six months of electricity even if all outside sources of electricity are interrupted. It is planned to continue to purchase the small amount of electricity required and maintain the stored propane for emergency use.

4) Optional hydro-generated electricity.
The engineering design to generate electric power by means of a hydraulic turbine (pelton wheel) driving an electric generator has been completed. The Esalen creek would supply the hydraulic power. Data has been taken for the past 1½ years on water flow rate and that data indicates all our electrical power needs can be net from this source. The water flow rate varies, however, by a factor of 10 to 1 from the winter, when it rains, to the summer, when rain is a rarity and the creek flow rate is at a minimum.

Two system designs are possible. The first is a minimum power design which would operate all year by diverting 50% of the creek water flow into a plastic pipe, approximately 12 inches in diameter, and delivering this water to the hydroelectric generator. The generator would be located below the Big House at the creek-bed level and be contained in a totally foliage-hidden, small building approximately 6 × 10 × 8 feet. Operation of the generator would be entirely noiseless. The discharge water from the turbine would be returned to the creek bed at this point and would proceed naturally to the ocean, its original destination, with no chemical change or contamination of any kind. Only the falling or potential energy has been extracted to generate the electricity. The pipe would begin approximately 800 feet upstream from the creek bridge and would be anchored into the canyon wall, well above the creek bed on the south side. Every attempt would be made to camouflage the pipe with natural vegetation, and it is felt that the pipe, as it emerges from the canyon and proceeds to its termination below the Big House, would be covered with ivy and rendered totally invisible within 12 months. Indeed, the only noticeable environmental impact of the system would be the reduction, by half, of the creek water level and waterfall flow rate during the summer months.

The second system design is a maximum power design which would operate only during the winter months when the creek flow rate is very high and the creek is in essentially a flood stage. The system would be shut off from approximately April to November, thereby eliminating any impact on the creek or waterfall during the low flow summer months. While in operation, however, the system would produce 3-4 times more electricity than required for current consumption, the balance being sold to Pacific Gas and Electric (PG & E), and credited to our account. During the summer months, when the system is inoperative, electricity would be supplied by PG & E and our account debited. Should PG & E power be interrupted for any reason, the propane-powered generator would automatically take up the load.

The discussions of the merits of each system or even whether the creek should be altered in any way to produce electricity will make for a lively discussion among the residents of Esalen. In any event, the soft technology approach using the bountiful resources existing at Esalen give rise to an exciting future for Esalen and its possible energy independence. Raman (Jose Mozic)

PREDICTABLE AND UNPREDICTABLE EFFECTS OF NUCLEAR WAR

The following piece is from the proceedings of the first congress of the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, Airlie, Virginia, March 20-25, 1981.

The consequences of the nuclear attack on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were disastrous. Yet even they do not serve as adequate precedents for the amount of death and destruction that would follow nuclear warfare today. Given any scenario of a massive nuclear strike in present conditions, the fate of the inhabitants of those two cities would be shared by tens to hundreds of millions of people. Even a single one-megaton nuclear bomb explosion (80 times more powerful than that dropped on Hiroshima) over an urban area would cause death and injury to people on a scale unprecedented in the history of mankind and would present any remaining medical services with insoluble problems. In the event of a major nuclear war there would be thousands of such explosions.

We must distinguish between the immediate and the delayed effects of nuclear war. Among the immediate effects are mass deaths in the first hours, days and weeks after an explosion. These are caused by the simultaneous effects of blast, heat, and large doses of penetrating radiation. The numbers of such deaths would be magnified catastrophically by the destruction of buildings, by secondary fires, by disruption of all life-support systems including electric power, communication, and transportation, and by the destruction and contamination of the water supply and of foodstocks.

It is difficult for us, as physicians, to describe adequately the human suffering that would ensue. Hundreds of thousands would suffer third-degree burns, multiple crushing injuries and fractures, hemorrhage, secondary infection, and combinations of all of these. When we contemplate disasters, we often assume that abundant medical resources and personnel will be available. But contemporary nuclear war would inevitably destroy hospitals and other medical facilities, kill and disable most medical personnel, and prevent surviving physicians from coming to the aid of the injured because of widespread radiation dangers. The hundreds of thousands of burned and otherwise wounded people would not have any medical care as we now conceive of it: no morphine for pain, no intravenous fluids, no emergency surgery, no antibiotics, no dressings, no skilled nursing, and little or no food or water. The survivors will envy the dead.

It is known from the Japanese experience that in the immediate aftermath of an explosion, and for many months thereafter, the survivors suffer not only from their physical injuries — radiation sickness, burns, and other trauma — but also from profound psychological shock caused by their exposure to such overwhelming destruction and mass death. The problem is social as well as individual. The social fabric upon which human existence depends would be irreparably damaged.

Those who did not perish during the initial attack would face serious — even lifelong — dangers. Many exposed persons would be at increased risk, throughout the remainder of their lives, of leukemia and a variety of malignant tumors. The risk is emotional as well as physical. Tens of thousands would live with the fear of developing cancer or of transmitting genetic defects, for they would understand that nuclear weapons, unlike conventional weapons, have memories — long, radioactive memories. Children are known to be particularly susceptible to most of these effects. Exposure of fetuses would result in the birth of children with small head size, mental retardation, and impaired growth and development. Many exposed persons would develop radiation cataracts and chromosomal aberrations.

Delayed radioactive fallout from multiple nuclear detonations would render large areas of land uninhabitable for prolonged periods of time, making it impossible to produce the food upon which the survival of whole populations would depend. Aside from the severe effects in the areas most immediately affected by explosion or local fallout, there would occur effects from both ground and air bursts throughout the world. Fallout would increase the incidence of cancers and of genetic defects in nations and populations far from the target areas. These and other effects are difficult to quantify, but it is known that they would occur.

The use of nuclear weapons with an aggregate yield greatly exceeding that of all the explosions (including atomic explosions) in human history poses dangers to the entire planet, and to all of mankind. Among these are profound disruptions of the ecological balance: disturbances to all living organisms, crops, and the atmosphere, with consequences of a nature and magnitude we can only guess at. For example, the release into the atmosphere of large quantities of oxides of nitrogen, formed during multiple nuclear explosions, could disturb the ozone layer of the atmosphere, which protects the surface of the earth from the penetrating component of ultraviolet radiation, and this would probably cause the death of vegetation and animals, and injury to people. In the magnitude, duration, and variety of the dangers it poses to biological and social survival, nuclear war has no precedent in the experience of mankind. The survival of civilized life is at stake.

In one likely and specific scenario that we have considered, an all-out nuclear war between the United States and the Soviet Union in the mid-1980's, it is likely that

1) the population will be devastated.
   - Over 200,000,000 men, women, and children will be killed immediately.
   - Over 60,000 will be injured.
   - Among the injured, 30,000,000 will experience radiation sickness

Steve Beck

20,000,000 will experience trauma and burns.
10,000,000 will experience trauma, burns, and radiation sickness.

2) Medical resources will be incapable of coping with those injured by blast, thermal energy, and radiation.
   - 80% of physicians will die.
   - 80% of hospital beds will be destroyed.
   - Stores of blood plasma, antibiotics, and drugs will be destroyed or severely compromised.
   - Food and water will be extensively contaminated.
   - Transportation and communication facilities will be destroyed.

3) The effect on adjacent countries is incalculable.

4) Civil defense will be unable to alter the death and devastation described above to any appreciable extent.

5) The disaster will have continuing consequences.
   - Food production will be profoundly altered.
   - Fallout will constitute a continuing problem.
   - Survivors with altered immunity, malnutrition, an unsanitary environment, and severe exposure problems will be subject to lethal enteric infections.

6) Profound changes in weather caused by particulates and reduction of atmospheric ozone with attendant alterations in man, animal, and plant species may be anticipated.

7) Among long-term survivors, a striking increase in leukemia and other malignancies will be observed, most severe in those who are children at the time of exposure.

WHO'S RESPONSIBLE AT ESALEN

We have long regarded Esalen Institute as an educational laboratory. Our evolving philosophical and operational positions reflect this regard. Underlying it all is a baseline ethic of "self-awareness and self-responsibility," the basis for our world view and our educational approach. The self-awareness/self-responsibility ethic has grown and stabilized out of at least two generations of weighty disillusioning social and political events—all connected by a common reminder: Give away your personal faculties of discernment, of evaluation, of self-reference, and you lose your integrity, your wholeness. "Take responsibility for your every thought, your every feeling, your every action," said Fritz Perls. We view the implications of this position as being social as well as personal. They concern the ways we relate to ourselves and others.

In our position as educators, we invite people to take responsibility for their whole life situation while at Esalen. This includes taking responsibility for who they select as their teachers, their leaders, their gurus, their authority figures, and so on—and to be aware, whenever possible, of what effect this has on them. We, of necessity, are setting up a situation for our seminarians to learn the practice of self-responsibility from the time they consider selecting a workshop, not just during the workshop. Ideally the same attitude will pervade after a workshop when our seminarians go back to the community.

As we have become more thoughtful and self-critical about the overall direction of Esalen, we have begun to concentrate on enhancing our basic offering—the Esalen environment and life style. Our primary emphasis is not on teaching particular truths or personal and interpersonal techniques for daily life; rather our primary concern is with a particular consciousness and developing an environment to support the evolution of that consciousness—the consciousness of self-awareness/self-responsibility.

Esalen Seminars

Ways of Being at Esalen

There are various ways to experience Esalen, ranging from a visit to the hot springs on a week-night to a long-term stay as a student or resident. The weekend and five-day workshops described throughout the catalog are the standard route for coming to Esalen and learning the various methods of personal growth and self-exploration that are available here. The Experiencing Esalen workshops are a kind of smorgasbord introduction to some of these many practices (such as gestalt, massage, sensory awareness, etc.); from such a sampling, the participant can then choose that approach which feels most appropriate and pursue it in subsequent seminars. For those who wish an extended stay of a month or more, there is an Ongoing Residence Program. Other long-term programs include the "month-longs" coordinated by individuals such as Stan Grof and David Schiffman, which frequently involve didactic seminars as well as experiential workshops. These can be particularly useful for professionals and graduate students.

A very popular way of being at Esalen, and one that allows a much greater involvement with the place and its community at a lower expense, is the Work-Study Program, which entails working with the Esalen staff as well as participating in an on-going workshop designed specifically for that program. See page 37 for more information and an application form.

In addition, there are other events which enrich life at Esalen. There are frequent forums which various writers and thinkers, both visiting and resident, share their ideas with the community. On Wednesday nights, there are lectures, films, dance performances, choirs, puppet shows, or other forms of entertainment. Bodywork of various kinds is available by appointment with individual practitioners, including massage, deep-tissue, polarity, and rolfing. Individual sessions are also available for various types of process work, including gestalt, neo-Reichian emotional release, vision improvement, music gestalt, etc. Finally, there is a Community Workshop program which goes on daily, and provides many opportunities for engaging in personal self-exploration or learning new approaches to human growth.

Experiencing Esalen

Experiencing Esalen Staff
Coordinated by Janet Zuckerman Boeve

These workshops are designed for people who have not previously been to Esalen/Big Sur. The emphasis is on finding those approaches to self-awareness that work most effectively for the individual participant. Some of the following experiences are available at each Experiencing Esalen workshop: sensory awareness, gestalt awareness training, encounter, guided fantasy, meditation, massage. There is time to experience and explore the natural magnificence of the Big Sur coast.

Gestalt practice is a form — nonanalytic, noncoercive, non-judgmental — evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls, relating that work to ways of personal clearing and development both ancient and modern. To the extent that awareness is made primary relative to action, gestalt practice has a strong relationship to some forms of meditation and visualization. In that emotional and energetic release and rebalancing are allowed and encouraged, the relation to some Reichian work is close.

The emphasis is *intra*personal rather than *inter*personal. Those who primarily wish interpersonal work are advised to attend an encounter rather than a gestalt group.

Participants are explicitly not patients but persons consenting actively to work (or play) in awareness. The leader functions to reflect, clarify, and flow with whatever emerges in this process. The aim is unfoldment, wholeness, growth, rather than adjustment, cure, or accomplishment.

Although open seat work is the primary form of this practice, guided fantasy, breath meditations, and movement sessions may be included. Each gestalt practice group will have a member of the Esalen gestalt staff as its primary leader. Other leaders may be involved in single sessions.

Esalen Seminars

Weekend of September 6-11

Massage for Health Professionals

Deane Juhan
Brita Ostrom &
Esalen Massage Practitioners

This workshop is for people who touch the lives of others who are in dis-ease. It has several objectives: to cultivate the awareness of touching and being touched; to provide experiences of contacting others without words; to demonstrate methods of touching and massage; and to demonstrate the relationship between simple physical contact and the reduction of bodily stress. For additional information see page 38. $400

A Workshop in Creative Movement

Anna Halprin
& Daria Halprin-Khaligi

"The fact that there has always been dance compels us to accept it as an old, deeply rooted human activity whose foundations reside in the nature of human beings. It will continue as long as the rhythmic flow of energy operates, and until man/woman ceases to respond to the forces of life and the universe. As long as there is life, there will be dance." — Margaret H. Doubler

This workshop is designed to explore through movement and dance one's own life resources and themes. It will encourage the integration of emotional and physical expression, utilizing dance, gestalt principles, and visualization exercises. Principles of movement ritual will be an important focus.

Recommended Readings: Movement Ritual I, by Anna Halprin, and Collected Writings II, by Anna Halprin, available by writing the San Francisco Dancers' Workshop, 321 Divisadero Street, San Francisco, Ca. 94117.

Symbols of Personal Growth: The Tarot

Angeles Arrien
& Sharon Jeffrey

The tarot provides a visual map for aiding personal growth and transformation. During this seminar visual symbols will be examined, with an emphasis on how they can be applied in personal, psychological, educational, and managerial situations. The signficance and meaning of the myths, colors, numbers, and astrological aspects found within the Thoth deck will be explored and related to personal growth processes. Individual consultations will be a part of the week's experience. $400

Couples Workshop: Open the Experiences and Feelings

Merri Goldenson (Devarani)
& John Majuri

This workshop for couples will explore ways of deepening relationships into a state of greater intimacy. Utilizing the strength and mutual support of intimate contact can aid us in our exploration and expansion as individuals.

The workshop will provide a supportive, safe environment for the lost child within all of us, helping us soften, let go, and surrender to ourselves and to the other. We will also present some didactic material which will be useful in understanding the structure and mechanisms of relationships.

We will utilize methods of neo-Reichian intensive, group interaction, bioenergetics, guided imagery, transactional analysis, hypnosis, dance, and massage. $400

Life Energy Practice: An Introduction

Stephano Sabetti

"Life energy practice" is an East/West body oriented development process based on the uniqueness of the individual. This seminar will explore theoretically and experientially the various levels and patterns of energy upon which disturbances as well as healing channels exist.

Through specially designed light and intensive group energy movements, all discrepant vibrations may seek discharge. This can be experienced emotionally, as physical coldness, through color visualization, or simply as shaking. Individual work will focus on energy diagnosis, important life lessons, key energy patterns, and process difficulties. $400

Preparing for Conscious Childbirth: A Workshop for Pregnant Couples

Honey Rose
Peggy Morrison Horan
Jane Miletich
& the Esalen Mothers

Come prepared to share your hopes, fear, experience, and expectations with other pregnant couples. By recognizing and owning the joys possible through conscious childbirth, we will explore the birthing possibilities available today. Film, exercise, massage, nutrition, and ritual, will be included in the seminar. $200

Exploring Self-Acceptance

David Schiffman

The focus of this workshop is the creation of a more positive and open-ended self-concept. Through the use of structured risk-taking situations, gestalt, role-playing, fantasy, and encounter methods, participants can accept or transcend the self-imposed boundaries from which they approach the world. Emphasis is on searching out unique personality strengths, individual capacities, and latent powers as a means of achieving productive, creative functioning. $200

The Elements: Archetypes of Transformation and Healing

Ralph Metzner

The "elements" (four in the European tradition, five in Indian and Chinese) represent fundamental principles of life and nature. Their meanings extend into psychosomatic illness/wellness, personality types (Jung's functions, the humors, astrology), the alchemy of relationships, ecological awareness, and planetary unity. In this workshop we study their symbolic expressions in various traditions, and experience how they can further the integration of body, psyche, spirit, and nature. Methods used will include meditation, guided symbolic imagery, audio-visual media, breath and movement, body and field energy awareness, polarity balancing, and sensory attunement. $200

George Ehrlich

Opening. . .Changing

Emmett & Sandra Ferreira Miller

For change to occur, we must allow ourselves to be aware of new information, either from the outside or from within. Openness and receptivity allow this new information to create desirable changes.

After eliminating obstacles to this process, through deep relaxation of the body and mind, our exploration of new possibilities will take place in stillness and in imagery, in movement and in touch, and in incorporating and echoing the environment around us. Finally, as desirable changes emerge, we may choose to reinforce them and to discover ways to integrate them into our lives. Music, dance, massage, and playful communication will be part of this workshop.

$200

September 13-20

Woman's Challenge: A Dance of Adventure

Elisa Lodge & Annie Callaway

During this seven-day adventure, starting at Arroyo Seco, we hike westward with the sun through chapparal, spreading oaks, and fields of wild flowers, emerging from the redwoods on the edge of the continent — the spectacular Big Sur coast.

During our journey we explore our inner world: our feminine roles and archetypes; the dominant and shadowy parts of ourselves; our vulnerability and strengths; our heroism and our adventurousness. Woven into our week are group process work, traditional wilderness skills, rock climbing, rappelling, and Rolfing movement integration, designed to open ourselves to balance, grace, and fluidity. Each of us spends 24 hours alone in reflection and contemplation near the end of the trip.

We will camp out at Esalen our first night and return Sunday morning to spend time in the baths. Lunch will be our final meal together. No previous experience necessary. Complete equipment list will be sent on registration.

$350

Week of September 13-18

Motion and Emotion: A Week of Gestalt Practice and Improvisational Theatre

Christine Price & Susan Tanner

Gestalt practice is a form — nonanalytic, noncoercive, nonjudgmental — evolving out of the work of Fritz Perls. With the use of guided meditations and individual open seat work, participants have the opportunity to contact and explore their present experience, including unfinished situations from the past and fantasies of the future. Improvisational theatre provides an environment in which the players can bring their experience and life into creative expression through movement, music, and the creation of characters. Improvisation can be an expression, affirmation, and celebration of the experiences discovered in the gestalt process.

$400

Gestalt and the Organism
Seymour Carter

This workshop will address the awakening of dormant potentials which have been set aside or misused in the quest to shape ourselves into an idealized self-image.

As we explore our innate qualities more fully we can gain a fresh perspective as new possibilities open to us. Participants will be considered as unique individuals in their own process of development, a process to be honored and encouraged for further growth.

The gestalt method is the basis of the work in this seminar, supported by various body oriented disciplines including sensory awareness, bioenergetics, Rolfing, and aikido. $400

Still Point, Turning Point: A "Good Medicine Show" for Mind, Heart, and Body
David Schiffman

"Anything which is forced or misunderstood can never be beautiful." — Xenophon

People, like plants, need special attention to thrive and blossom. To naturally grow beyond what we've been requires strength, sensitivity, and a deeply compassionate awareness. The courage to let go of the selfdefeating patterns of the past, the willingness to master fresh skills and create new dreams for the future: these are the turning points that nourish and sustain us. No matter how difficult or frightening they may seem initially, the felt sense that they share as we pass through them is that they are "good medicine" for our souls.

In this workshop we will come together in the spirit of being simply and lovingly at home in ourselves. We will create a community whose aim is to explore and move through our individual turning points, in a climate of trust, goodwill, and authenticity. The program will be structured to include intensive individual work, using practices from gestalt, psychosynthesis, and bioenergetics, as well as creative movement, music, guided imagery, group rituals, and celebrations. $400

Opening the Feelings
Siri Mishler

To grow in the capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to connect up with oneself, and to contact others is the aim of this workshop. We will use Radix® neo-Reichian methods of emotional release, the most important of which is the Radix® intensive, a period of individual work within a small group setting. Grief or pain, fear and rage that have been held in since childhood can emerge. As the participant accepts and works through these negative feelings, he or she may discover a new capacity for pleasure, trust, and love. $400

A Psychic Training Program
Anne & Jim Armstrong

This workshop is open to professionals and others interested in learning to recognize, trust, and use their own psi abilities. During the training exercises Anne Armstrong will use her own "tracking" abilities, acquired from over twenty years' experience in this field, to assist participants in developing their own inner sensitivity. She has found through her professional workshops that most of those in the helping professions are already using their sensitivity and need only learn to recognize their styles and trust the psychic input they normally receive. One of the basic objectives of the workshop is to de-mystify the intuitive/psychic process and train you to use it in all areas of your life — personal, professional, and spiritual. The workshop will include personal psychic scans and practice on selected cases. $400

Weekend Massage Intensive
Esalen Massage Practitioners

This seminar gives basic instruction in massage. Through demonstration and practice, participants are taught the location of major muscle groups. They are also shown how to begin, develop, and close a session of full-body massage. The emphasis in this instruction is upon awareness of the quality of one's touch and of those areas in ourselves and others that need relief. $200

Couples Workshop: Intimacy and Personal Growth
Betsy Hand & Gerald Smith

This workshop seeks to join the strengthening of mutual support and individual expression. Some of the time will be spent using structured approaches for enhancing communication, being separate, trusting, and fighting fairly. $200 per participant

See Yourself Release
Gael Switzer & Wendy Oser

This workshop seeks to expand self-image and promote a freer, more graceful body. We use facilated video feedback and integrated movement education to gently guide you toward releasing patterns of holding that contribute to tension, pain, and awkwardness, and a limited view of yourself. You may experience subtle yet powerful shifts, first in ordinary activities (breathing, walking, sitting), then in more sophisticated areas such as how you use your body in work, play, or any other movement discipline. You will be taught skills that will continue to enhance your elegance and allow you to see yourself with greater objectivity and compassion. $200

Introduction to Vipassana Meditation
Jamie Baraz

Vipassana (insight) meditation practice is a systematic examination of the mind/body process through calm and focused awareness. Learning to observe experience from a place of stillness enables one to relate to life without fear or clinging. One begins to accept pleasure and pain, fear and joy with increasing equanimity and balance. Life is seen as a constantly changing process. Insight is the deepening experience of the process itself, free of interpretation, leading to wisdom and compassion. The seminar is designed for those who have had no previous meditation experience as well as for those who wish to deepen their practice. Meditation instruction, the philosophy behind the practice, group discussions, and actual practice periods will be offered. Special emphasis will be placed on how to integrate vipassana practice in daily life after the workshop is over. $200

Nuclear Nightmare
Howard Kornfeld

"Be here now, be here tomorrow to talk about it." — Ann-Marie Hogan, Berkeley, January 2, 1981

We have reached the point in human evolution at which a significant shift in human consciousness seems to be necessary for human survival. An element of this shift is manifest in various trends in which a segment of American society has embraced more natural, quiet, meditative lifestyles as a response to the more complex and dangerous domestic and global situation. Another needed element in this shift will be an awareness of the rising risk of nuclear conflict. To this end we will consider the objective and subjective elements of this paradigm shift. Recommended reading: Nuclear Nightmare (Nigel Calder), Mind and Nature (Gregory Bateson). $400

Yoga, Massage, and Dance
Deborah Medow

You are invited to share five nurturing days devoted to rediscovering and enlivening body, mind, and spirit. We will spend our mornings learning basic yoga philosophy and theory, methods of meditation, and asanas (yoga postures), along with sharing yogic breakfast meals together. In the afternoons massage instruction and practice will take place at the baths, with one special massage and picnic day at the beach. Our evenings will be filled with singing, dancing, laughing, crying, contact improvisation, playing theatre games, making music together, and helping each other uncover and express our creative selves. $400

Connecting with Our Hearts
Mari Krieger & Frank Rubenfeld

Connecting with our minds and with our hearts is essential. Most of us have mastered making contact with our minds, and have forgotten the ability we all had as children to come from our hearts. In the process of growing up, we learned to close our hearts, since that is what we imagined we had to do in order to survive. In this workshop, through gestalt and gentle bioenergetics, we will open our hearts and minds, and awaken our spirits. This will help us to contact the essence of our being and, from that place deep within ourselves, to connect with others. $400

September 20-27

The Rites of Passage: A Seven-day Pilgrimage on Horseback Through the Big Sur Wilderness
David Schiffman, Skip Utterback & Rick Jensen

Turning the clock back to a more gently paced time, we will share a profoundly simple style of life together.

Beginning our journey from a remote, beautiful ranch on the river's edge in Arroyo Seco, we'll travel along winding canyon trails through the unspoiled back country of the Ventana Wilderness.

The trip will combine elements from human potential practices, group process work, and traditional equestrian and wilderness skills. It will be a time of simplification and cleansing.

The group will be limited to ten participants. $820

Biocomputers and the Human Spiritual Strivings
John Lilly

Here we wish to pursue an extension that we have been involved in for many years: the application of computer-type thinking to our own brains, minds, biocomputers, and to non-human biocomputers. This mapping, this modelling can be made as detailed or as general as we have time for: from the networks of neurona! processing up through the greater-than-self strivings of our restless spirit. In this framework we pay attention to operations of the mind which generate successful programs for action, thinking, and feeling. Perceptual Dysfunction: A Professional Workshop for Educators of the Learning-Disabled
Lawrence Greene

This workshop is oriented toward teachers, school psychologists, and learning disabilities specialists. It will examine specific methods designed to help children process sensory information more efficiently. Criteria for diagnosing and ways of treating perceptual learning disabilities will be presented. The workshop will focus on establishing sensory-motor and behavior modification protocols which address such symptoms as: poor reading comprehension; auditory and visual decoding deficits; hyperactivity; letter reversals; poor concentration; and gross and fine-motor coordination deficits. The workshop will also emphasize the emotional components of a learning disability, and will explore methods for identifying and reducing stress and anxiety in children. Participants in the workshop are eligible to apply for one unit of graduate credit at San Jose University. $200

On the Way to Health: A Guide for Health Practitioners
Phillip Mac

This workshop is designed to look at the stresses of the health provider in training and in practice. We will work toward developing greater personal health consciousness through self-awareness and self-responsibility, and creating a healing environment within ourselves. Body awareness, centering, and visualization will be some of the methods employed. For additional information see page 38. $200

Dream Discovery
Joyce Frazee

"A dream that is not understood is like a letter that is not opened." — Talmud

Each night we receive brilliant, insightful, creative communiques disguised in poetic imagery. In this workshop we will explore how to use our dreams for personal growth, insight, creativity, and problem solving. Participants will discover that any dream, however fragmentary or prosaic, can offer entry to a new world of insight. Methods for dream discovery will include exercises in dream recall, Senoi dream practices, mandala drawing, gestalt dream work, and psychosynthesis. $200

Massage and Movement
Esalen Massage Practitioners
This workshop will include basic massage instruction and awareness exercises, focusing on the qualities of touch. Movement exercises will include the basics of t'ai chi, awareness of body structure, and contact improvisation. $400

A Week with Jack Rosenberg
During this workshop participants will explore many aspects of Jack Rosenberg's energetic approach to sexuality and work with the energy field and the belief systems which keep us locked in obsolete behavior patterns. $400

Stress-Management and Optimal Performance
Ken Dychtwald & Staff
In this workshop we will explore and examine the physical and psychological dynamics and characteristics of stress, with particular attention to ways in which stress can seriously hamper health and all aspects of personal and professional performance.

The daily program will include: running, stretching, and aerobic dancing classes; meditation, relaxation, and stress-reduction sessions; health walks/hikes; massage classes at the Esalen baths; healthy and nutritious meals prepared in the Esalen kitchen; and evening seminars on such topics as stress-management, life planning, time management, total fitness, diet and nutrition, and longevity. This comprehensive program has been designed to allow each participant an opportunity to rest, refresh, and renew while simultaneously learning practical stress-management, self-care, and life-planning skills. $400

Your Psychic Self
Joan Steffy
In an experiential workshop we will contact and explore our psychic or spiritual self and will learn to practically apply psychic energy to our life in the physical world. Participants will receive a series of exercises to begin prior to the workshop, in preparation for the expanded states of consciousness we will experience during the week. Some areas to be explored are self-hypnosis for health maintenance, spiritual healing, cleansing and protection, dowsing, telepathy, automatic writing, and mediumistic trance states. Participants will be given take-home methods to enable them a continuing expansion of their psychic awareness and spiritual consciousness. $400

Our Future, Our Health: An Invitational Colloquiem
Rick Carlson & Ken Dychtwald
To some, our health as individuals and as a society has never been better. To others, it has never been worse. Of course, it depends on your point of view. But two things are certain: there is a future, and we will either be healthy or not. This seminar, designed as a colloquiem, will look to the future within a context of alternative futures, and raise issues and questions about our health in the future. What will the critical factors related to health be? Will greater assumption of responsibility for health by more and more people lead to a healthier future? What about bio-hazards and environmental contamination? What about self-regulation? What will the medicine of the future look like? And finally, will the future belong to the sick or the well? These and other issues will be raised in the seminar. As enrollment will be limited, please send a letter stating your background and interests to Rick Carlson, P.O. Box 426, Mill Valley, Ca. 94942. $160

Many Dimensional Self
Jay Ogilvy & Heather Maycock Ogilvy
The question "Who am I?" may have more than one answer. During this weekend we'll explore both the theory and practice of multiple selfhood. What is the self? What does it mean to allow several selves per person? What are the social implications, e.g., when one self makes promises that a person's other selves have to keep? Must there be one "captain of the ship?" What is the price of a well developed ego, a single identity? Do we bring on our identity crises, mid-life crises, dying relationships, over-consuming careers by such one-dimensionality? Might we instead evoke the many gods within us and free the energy of our shadow selves? We will approach these questions both cognitively and experientially using body, mind, and heart. Remembering myths other than monotheism, playing with theories other than ego psychology, working to hear more of our voices, we hope to find integration through communication rather than subordination.

I to Thou: An Existential Growth Group
Galvin Jackson
Through a variety of activities we will build a support group for the nurturance of self-awareness, trust, risking, relations with others, sexual identity, sensual expression, and the freedom necessary to attain a comfort with areas that will permit a carry-over to each participant's own life style. $200

The Gentle Art of Becoming — Together: A Workshop for Couples
David Schiffman
This workship will focus on the reawakening and development of positive and mutual supports that are at the root of satisfying couple relationships. The emphasis will be on creating clear and truthful expressions of the essential sense of loving and personal integrity. We will look at the beliefs and habits used to celebrate or lose the state of grace and presence which allows growth and joy for our partners and ourselves through the use of intuitional sensing, risk-taking structures, and guided imagery, as well as gestalt awareness methods.

Self and Beyond
John Zeigler

". . .the key is to open a way whence the imprisoned splendor can escape." — Browning
"Love is nature's psychotherapy." — Eric Berne

Come celebrate your limitlessness and restore the original you: loveable, capable, and unscarred by destructive parental/societal belief systems. Invoke a serene and perfect inner self that can give expression to a natural clarity, aliveness, and creativity. We will use a synthesis of intensive body and gestalt work for deep emotional release, self-hypnosis for reprogramming a negative consciousness, and other ancient and modern body/mind/spirit methods. Through supportive group interaction you can experience problems for what they really are: opportunities that can create a spontaneous and unconditional love of self, others, and an abundant universe. Through the options of massage, movement, t'ai chi, music, singing, improvisation, and laughter, you can awaken to the miracle you already are. $400

Self Acceptance: The Freedom to Be
David Schiffman

Each of us has unique capacities to feel and express tenderness and strength, anger and affection, autonomy and needfulness, as well as compassion, humor, and wisdom. The willingness to allow the fullness and vibrance of each of these qualities determines how alive and gratified we are.

In this workshop we will focus on how we diminish or affirm these essential qualities as they are expressed through our bodies, our sexuality, our creativity, our relationships to power, our friendships, and our expectations of ourselves and others. In an atmosphere of tenderness and support we will clarify the nature of who we are and how we can best take care of ourselves, both here and on returning home. The workshop will be grounded in gestalt, encounter, guided fantasy, massage, bioenergetics, and journal work. $400

Reichian Gestalt: A Workshop for Contact and Release
Ma Prita (Laura De Nuccio)

This workshop provides a safe environment to experience consciously the process of our own unfolding — physically, emotionally, energetically, sexually, spiritually.

By contacting tension (stuck, accumulated energy) and allowing emotions which have been locked and frozen in our bodies, often since early infancy, we have the opportunity to open ourselves to the creative flow of life energy within us. As we contact and allow our hurts and pain, we can then increase our capacity for pleasure and joy. As we allow our expression of anger, which is a powerfully expansive energy, we can deepen our capacity for love and compassion. As we contact and allow our expression of fear, we move toward trusting ourselves and others.

Utilizing Reichian emotional release, gestalt practice, bioenergetics, Feldenkrais, massage, reflexology, dance, meditation, and various other bodymind approaches, we can move toward expanding our capacity for trust and fulfillment. $400

Betty Fuller

In this professional training workshop, participants are instructed in Trager table work, receiving directly from the instructor and giving to and receiving from each other under supervision. In addition, participants learn to practice and teach mentastics, learn basic communication skills, clearing exercises, and simple meditations, and have time in group to share and process their experience. This training is open to professionals in education, body work, holistic health care, counseling, psychology, medicine, chiropractic, sports, performing arts, and other disciplines which see movement as a primary means of learning. $630

Expressing Your Attractiveness
James Oldham

By finding the ways in which you inhibit your natural attractiveness, you can change how you feel and move. We will focus on specific ways people block themselves from enjoyment. Letting go of these inhibitions allows a wide variety of spontaneous attractive behavior to emerge naturally. This workshop will not attempt to provide formulas or predetermined strategies; rather, it will allow you to find your gifts. The approach will be gestalt, utilizing theatre awareness and special methods of movement awareness.

You may find at the end of this workshop that you are bringing people closer and evoking more interest in the people around you, without your understanding how you are doing it. $200

Back to the Beanstalk: Enchantment and Reality for Couples
Judith & George Brown

Folk tales have been a traditonal source of cultural wisdom on the essence of relationship. In this seminar we will apply the recurring motifs of folk tale relationships to what is happening today. Both experiential and discussion approaches will be used to discover alternatives for the stuck relationships which we so often program for ourselves. The themes of fears and expectations, fantasy vs. reality, communication, and conrol will be explored for singles, couples, and professionals. A Fellowship of Caring: The Volunteers

Charles Garfield "Volunteers are like ships. They could stay moored where it's safe and still justify their being, but they choose to cut through the rough waters, ride out the storms, and take their chances." — Erma Bombeck

Volunteers are the social conscience of the nation. The civil rights, women's, environmental and conservation movements, neighborhood improvement coalitions, and ethnic and religious organizations are all essentially volunteer efforts. They are good examples of human compassion, unselfishness, caring, patience, and just plain loving one another. Ghandi, Schweitzer, and Mother Teresa are exemplars of the tradition of volunteerism. Using the SHANTI Project's experience with patients' and families' life-threatening illnesses as a model for all volunteer efforts, and beginning with the proposition that "none of us makes it unless we all make it," we will explore ways for ending citizen impotence through the dynamics of personal change. Topics include: understanding planetary problems on community, neighborhood, and personal levels; taking personal responsibility for human problems which move us as individuals; selecting, training, and motivating volunteers; structuring and implementing volunteer and self-help services; examining the limits of mutual help and citizen participation; and asking the question of when a problem is "solved." As traditional political, social, and religious organizations face increasing difficulty in a more complex world, channeling our energies into effective grassroots action becomes a more potent force for changing the world — as well as one of the most passionate expressions of love. $400

Serpent Power and the Holy Spirit: An Energy Transformation Workshop

Maureen Lavender We tend to experience tension, the polarity between opposing forces, as conflict. Yet we can, if we will, use this energy as fuel for transformation. In this workshop, we will go directly to the "core" through fire breath, connective tissue work, purification with pranayama, polarity, silence, and symbolic rites of death and rebirth.

The Rhythms of Relationship
George Leonard
"At the heart of each of us," George Leonard writes in The Silent Pulse, "there exists a silent pulse of perfect rhythm, a complex of wave forms and resonances, which is absolutely individual and unique, and yet which connects us to everything in the universe. The act of getting in touch with this pulse can transform our personal experience and in some way alter the world around us." In this workshop, Leonard will explore the concept of relationship in terms of identity (that which is discrete and unique in every individual) and holonomy (that which is universal in every individual). Discussion of this subject will be augmented by visualization exercises and simple movement experiences. $200

The Body: Imagined, Sensed, and Observed
Don Johnson & Dennis Jaffe
We have certain images of how big or small we are, how fat or thin, how straight or curved, how attractive or repulsive, how strong or weak. We have certain ideals of how our bodies should be and notions of how others see us. We also have an "objective" body whose weight, height, muscular tensions, and range of movement can be measured in relation to others' bodies. The conflicts which often exist among these various modes of self-perception can muddle our intelligent activity in the world; in the extreme, they can produce illness. Using guided imagery, movement exercises, methods of perceiving body structure, and group process, we will work to achieve more harmony. $200

Songs of Innocence, Songs of Experience
Nancy Kaye Lunney
This weekend is a voyage into song for people who want to sing but are afraid or worried about what others think, for shower singers and choir members who dream of hitting the big time, as well as for accomplished singers who want to improve their performance. Piano accompaniment and video feedback will be part of a supportive environment for self-expression. Bring your own favorite song titles or choose from a variety at Esalen. Most important, bring your own styles, your voices, and a willingness to explore your creative potential. $200

Preventing Burnout and Dealing with Medical Impairment: A Workshop for Health Care Professionals
John-Henry Phifferling & Jeffrey Blum
This will be an experiential workshop designed to help health care professionals and their spouses look at ways of preventing impairment and promoting wellness. Health professionals have a high risk of developing disabilities that can threaten the quality of both their personal and professional functions. The workshop will give an overview of risk factors that lead to burnout in the health professional's life style, and review problem solving processes and coping strategies. Self-Discovery Through Meditation
Daniel O'Hanlon
The process of coming to really know ourselves, to get in touch with and transform those places in ourselves which we often unconsciously hide from ourselves, is a lifetime task. For some of us, at certain moments in our growth, practices of quiet meditation drawn from time-tested traditions are precisely what we need for a genuine breakthrough. To meet this need, this workshop will provide introductory instruction and guidance in a variety of meditative practices, drawn from Hindu and Buddhist disciplines, from the Christian traditions of the East and West, and from the recent explorations of the human potential movement.

Suggested readings: New Seeds of Contemplation (Merton) and Zen Mind Beginner's Mind (Suzuki). $400

Towards a More Sensitive Relating
Charlotte Selver & Charles Brooks
An introduction to sensing, for more meaningful contact with our own nature and with the world around us.

How we relate to our deep inner needs, to other people, or to different tasks and situations depends on how we perceive them and how we trust our own findings. When perception is clear and full, we cannot make mistakes. Our whole organism is geared to respond appropriately. We have come, however, to see through a fog of preconceptions, a bewildering fabric of the ideas and judgments of others. Our own experience has been belittled; our perceptive faculties have lost their edge. The true I and the true you no longer meet. Both life and death have become often threatening fantasies.

Sensory awareness is a practice for rediscovering and reviving full sensory functioning. Through the gradual quieting of premature and inappropriate intellectual activity, it directs our attention both inwards and outwards to the actuality of the present moment. At perceptivity revives, true relationship becomes possible. Each everyday occasion in living gains its own freshness, its own uniqueness. We can become content again, like healthy children, as quality begins to make quantity unimportant.

The Wisdom of the Body

Peter Levine

Whenever any of us are hurt, we build our own fortress around the wound and thus insulate ourselves against further pain. An armor develops in the muscles of our bodies and breathing becomes controlled to reduce our level of feeling. The strength of these walls depends upon the degree of the hurt. Some fortresses have walls so thin that with a little help we can easily move through them and we are out again. Others are much deeper and have a life and tenacity of their own. They are reflected in rigid roles and are solidified in our bodies as chronic tensions and patterns of bodily attitudes.

We try to break out of these citadels, often with intense, even violent force. This can help to restore some sense of feeling, bringing us "out of our heads" and more into our bodies. These emotional explosions can, however, become habitual, even mechanical, ways of releasing tension. In this workshop we will explore other avenues toward re-discovering deep softer feelings, pleasure, and self-esteem. So, rather than storming our citadels, we will look at softening the body armor; at allowing the body to express itself in its own language within its own rhythm. This return toward grace, which is our birthright, is the wisdom of the body. $200

The Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence

Gerrit Verschuur

We will look at the stars in the beautiful Big Sur skies and learn to recognize some of the basic constellations. By way of introduction to the search for extraterrestrial intelligence (SETI), the workshop will examine what searches are now being made, why and where extraterrestrial intelligence may reside in our galaxy or elsewhere, and ways of establishing contact with "them." There is already evidence to suggest that such contacts are common, but are they "real"? How can we test for their truth? The time for contact with extraterrestrial intelligence may well be upon us. SETI could involve the general public as well as specialists using radio telescopes. The workshop will include a night of stargazing, so bring warm clothes in case we move to a high elevation and, if possible, bring binoculars. The group leader was the first scientist in the United States to conduct a serious astronomical search for extraterrestrials, and has since explored other ways of learning whether there is anyone out there. $200

The Healing Community: A Workshop and Seminar for Health Care Professionals

Kathleen Keating

We will experience living together as an intentional community as we explore the theory and dynamics of roles and behaviors which are healing, for ourselves as well as for our clients and patients. We will pay particular attention to the powerful healing energy that is created by the total group. There will be special emphasis on the healing modalities and methods in the wellness and holistic health revolution, and also on group dynamics, communication, and methods for uncovering creative solutions. Individuals will have an opportunity to explore individual power and leadership within the group. Any group, whether it is the staff and patients of a medical unit of a general hospital, the staff and patients of a locked psychiatric ward, or the administrative staff of any health care facility, is potentially a healing community. For additional information see page 38. $400

Midwifery and Womanhood Intensive

Raven Lang

This workshop focuses on the arts and skills of the practicing midwife, looking at the complex role of woman and/or mother and/or mate. We will discuss some of the philosophical, political, empirical, and psychological issues surrounding our vocation. We will also cover some of the practical and technical aspects of our craft. All are encouraged to bring and share the wisdom and experiences already gained. Together we will talk, watch videos, teach, sing, dance, and celebrate. Come with a song in your heart, a story to tell, and one skein of wool in your basket. The workshop is limited to 25 women who are practicing, apprenticing, or student midwives. Some scholarships are available. $400

Celebration of Self

Daniel Bianchetta

Our focus this week will be on gently cultivating and nourishing our center within. We will explore our attitudes (ways of re-minding) and actions (ways of re-membering), helping us to move from the periphery of our lives to our core. This place — calm, competent, creative, and compassionate — sometimes is forgotten as we allow our externals to overshadow ourselves.

We will explore ways of uncluttering our external and internal environments. Intuitive and energy awareness, music, meditation, massage, play, and the moment will be a few of our tools. Emphasis will be on taking this quiet place home with you. $400

Movement, Feeling, and Dance

David Silverstein
Heidi Rorick-Schaeffer
& Regina Kerr

In this workshop, we will look at attitudes toward movement, and how they relate to dance. Muscular tensions often limit emotional expression, which in turn can limit our range of movement. Our intention is to loosen the body armor, experience feelings, and expand the range of movement in dance. To assist in this process, we will use neo-Reichian body work, movement exercises, visualizations, and hypnosis.

Join us in exploring and sharing the magic of our dance. $400

The Herb Renaissance

Paul Lee

The rebirth of interest in herbs, both culinary and medical, as well as herb gardening, will be the focus of this seminar, introducing many of the major themes and issues of the herb movement in America. Herbs from garlic to thyme, from ginseng and echinacea, will be studied — along with a new view of herbs as immunopotentiating agents on our constitutional defense against illness and disease. Identification of herbs, their chemistry, how to make medical preparations, and how to grow your own supply and thereby lower health costs, will be discussed. As a special feature, Dr. Lee will unveil his work on the Voynich Manuscript, an undeciphered herbal in code from the 13th century by Roger Bacon, thought to contain the Elixir of Life. A basic collection of herbs ready to plant will be made available to all participants, and an herb tea tasting will also be featured. $200

The Use of Anti-Psychotic Drugs (Neuroleptics) in Psychiatry

William Carpenter
Michael Goldstein
Herbert Meltzer
& Julian Silverman

This workshop is concerned with the effects produced in patients by the systematic use of anti-psychotic drugs (neuroleptics). It brings together four individuals whose researches in the field of schizophrenia are known internationally. Each of them has been involved in studies which have evaluated different facets of neuroleptic drug use. This use, which for years was generally positively regarded, has recently created some serious concerns among scientists and clinicians. During the weekend, the four will review their work with neuroleptics and then, in concert, will examine issues which currently are of major importance. The format for the weekend is mainly a series of round table working sessions. At the end of each working session, there will be opportunities for questions and comments. Some of the issues to be considered are: how the neuroleptics clarify and how they interfere with our understanding of mental disorder; implications of recent drug studies for the care of acutely diseased individuals; how drug treatments create disease; how drugs affect different types of patients; relationships between biological factors and personality factors; controlling symptoms vs. caring for patients; revisioning our points of view, our methodologies.

This program is being co-sponsored by Esalen Institute and Aspen Research Institute. It is being offered for health professionals only. Please send a vita wth your application. For additional information see page 38. $200

Five-Day Massage Intensive

Esalen Massage Practitioners

An introduction to the language of the body, this course will explore the human interior through various windows: yoga, Feldenkrais, movement, demonstration and work sessions, and evening lectures and discussions. Every major portion of the body will be given detailed attention, and your instructors will acquaint you with their individualized styles. In the morning and afternoon practice sessions, the focus will be on integrating this information in your own manner and evolving your own style of working with the body. $400

Choosing to Change

Harry Sloan

Changing is discovering that something new is trying to emerge, and integrating that next step into our daily lives. In this process, we often encounter parts of ourselves that do not nourish change. We resist, either by preventing ourselves from seeing beyond where we are, or by blocking ourselves from integrating and expressing the next step.

In an atmosphere of tenderness and humor, this workshop will combine individual work with discussion of principles and concepts which nourish the process of change. Personal work will stress deepening awareness of our own unique sense of direction and the obstacles in the way. We will focus on learning to allow change through exploring the implications of our choices and seeing how we retard or encourage the expression of our emerging self.

The basic approach will incorporate psychosynthesis with transpersonal and cathartic methods which emphasize releasing and transforming blocked energies. Our purpose together will be to align our will and motivation with the natural process of change and integration. $400

Robert Hand

Carl Jung once stated that astrology contained within its teachings the sum total of the psychological knowledge of the ancients. The point of this workshop will be to show the validity of this statement expressed in modern times.

Many people have tried to make astrology fit into various systems of modern psychology. Here we will explore the extent to which astrology is, in itself, a complete system of psychology, which makes its own statements about human nature, and which suggests rather surprising consequences for ideas of human life and behavior.

Little or no previous knowledge of astrology will be required in this workshop. We will be concerned largely with the symbolism and its psychological import, not especially with the techniques of horoscope analysis. Any material of a technical nature that is needed in the workshop will be introduced as we go along. $200

Taking Control of Your Brain and Health

Howard Miller

Lectures and discussions will center on discoveries concerning the brain. For maximum health and disease resistance, we will learn how to use this knowledge to broaded awareness to the point of choosing our emotional and physical states. We will work with the environment in relationship to hypnosis and cellular consciousness. Participants, individually and/or collectively, will have the opportunity to create activities and to develop an experiment. Optional movement and massage will be available. This course is designed to reach far beyond hypnosis and autosuggestion.

Sexuality and Spirituality
Sam Keen & Marilyn Mason
All of us in Western culture are heirs to dualistic ways of thinking, feeling, and being in the world. We suffer from a schizophrenic vision which posits a necessary civil war between:

mind and body
spirit and matter
reason and emotion
ego and id
spirituality and sexuality culture and nature
man and woman.

This playshop, consisting of lectures, guided journeys in memory and imagination, kindergarten drawing, and careful touch, will seek to analyze and find ways to heal these conflicts, bring an end to the civil war, and discover how we may make a rich marriage between sexuality and spirituality which will allow us to inhabit fully and transcend the flesh. $400

Opening the Feelings
Joel Dweck & Anne Ruderman
The aim of this Radix®, neo-Reichian workshop is to help participants to grow in their capacity to experience and express deep feeling, to rediscover themselves, and to contact others in a deeper way. Using emotional release methods, the most important being the intensive, which is a period of individual work within a small, supportive group, deeply held emotions of pain, fear, and rage can emerge. This release can soften chronic unconscious patterns of tension, and a new and deeper capacity for pleasure, trust, and love can follow. Each participant will receive two intensives, and the workshop will be limited to ten participants for each facilitator. $400

A Feelings Intensive for Couples Only
Janet Zuckerman Boeve & Fred Boeve
This workshop is designed to encourage both of you to express all the pent-up negative, hostile, and abrasive energies you have bottled up in your bodies — non-verbally — so that you can make room for all the joy, caring, and nurturing you're entitled to as a couple sharing some of your life together. $200 per participant

Adventures in Self-Exploration
Christina & Stanislav Grof
Focused self-exploration in this workshop will be based on the model of the unconscious that emerged from psychedelic research. It includes not only biographically determined areas but also the dynamics of the death-rebirth process and transpersonal experiences. We will use a combination of music and guided affective imagery, mandala drawing, yoga, massage, and individual work when indicated. $200

The Jungian-Senoi Actualization Approach to Dreams
Strephon Kaplan Williams, Terran Harcort Daily & Harriet Jasik Skibbins
The Jungian-Senoi approach to dreamwork is a dynamic form designed to put us in contact with our own deepest sources. Our world is viewed through the creative mirroring of our dream, the voice of center which includes fearful as well as joyful dynamics. The weekend approach offers the central methods of objectifying the dream, following the dream ego, dialogue, dream reentry, incubation, and the dreamwork actualization task.

By evoking our creative depths, using methodology, meditation, mythic drama, and ritual, we will build a dream community together in the tradition of the Senoi peoples of Malaya. We will create the whole, within which each of us can individuate some basic aspect of our being. $200

The Hypnotherapy of Milton Erickson: A Workshop for Professionals
Jane Parsons
Because he believed that trance seems "to provide a special psychological state in which the patient can reassociate and reorganize his inner psychological complexities," Milton Erickson taught hypnosis by putting his students in trance. This experiential workshop will utilize color videotapes of Dr. Erickson's training workshops taken in October, 1979, to explore his ideas and methods. Some of the themes we will investigate are: "My unconscious is smarter than I am." "Do something to make their symptom undesirable and they'll give it up." "Using their language, join their metaphor." "Change the frame of reference; transform a bitter childhood memory into an adult accomplishment." "Never say the expected thing. When you say the unexpected, the other person has to rearrange his thinking."

This workshop is for professionals in the health field. Non-professionals who wish to participate on a space-available basis may send a letter stating their background and interest in attending to Mrs. Jane A. Parsons, 275 Central Park West, Apt. 4B, New York, N.Y. 10024, or telephone her at (212) 873-4557.

Pleasure, Sensuality, and Your Body

Barbara Clemans

The language of the body is universal. It transcends the limitations imposed on us by speech. This workshop is designed to enhance the feeling of aliveness in the body using the medium of pleasure to awaken the senses. In a soft, supportive environment we will start at the beginning, moving together in unity. We will learn caring, contact and nurturing, sensitive giving, and relaxed receiving. We will explore new patterns of moving and being together. Feldenkrais awareness, and vital explorations in movement to music. The baths, the rhythm of the ocean, and massage will heighten our awareness of the pleasure inherent in simplicity. $400

Intimate Relationships and Sexual Jealousy

Ayala Pines & Elliot Aronson

What is sexual jealousy? Is it a sign of love or an indication of insecurity? What are the reasons for it? How prevalent is it? What are some of the emotional, physiological, and attitudinal reactions to it? What people and what situations are likely to elicit jealousy? What are its negative and positive effects, and — most important — how can it be coped with more effectively? How can we learn more about ourselves by examining our jealous feelings?

These are some of the questions addressed in this workshop. Through lectures, discussions, personal exploration, and role playing, we will explore critical issues related to jealousy, share current information about this subject, and gain a better understanding of it.

This workshop is intended for couples who wish to deal with the issues of jealousy in their relationship, for therapists and marriage counselors, and for individuals who experience jealousy as a personal problem. $400

Enriching Your Relationship

Emmett & Sandra Ferreira Miller

A weekend for joyful sharing: awakening and reawakening the special beauty and flavor of your relationship as a couple, identifying your strengths and goals as individuals and as a couple, and discovering how these can be harmonious and mutually supportive; learning to use selective awareness methods to maximize effective communication and transform negative patterns of interaction. Our exploration will include massage, movement, music, deep relaxation, and dyadic imagery. $200 per participant

Close Encounters: Experiments in Meeting and Contacting Other Human Beings

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

This encounter group provides an opportunity for you to pay attention to the quality of your contact with others, particularly to your willingness to invest yourself in relationship, and to your ability to stay true to your own feelings while engaged in relationship. You may discover how you sabotage yourself from having more satisfying relationships; you may discover you're getting exactly what you want from your relationships. You may discover anything; you may discover nothing. You may even discover that you're in charge. $200

Patterns in Islamic Tradition

Andre Patsalides & Irene Abizaid

In this multi-faceted workshop we will combine a scholarly and knowledgeable approach to understanding Islam with the joy of participating in some of its rituals and activities. By presenting a glimpse of the Arab world of the Middle East we hope to show some of the vast richness of the Islamic paradigm. We will explore some aspects of Islamic thought and Sufi mystic tradition as embodied in music, dance, calligraphy, and geometric patterns. $200

Giving Thanks For, With, and To Our Bodies: An Advanced Massage Intensive

Esalen Massage Practitioners

Whether your massage experience is professional or avocational, our aim in the course is to take you deeper into your own work and to provide whatever instruction we can to add to your understanding of the body and to your repertoire of methods. In addition to morning and afternoon practice sessions with various instructors, we will use yoga, movement, evening lectures and discussions, and demonstrations of specific practices to move ourselves out of our old patterns of working.

The following concerns will receive emphasis: how to sustain your energy through a day of treatments; how to use weight and leverage to your advantage; and so on. As we reach more and more deeply into one another, emotional changes can be triggered by the unravelling of blocked muscular energy. As these emotions present themselves, they will provide us with some first-hand practice in productive ways of moving through them.

The format and pace of this course will presume some previous massage experience — at least an introductory five-day intensive or its equivalent in your own practice. $400

Five Days with Jenny O'Connor and the NINE

The NINE describe themselves as being "atoms of pure conscious thought — energizers and giant reflectors of your own instincts and creative imagination."

> "We take the grit from your eye; you blink yourself." "There is a saying, 'He who hesitates is lost.' This is not quite true, however. He who hesitates the longest is lost the longest." "We are the energy of change through chaos. Chaos is the opposition factor to peace. Both are operational in evolution."

Self-Reparenting

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

As the subtle and not-so-subtle family/cultural pressures of the holiday season begin to make themselves felt this Thanksgiving (and no-Thanks-giving) week, we begin to assemble our survival kits by finding and opening paths in the present that allow us to return to those places in the past where we got stuck. Rather than cut off painful memories from awareness, we give ourselves a fresh opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of early life that can control and rip off our aliveness and our power in the here and now.

Experiments progress from re-wombing and re-birthing to re-searching our families. Modes of exploring are drawn from gestalt practice, neo-Reichian energy release, primal work, family process, guided fantasy, and Fiore re-parenting methods. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. There are also opportunities to explore the nature of our interpersonal relating through group interactions. $400

Movement is a primary means to learning about my self, about my relationships with others, and about my place in the universe. This workshop includes physical and mental stress reduction and alignment exercises, guided imagery, nutritional information, and moving meditations, as well as the integrative bodymind approaches of Trager, Feldenkrais, and Rolf-Nolte. For each approach, methods for daily practice and individual followup are presented. The schedule allows time for rest and relaxation at the baths and participation in the work of the Esalen community. $400

Various healing modalities will be discussed, including Chinese acupuncture systems, therapeutic touch, homeopathy, and Bach flowers. For additional information see page 38. $200

The Shamanic Journey and Healing: An Experiential Workshop

Michael Harner

The shamanic journey is one of the most ancient visionary methods used by humankind to enter nonordinary reality and explore the hidden universe otherwise known mainly through myth and dream. Participants will undergo an experiential initiation into the journey, aided by traditional drumming and dancing. Using the spirit canoe and other methods, they will learn how the shaman's journey can be used to restore power and health, to acquire knowledge, and to solve personal problems. Participants will be introduced to shamanic seeing, to shamanic interaction with the powers of nature, and to the practical application of shamanism in their daily lives.

Fluidity of Being: Rolfing® Movement Integration
Elisa Lodge

"Mr. Dufy lived a short distance from his body." — James Joyce

This workshop provides a creative environment to explore the concepts of movement education based on the principles of Ida Rolf — a process of fine tuning and harmonizing our unique instrument from restricted to spontaneous, tense to flowing, inhibited to open. We focus on deepening our kinesthetic awareness of the relationship between our body's structure and emotional attitudes. Everyday movements and specialized activities such as jogging, playing musical instruments, etc., become more effortless and graceful when we are balanced to gravity. The spirit we open to through this awareness is ageless. It is the source of our enthusiasm, excitement, and strength. Group and individual work will be offered, using gestalt, dance, and the healing use of touch, all for the benefit of becoming more present. Video feedback will be used. $200

Body Changes: Feldenkrais and Rolfing®
Dub Leigh & Michael Joyce

This workshop is designed for those who want to begin or accelerate their process of body change toward comfort and awareness, with increasing ability in movement and relaxation. We will focus on resolution of individual functional problems in neuromuscular and connective tissue organization of the body. Group sessions will use gentle exercises for increasing awareness while relating parts of the body together in a more harmoniously integrated movement. We will learn to recognize our body signals of discomfort or awkwardness as opportunities to explore and improve how we are in our bodies. This workshop will include individual work in Feldenkrais and Rolfing®. Participants will be guided in the development of a personal program for continuing improvement at home. $400

Earth Born
Prem Das & Rutuima

For millenia, shamans worldwide have been inspired and healed by their journeys into transpersonal/ecstatic states of consciousness. As a result of these profound experiences, they declare that the fabric of reality is woven with visions from our collective Heart/Mind. Personal and planetary healing or destruction may be our collective decision, a decision influenced by the thoughts, beliefs, and actions of each individual.

In this workshop we will experience shamanic healing methods, take journeys into the Heart/Mind, and discover our own songs, dances, and visions of earth born wisdom and life force power. $400

Transpersonal Psychology: New Approaches to Therapy and Self-Exploration
Christina & Stanislav Grof We will explore theoretically and experientially the rapid developing area of transpersonal psychology. Using a combination of controlled breathing, evocative music, body work, and mandala drawing, the participants will have the opportunity to confront various unfinished biographical issues, elements of the death-rebirth process, and the spectrum of transpersonal experiences. This experimentation with powerful new approaches to personality change will be complemented by discussion of a conceptual framework based on modern consciousness research and the world-view emerging from modern physics. Special attention will be paid to the process of kundalini awakening, the concept of spiritual emergency, and to methods of assistance in transpersonal crises. $400

Integrity David Schiffman In this workshop we will join together to build a community whose foundation is trust, good will, and authenticity. This community will be a place in which each participant can sense and experience clearly his or her own capacity for tenderness, strength, and self-respect. Our task together will be to discover how best to express these qualities both in and out of the workshop. We will explore the boundaries of our emotional, physical, and mental potentials and how they affect our sexuality, our relation to power, our friendships, our creativity, and our expectations of ourselves and of others. $400

Circle of Damage-Circle of Grace: Being With Your Child and Being Your Child
A Weekend for Children and Their Parents
Mira Rothenberg & Peter Levine Whenever any of us are hurt, we build our own fortress around the wound and thus insulate ourselves against further pain. An armor develops in the muscles of our bodies and breathing becomes controlled to reduce our level of feeling. The strength of the walls depends upon the degree of the hurt. Some fortresses have walls so thin that with a little help we can easily move through them and we are out again. Others are much deeper and have a life and tenacity of their own. They are reflected in rigid roles and are solidified in our bodies as chronic tensions and patterns of bodily attitudes.

In this workshop we will look at the process by which we as parents, children, and the family unit, constrict intimacy and fortify these citadels. We will explore safe ways to begin to dissolve these blocks and re-establish a basis for the exchange of feelings, needs, and perceptions.

We can give up blame and guilt and each take responsibility for stopping the circle of damage and restoring our own childlike grace which is the birthright of us all.

Passions of the Mind
Don Johnson & Sam Keen A workshop to help free the long-repressed primal need for straight thinking and intellectual clarity. We will explore different cognitive postures (asanas of thought) and modes of knowing necessary to experience the full range of ecstatic reason. We will study the art of testing ideas, collecting evidence, verifying visions, and arriving at responsible beliefs. There will be daily exercises in undressing the promiscuous relationships among experience, belief, and mystical vision. Every participant is to bring to the workshop a statement of a philosophy of life, a credo. This may be a written statement, a favorite book or passage from a book, a play, a poem, a checkbook, a song (Is "freedom just another word for nothing left to lose?"), or a work of art. We will try to find out how much or how little we may believe with a clear mind and a full heart. $200

From Burnout to Personal Growth: Increasing Effectiveness and Enjoyment in Work and Life
Elliot Aronson & Ayala Pines
This workshop is designed for people who work with people who have experienced or are experiencing burnout. It deals with the impact of burnout on both the service provider and the client, ways of finding and recognizing support resources on the job, and positive methods of dealing with burnout and life tedium. Through lectures, group discussions, and input from the participants themselves, individuals will have the opportunity to increase their understanding of those aspects of their own work and life which could cause burnout. In addition they will be provided with the tools and opportunity to learn how to handle these problems in order to increase the productivity and joyousness of their relationships with clients, colleagues, family, and friends. The Birth of the Sun
Paul Rebillot & Stanford Eugene Cates

The winter solstice is a time for restful introspection as the earth's outer darkness allows the inner sun of the soul to regenerate and find expression. Traditional cultures the world over have rested, fasted, and feasted during this time of the year in celebration of the turning point, the cyclic return.

We will join together to create our own ritual and pageant. Using a variety of practices, such as gestalt, guided fantasy, movement, massage, and more, we will integrate our personal rituals into a group presentation. $200

Gestalt Workshop
Marty Fromm

This workshop is designed for professionals who are interested in further personal growth and professional training in the practice of gestalt, as well as for others who are simply interested in their own personal growth through gestalt. While the sessions will be mostly experiential, ample time will be provided for didactic sessions of theory and practice.

The focus is on awareness: the discovery of what is, rather than on what was, might be, or should be. We will concentrate on "how and now" rather on "why and because" of past and future, and will attend to body language and feelings. $200

John Caple

Most of what we are taught about changing careers springs from the poverty mentality of the thirties; little of it relates to our unfolding as human beings. In this workshop we will integrate career change processes and personal growth process using movement, art, guided imagery, and networking methods. Designed for career changers, potential career changers, re-entry persons, and those who guide others in career change, this workshop will include some time for work on individual career/life problems.

Christmas Present

Paul Rebillot & Stanford Eugene Cates

We've idealized birth in the Christmas story — the newborn child surrounded by adoring parents, singing angels, comforting animals; worshipped by the wise and the simple, welcomed into the world and loved for nothing that he does, but for simply being who he is. Most of us were not welcomed in the same way, and at Christmastime our disillusionment peaks. Our despondency and regrets are based on unfulfilled ideals, promises, and fairy tales. Using gestalt, guided fantasy, theatre games, and rituals, we will seek to release ourselves from the excess baggage of past regrets and future expectations in order to return to the divine simplicity of our own present being. Out of that simplicity, we will create our own Christmas Present, a celebration in which each of us singly and all of us together can give ourselves our self for Christmas. $400

Gestalt, Bioenergy, and Human Contact; Old and New Learning Integrated

Alan Schwartz

There is an energetic dimension to human behavior which is often locked behind the habitual patterns of defending against the fear, pain, and even joy associated with feeling. The visible expression of these patterns lies in the blocked musculature of the body. Reich, Perls, and Lowen suggested ways of being in which a person learned to allow more movement in the aggressive and sexual expression of the body. This week will be an opportunity to test the organism as movement. Allowing energy means integrating body, feelings, conceptual process, and spirit. The result is stability and a deeper awareness of self and our interdependence with physical and social environments. The workshop can be thought of as a learning week. Appropriate didactic material well be covered. $400

Clearing the Slate for a New Year: A Reichian/Gestalt Intensive

Joan Fiore & Jeffrey Kent

During this five-day period when 1981 comes to an end and a new year begins, this workshop provides the time and space to take stock of the past year(s) — the bitters and the sweets — to indulge in nostalgia, to come to terms with our business of the past, and to release the energy we've locked there so that we can move on, truly new, to the new years ahead. We'll take some time to explore how our fantasies for our future might actually effect our futures, some time to celebrate, some time to re-create, some time to charge and discharge, and lots of time to contact ourselves and each other. We especially welcome reunion with friends and participants from groups of yesteryears. First priority is on intensive individual work in a supportive group setting. $400

Gestalt Synergy: An Integrative Approach to Self Actualization

Ilana Rubenfeld

The sea always has waves. . .waves are the sea. . .sea and waves are one. To speak of waves apart from the sea is a delusion — so mind and body are one!

The focus in this workshop will be on experiencing one's own body and emotions as a total organism. Emotions and memories are often stored in our bodies, resulting in tension and imbalance. A unique blend of gestalt, Alexander technique, and Feldenkrais exercises will be used as a gateway to contacting, expressing, and working through deep feelings. Massage staff will be on hand to assist the workshop.

We have the choice to contact ourselves and each other with joy, sadness, compassion, humor, ideas, and with the body — the whole person. $600

Creative Pattern and Experience

Coeleen Kiebert An in-depth exploration of the creative process. Participants will identify their own unique form of creative expression. Individual pattern and experience will evolve through color, paint, clay, and music. Art will become a vehicle of communication, both inward and outward. This workshop is for persons looking for new creations and creatives looking for new inspirations. $200

The Human Energy System and Gestalt Process

Alan Schwartz Read the December 27-January 1 description. This will be a weekend to explore and understand our individual energy systems and their relation to how we both make contact and inhibit contact. One focus will be on integration via energy release methods. Another will be on the simple task of being present, physiologically and emotionally, being aware that contact refers to our consistent awareness process and the autonomous expression of who we are. $200

Steve Beck

Humor and the Creative Process: The "Ha Ha" and the "Aha!"

Harry Sloan The dynamics of humor intimately parallel the creative process. Those humorous moments that extricate us from a stuck situation are similar to "aha," or creative insight, which spontaneously resolves a problem with which we have been wrestling. In both cases there is often an experience of freedom, joy, perspective, and connection with a deeper sense of self.

The purpose of this program is not necessarily to become a stand-up comic, but to use humor as a vehicle toward developing a playful view of life and ourselves. The format will blend experiential exercises with discussion of the nature of humor and the creative process. Some of the themes that we will be focusing on are: the imagination as a bridge between conflict and resolution, self-affirmation and our ability to create, humor and spontaneity, the archetype of the wise old fool, and methods to enhance the quality of humor in our daily life. This intensive program will be geared for those who are willing to be silly, play, risk, and penetrate into the restrictive elements in their process that tend to retard the "Ha Ha" or "Aha!" $200

Christina & Stanislav Grof

We will combine observations from modern consciousness research and from various traditional practices to explore the process of spiritual awakening. The participants will have the opportunity to confront transpersonal areas within themselves in various experiential exercises, combining evocative slide-shows, music, controlled breathing, mandala drawing, and individual work if appropriate. Special attention will be paid to the understanding of and approach to "spiritual emergencies" which can occur in the context of the kundalini process and other forms of personal evolution. $400

The Feeling Process
Janet Zuckerman Boeve & Fred Boeve
